Russo-Finnish Peace Treaty Signed; Harsh Terms Imposed Upon Defenders

Allied Efforts To Buy Planes Stir Controversy In Administration

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Allied negotiations for purchase of $1,000,000,000 worth of military aircraft were reported yesterday to have aroused a vigorous controversy within the Administration which may flare into the open in Congress.

The British and French purchasing mission, in their haste for speedy delivery of planes, it is said, want their purchases given the right of way over deliveries to the American Army and Navy.

Moreover, having obtained the Army and Navy's consent to the release of the 400-mile-an-hour Curtiss pursuit ship P-40, it is said, they want also released certain other types regarded as superior to the P-40.

Conference Scheduled Today

The whole controversy, it is expected, will be discussed behind closed doors this morning by the aviation subcommittee of the House Military Affairs Committee. Representative Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the group, has called the subcommittee together to inquire into release of the P-40, but the investigation may be extended to include the Allied negotiations.

Meanwhile, the White House announced that domestic aircraft manufacturers denied Allied orders had caused an increase in cost of planes acquired by the Army and Navy, or that delivery of planes for national defense was being delayed.

Stephen T. Early, White House press secretary, told reporters foreign sales had enabled manufacturers to perfect at least three new plane models in as many sizes and had permitted them to expand and improve production facilities to such an extent that they should be able to "move forward the delivery dates on domestic military orders."

Army Balks at Release

The Army is said to be unwilling to release newer plane types, about seven in number, to the Allies. Reports were that pressure was being brought to bear on Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to secure the release.

Morgenthau is liaison officer for President Roosevelt, charged with coordinating Allied purchases with domestic military and commercial needs. He has insisted that deliveries to supply domestic needs shall come first.

The question of plane prices has been a matter of controversy. Morgenthau has insisted that manufacturers had not hiked prices unduly, and were not profiteering. Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Army Air Corps chief, is said to have told the House Military Affairs Committee recently that the high scale of prices exacted by manufacturers from the Allies was influencing domestic prices and requiring this Government to pay more for planes.

The Curtiss P-40 was released by a joint Army and Navy aeronautical board because the board felt that new pursuit planes, for which arrangements have been made, were much superior.

Early read figures obtained from the Treasury showing a marked expansion in production facilities by the Nation's three producers of aircraft engines of 1,000 horsepower and over.

Wind and Hailstorm Kill 13, Level Texas, Louisiana Homes

4 Die When 3 Adjacent Houses Are Blown Down; 500 Buildings Damaged in Shreveport Area

By the Associated Press

Shreveport, La., March 12.—Ten persons were killed, 24 injured and hundreds left homeless here tonight in the wake of tornadic winds which cut a path of destruction across the city shortly after 4:30 p. m. today.

Damage to the Libby-Owens-Ford plant was estimated by company officials at $200,000; at the State fair grounds at $100,000 and elsewhere in the city at hundreds of thousands more.

Four persons were killed in three adjacent houses leveled by the wind.

They were identified as John M. Bauguss, about 35, Mrs. John M. Bauguss; Mrs. Hettie Armstrong, 45, and E. G. Woodyard, 62.

Another victim was T. K. Giddens, wealthy property owner.

Two Centenary College students were reported injured, neither of them seriously. At least 500 houses were damaged.

Thirty National Guardsmen were called into the area and 100 legionnaires and CCC camp youths were sent into the section where damage was greatest.

Near Barksdale Army Air Field Sergt. Hubert Helms, his wife and baby escaped from their house just as it crashed.

Several buildings at Centenary College were severly damaged. The college football stadium was partially blown away and the Kappa Sigma fraternity house was blown away. The Lamba Chi Alpha house was twisted on its base.

Marshall, Tex., March 12 (AP).—One woman was known dead and two colored men were reported killed by a tornado which struck near the Louisiana-Texas line late today.

The storm hit at 4:45 p. m. (Central standard time).

Helsinki Hears Mannerheim Has Assented To Demands

By Edward W. Beattie
United Press Staff Writer.

Helsinki (Wednesday), March 13, 6:25 a. m. (11:35 p. m. E. S. T., by telephone to New York).—Parliament is expected to approve the treaty of peace with the Soviet Union today. It was believed Marshal Mannerheim had given his reluctant approval of the terms.

There has yet been no official announcement of peace in Finland. Finnish citizens, huddled about radio sets in hotels, public rooms and their homes, heard the news despondently from foreign radio stations.

Ratification Expected

The man in the trenches has heard the news, too, and he does not like it. Those who have fought bravely against overwhelming odds are willing to go on fighting.

There was very little question but that Parliament, which has been in continuous session since the Finnish delegation left for Moscow a week ago, would ratify the peace, bitter though it is.

The Diet (Parliament) was reported scheduled to meet at noon, Helsinki time (5 a. m. E. S. T.) to consider the Russian terms.

It was believed that the military command had been kept posted on the progress of negotiations and indicated its consent to the peace after receiving word from the Moscow mission that it was the best which could be expected.

An obvious disappointment to Mannerheim, proud leader of a valiant army which yet does not believe it has been beaten, the peace nevertheless appears to have been agreed to with the consent of the army.

Finns Bitter

Finns who listened to the foreign radio announcements were depressed without exception. They expressed bitterness against the Allies, the United States, and particularly against Sweden who, Finns said, could have come into the war at the start and assured effective resistance without bringing Germany into the war.

There were many Finns who felt that even a general war on Finnish soil—a probability in the event of Allied intervention—was preferable to the peace now reached.

Despite their despondency, and it is very deep, it appears that the average Finn will be able to take this latest blow in stride—apparently in a spirit of "we have undergone such things before"—and attempt to rebuild the country on a new basis.

"A peace like that," one Finn said darkly, "is not exactly permanent. It may be that something will be said about it in a few weeks."

The general impression, however, was that no matter how bitter they are, Finns will follow the advice of newspaper editorials to "hold our heads high because of our good fight." Discipline will be the gen-

Russia Will Receive Karelia, All of Lake Ladoga, Lease On Hanko Base for 30 Years, Free Port at Petsamo

By Witt Hancock
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Wednesday), March 13.—Russia early today announced officially the signing of a peace treaty with Finland which wrests as the spoils of three and a half months of invasion Finland's defense bastions on Baltic and Arctic seas and the whole fortified Karelian Isthmus, where uncounted Russian and Finnish dead lie beneath the trampled snows.

The treaty must be ratified within three days, but hostilities were to cease, under its terms, at noon today (4 a. m. Eastern standard time).

Finland gets peace—a yearly rental of 8,000,000 Finnish marks (about $120,000) in return for a 30-year lease on her Hanko "Gibraltar" at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland and evacuation of the Petsamo Arctic district by Soviet troops.

What the Finns Yield Is Outlined

She gives up:

1. The entire Karelian Isthmus and its Soviet-penetrated Mannerheim Line.
2. The shell-wrecked city of Viipuri, once Finland's third metropolis, and the islands in its bay.
3. All the shores of Lake Ladoga, largest in Europe, and three towns. Both on the lake's western isthmus shore and on its northern coasts, thousands of Russian troops have been slain.
4. Hanko, naval base on the southwest, and the surrounding peninsula, on a 30-year lease. This area will form Soviet naval-military bases.
5. Part of the Sredni and Rybachi peninsulas in the far north, on the Arctic Ocean.
6. Certain islands in the Gulf of Finland.
7. A great slice of northeastern Finland, including Kuolajarvi, some 35 miles from the old frontier.
8. A railroad, to be built this year, which will link the White Sea within northern Russia to the Gulf of Bothnia, west of Finland, the railway bisecting Finland.
9. Free transit for Russian goods across the Petsamo Arctic area from Russia to Norway, duty free.
10. The right to maintain any Finnish warships, submarines or warplanes in its Arctic waters, with the exception of small coast guard vessels.

Ratifications to Be Exchanged in Moscow

An exchange of papers of ratification of the treaty is scheduled to take place in Moscow.

However, under the pact, on March 15 Finnish and Soviet troops were to begin to withdraw to their new frontiers, a map of which was appended to the treaty.

The treaty was described in the official Moscow communique as one which will "create mutually stable and mutually peaceful relations," based on precise conditions of "enduring mutual security"—especially for the Soviet cities of Leningrad, at one end of the Karelian Isthmus; Murmansk, in the Arctic, and the railroad which connects them.

(Actually, the terms gave Russia an uncontested clutch on the northern Baltic. Before she invaded Finland on November 30, Russia had peaceably got strategic concessions from Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania, but these are nothing as compared to the conditions for Finnish peace. The terms, likewise, are far harsher than the ones which Russia laid down before the Finnish invasion.

Germany Profits by the Treaty

(Germany profits by the treaty because she can now hope for real economic help from a Russia no longer engaged in war, and can, perhaps, extend her own influence in Scandinavia. Russia also is militarily free to look to her fences on her Balkan border.)

The Karelian Isthmus has been the greatest battleground of the war. Great masses of Soviet troops pierced the Mannerheim Line, after weeks of assault, but so far have not actually captured Viipuri.

Russia's original demands included only a comparatively small section of the isthmus.

On the Hanko Peninsula which, under the treaty, it takes by lease along with surrounding waters, Russia will establish a naval base "capable of defending the entrance of the Gulf of Finland from aggression."

Finnish troops will evacuate Hanko within ten days from the effective date of the treaty.

Besides promising to maintain no warships of any size, warplanes or submarines in Arctic waters, Finland also, under the treaty, will establish no military or naval bases of consequence on her Arctic coast.

Russia in turn will withdraw her invaders from the Petsamo

3d Term Slate Wins N.H. Test; Farley Next

Bridges Forces Lead In G.O.P. Balloting For Delegations

By the Associated Press

Manchester, N. H., March 12.—A full slate of New Hampshire Democrats pledged to a third term for President Roosevelt apparently was assured tonight as returns mounted in the Nation's first primary, but a hot local fight for seats at the Republican convention brought out a far heavier vote.

First returns from the cities, including approximately half of Manchester, where the vote was light, maintained the leads piled up by the third-term-for-Roosevelt adherents in the small towns and rural communities.

With tabulations complete from 160 of the State's 294 precincts for the eight places as Democratic delegates at large, the highest Roosevelt man had 4,911 votes and the eighth 2,588.

Two candidates pledged to Postmaster General Farley had 1,818 and 1,468.

Bridges Leading

Five of the State's Republican leaders — United States Senators Bridges and Tobey, former Senator George H. Moses, former Gov. Huntley Spaulding and Gov. Francis Murphy—were fighting it out in that order for four places as delegates-at-large to the G. O. P. convention. All five were unpledged.

After tabulation of 169 of the State's 294 precincts, Bridges with 15,543 was the top man in the Republican contest.

The only Republican pledged candidate, J. Howard Gile, a backer of Thomas E. Dewey, was running far behind.

Robert H. Sanderson, minority leader in the New Hampshire House last year and treasurer of the Democratic State committee trailed as an unpledged candidate for delegate-at-large. Personally popular and perhaps the widest known of the independent candidates, he had emerged from retirement to campaign against a third term.

D. C. Builders Enjoined From Pooling Bids

Union Chiefs, Firms Charged With Uniting To Boost Prices

The Department of Justice yesterday obtained a District Court order forbidding the Mason Contractor's Association, 6 Washington firms and 16 contractor and union officials from operating an alleged bidding pool as a means of restricting low bids on projects here.

The decree, obtained without opposition by the Justice Department's antitrust division, is the fourth step taken by the Federal Government since December to halt what it charges are restraints of trade and high-cost tactics in the building industry here.

Part of Nation-wide Drive

The judgment, granted by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, enjoins the defendants from operating any organization or engaging in any plan such as that known as a "bid depository," through which the elimination or restriction of bids is accomplished. The defendants also are prohibited from interfering or agreeing to interfere in any way with free and open competitive bidding on construction work in the District.

The injunction was part of a Nation-wide drive by the antitrust division to free the building industry of monopolistic conditions, which, according to Government prosecutors, have hampered construction operations.

Presented by Pine

The complaint was presented by District Attorney David A. Pine, Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, Antitrust Chief Thurman Arnold, Special Assistant Walter R. Hutchinson and Special Attorney Walton S. Allen.

Federal attorneys alleged that 80 per cent of the District mason contractors employing union workers joined in a combination which enforced its terms on the industry by threats of labor trouble. Five officers and members of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers Union,

Berlin (Wednesday), March 13.—Termination of the Russo-Finnish conflict is interpreted in official quarters of Berlin as a victory for German diplomacy the potential scope of which is yet undefined. The immediate result is to free the warring Third Reich from the imminent danger of a second front in her struggle with the Western Powers and to discredit Franco-British diplomacy.

For in addition to the Russo-Finnish war being unpopular with the German people who are sympathetic to the Finns and who recall it was German soldiers who secured Fin-

Pact a Blow, British Feel

Officials Silent But Disappointed At Finnish Peace

London (Wednesday), March 13. The signing of peace in any corner of Europe is usually the occasion for rejoicing in London, but there is no rejoicing here this morning over the headlines which announce the end of the Russo-Finnish war.

Official Britain is silent, obviously disappointed and the people are surprised, slightly bewildered.

As to the official British action when it comes there can be no doubt. When Russia asked Great Britain to give the Finns virtually the same peace terms that Finland finally accepted, Britain refused on the grounds that they were "outrageous" and "of such a nature as to leave Finland defenseless."

This peace, it is felt here, is almost certain to increase the Russo-German domination over Scandinavia and close Germany's northern flank to the Allies and have political repercussions detrimental to Great Britain and France in Russia and the Balkans whereto emphasis in the war is now likely to turn.

In the past 48 hours the Allies have shown that they were willing, one might almost say, eager to go to war against Russia in support

Woman Plunges to Death At Building on G Street

A 31-year-old research assistant at the Social Security Board last night plunged 100 feet to her death from her ninth-floor office in the building at 1712 G street northwest.

The woman, identified as Miss Flora Hinton, of 1919 G street northwest, was found in an adjoining alley by John Ruth, 1923 G street northwest.

In her office, Lieut. George Darnall of the Homicide Squad, found a chair underneath a high window fronting the alley. A glass ventilator partition had been torn off, apparently to make a wider opening. She had been seen alone in the office an hour before.

Attached to the woman's body was a note giving her name and occupation and the request that a brother, Henry Hinton, of Greenville, S. C., be notified.

The proprietress of her G street rooming house said Miss Hinton, a former Alabama school teacher, had lived there about ten days. She recently suffered several attacks of flu and a streptococcus infection, it was learned.

Two weeks ago, Miss Hinton was treated by Dr. Joseph Jeffries, 1800 G street northwest, for a deep gash on her forehead that required 15 stitchtes. She told the physician she suffered the injury in a traffic mishap. At this time Miss Hinton was residing at the All States Hotel.

Press Defiant as Ribbentrop Leaves Italy Empty Handed

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 12.—The day which has passed since Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, left has merely served to confirm that he went away empty handed so far as the Italians are concerned and worse than that on the Vatican side.

Italy has shaken his dust off quickly, so to speak, and there is no talk today but of "continuity of policy," as if he never came down. Aside from the benefits which are usually derived from personal contacts, there is no specific indication that the Axis has been strengthened.

There is one extraordinary indication to the contrary in fact, which is contained in the last sentence of Giovanni Ansaldo's editorial in this morning's Telegrafo. He says, "To him (Von Ribbentrop) who, while we write, is mounting the Alps 'which close Lamagna above Tiralli' we send our respectful salute."

The quotation is a line from Dante's Divine Comedy, that is often on Italian lips to signify that the Germanic hordes in the twentieth as in the fourteenth century should stay above the Brenner Pass. All Rome is buzzing with the allusion tonight, for it is as close to a defiance, if not an insult, as any

New Dealers Try to Settle Factional Tiffs

Draft-Roosevelt Force Aims Drive at Stopping Garner's Campaign

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Factional differences in third-term movements in two key States yesterday brought mediation efforts by inner circle New Dealers seeking a dominating bloc of Roosevelt-pledged delegates at the Democratic National convention.

In California today, Secretary of Interior Ickes, leading Administration draft-Roosevelt exponent, will attempt to patch up a rift between Gov. Olson and Former Senator McAdoo so both can agree on one strong Roosevelt slate.

In Wisconsin, two competing third-term tickets already were in the field, sponsored by opposing Democratic factions. Negotiations were reported in progress to persuade one to withdraw. Third-term exponents fear dual slates will split the Roosevelt vote and clear the field for Garner-pledged delegates.

President Is Kept Advised

As the draft movement drew its first blood in the New Hampshire primaries, the battle for Roosevelt delegates was being waged in earnest in more than half a dozen primary States, with the President reported well informed on the efforts in his behalf. Associated with the draft movement were men known to believe the President will not run, but who are determined to place the convention in his control.

Single-handed among Democratic candidates in openly opposing a third term, Vice President Garner alone will carry the issue to the voters in Wisconsin, California, Illinois, Nebraska and a few other primary States. Thus it is to stop Garner that draft-Roosevelt forces are concentrating.

Unsuccessful in efforts to persuade other candidates to pulicly join in the antithird-term movement, Garner forces met another set back in New York yesterday. The board of elections threw out petitions designating City Councilman Alfred E. Smith, jr., as a Garner-pledged delegate candidate.

Other Delegates Rejected

A day earlier the New York board rejected petitions for three other delegates pledged to the Texan. Tammany Hall has entered its own slate of delegates, nominally unpledged but informally committeed to Mr. Roosevelt.

The President yesterday heard third-term overtures from a Florida delegation headed by Senator Pepper and Gov. Fred P. Cone. Pepper later told reporters "there will be a liberal delegation from Florida. It will be for Mr. Roosevelt if he wants it, or for anyone else he might designate."

The battle of statements between Republican and Democratic National Committees resumed, as G. O. P. Committee Chairman Hamilton replied to Democratic Chairman Farley's announcement of plans to proceed with a 1940 Democratic convention handbook.

Evasion Is Charged

Hamilton accused Farley of "drawing a red herring across his smelly convention book" by attacking wealthy Republican contributors to the G. O. P. campaign fund. The row was precipitated Sunday when Hamilton said Republicans planned no convention book and invited Democrats not to publish one this year. Farley replied that Democrats would publish one "bigger than ever" and sell advertisements, which he declared preferable to Republican methods of assessing the rich.

Hamilton charged last night the Democratic committee is undertaking to "evade" Federal Corrupt Practice Act prohibitions against corporations contributing to national political committees through "the subterfuge of a convention book."

Hamilton charged the Democrats received $1,246,763 from sale of books and advertising space in their 1940 convention book, instead of the $175,000 Farley said was netted. He charged methods used to sell the book to corporations "smacked of blackmail." He declared the largest single individual contribution to either party in the 1936 campaign was $104,500 contributed to the Democrats by Walter A. Jones, Pittsburgh oil man. He listed 24 "small" contributions of between $10,000 and $50,000 he charged were made by Democratic contributors in the 1936 campaign.

G. O. P. Gives Own Money

Hamilton declared it could "at least be said" for large Republican contributors "that the money they gave was their own."

"It is not money of their stockholders spent in alleged payment for convention books," said the Hamilton statement. "Nor was it money maced out of unfortunate persons receiving meager allowances on relief rolls. Nor was it money wrung by assessments of a partisan labor organization out of miners trying to earn their living under the earth by the sweat of their brow."

Hamilton said the $470,000 United Mine Workers' contribution to the Democrats in 1936 came "out of dues and assessments paid by the members of that organization."

The California move by Ickes reputedly was designed to head off any plans by McAdoo to put a second slate of Roosevelt-pledged delegates in the field. Gov. Olson has been negotiating with members of California's Democratic Congressional delegations to enter their names as delegates on his third-term slate, but is said to have definitely signed up only three—Representatives Buck, Voorhis and Thomas Ford. Senator Downey, at odds with the Administration, has held strictly aloof from the third-term movement and is expected to oppose the Olson ticket.

In Wisconsin, which holds Presidential preference primaries in three weeks, President John Slocum, of the Garner-for-President Club, has entered a single slate of 24 delegate-candidates for the Texan, against the two slates entered for Roosevelt.

One Roosevelt slate of 24 is sponsored by Democratic National Committeeman Charles Broughton. Another slate of 24 has been filed in the name of an independent State Democratic conference. If both slates remain, Garner forces would profit by the split Roosevelt balloting.

The Gallup Poll

Survey Indicates Roosevelt's Chances For 3rd Term Unfavorable; Trend Upward

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 12.—One of the most persistent political questions before the public is whether Franklin D. Roosevelt will run for a third term and, if he does run, what his chances are of winning.

GALLUP

The American Institute of Public Opinion began measuring third-term sentiment the week after the 1936 election and since that time has conducted more than 87 complete Nation-wide surveys on the third term; approaching the subject from every possible point of view. An analysis of all these studies, including the most recent, indicates that even though Roosevelt is more popular as President today than he was in 1936, sentiment against a third term is so great that he would have a hard time being elected at the present time.

Third-Term Sentiment Less

While 64 per cent of voters polled by the institute approve of Roosevelt as President at this point in his second term, only 47 per cent are for a third term in a study completed this week. This compares with 46 per cent last month.

Translated in terms of the vote cast in 1936 (45,000,000), the Institute's studies show that whereas Roosevelt has the following and support as President today of approximately 28,500,000 voters, at least 7,500,000 of these voters say they would desert him at the present time on the basis of their feeling against a third term.

A Rising Trend

The qualification "at the present time" is important, for the studies indicate that events have a great impact on public sentiment, particularly in connection with the third term. Prior to the outbreak of war in Europe, sentiment for a third term averaged about 35 per cent, which meant the odds were overwhelmingly against the President's re-election.

Since the war, however, there has been a rising trend, today's vote of 47 per cent comparing with 40 per cent last August, and 33 per cent last May.

Since the war brought substantial changes, it is clear that one main key to sentiment favorable to a third term between now and summer will be the course of events in Europe. The other factor will be the candidate whom the Republicans nominate.

Europe Plays Role

Past studies indicate that of the two, events in Europe are likely to play the more important part in influencing opinion of the particular issue. A military offensive which arouses the public's emotion and fear, and focuses attention on foreign policy will undoubtedly increase Roosevelt's third term chances, particularly since his foreign policy has been found widely popular. On the other hand, if public attention is fixed largely on domestic issues, third term sentiment may revert to what it was before the foreign crisis began.

Senate Pushes Toward Vote On Hatch Bill

Passage of Extension Measure This Week Is Anticipated

Post Staff Writer

As still another weakening amendment went down to defeat, the Senate yesterday progressed slowly toward possible passage this week of the Hatch bill to forbid political activity to District and State employes paid with Federal funds.

Furious attacks on President Roosevelt's alleged interference in the Senatorial elections of 1938 enlivened debate; but it appeared that the Democratic opposition did not intend to continue last week's filibuster against the bill.

Predicting that a final vote on his highly-controversial measure might come tomorrow, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, said he thought "definite progress" was made in yesterday's debate. Other leaders on both sides of the week-long struggle also expressed the opinion that speechmaking might soon conclude.

Anti-lynch Threat Fades

None seemed to take seriously a threat that the anti-lynching bill might be tacked onto the Hatch measure as a rider to ensure an endless flow of oratory to block the bill. Nevertheless, Majority Leader Barkley was unable to obtain unanimous consent to limit debate.

The one amendment voted on yesterday proposed by Senator Johnson (Democrat), of California, was defeated, 47 to 34, one of the largest pro-Hatch margins yet rolled up. The amendment would have restricted operation of the pending bill to those States that have similar legislation of their own. Senator Johnson has said that there are no such States.

Emphatic denunciation of the New Deal's "purge" of 1938 was touched off by South Carolina's Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, intended "purgee" and opponent of the Hatch bill. The attack was continued by a friend of the measure, Senator Tyding (Democrat), of Maryland, as well as by Senator Johnson.

Pointing out some provisions of the Hatch bill exempt the President and his Cabinet, Senator Smith asked "what's the use for us to curtail the political activities of the little fellow and leave out the greatest office we are capable of giving?"

Hatch challenged opponents of his bill to offer amendments strengthening it, instead of "seeking to destroy it."

Senator Tydings suggested that "when high-sounding messages come from high authority, it would be a good idea to back them up with some sincerity."

Apparently referring to President Roosevelt's espousal of the Hatch bill, Tydings said that "some who are so pious and up on a high pedestal had better look to their own actions before telling others how to conduct an election contest."

Senator Johnson claimed "the honor of being the first victim of a purge conducted by this Administration"—in 1934, when he defeated for the gubernatorial nomination Josephine Roche, later Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Senate Committee Approves Tobey's Move To Take Income Questions Off Census Form

By the Associated Press

The campaign to prevent census-takers from asking citizens about their incomes gained ground yesterday when the Senate Commerce Committee approved a resolution by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, urging that the queries be dropped.

Whether this would be done remained in doubt, however. Leaders did not decide at once when the Senate might consider the Tobey resolution. Edward J. Noble, Undersecretary of Commerce, indicated that the Census Bureau had no intention of abandoning the inquiries unless the Senate acted.

Saying that it was up to the Senate now, Noble added:

Census Begins April 1

"We believed when we put these questions in the census—and still believe—that they are proper, within our legal powers, and would be of inestimable value to any one sincerely interested in solving unemployment."

The census is scheduled to begin April 1, and action on the resolution after that date would have no effect.

Tobey hailed the Commerce Committee's 9-to-7 vote for his proposition as "a victory for the people."

Recalling that President Roosevelt had recently called the resolution "obviously political," the New Hampshire Republican said:

"While my resolution was still pending in the committee the Executive sought to inject his opposition to favorable action, and this was poor taste."

Charges Authority Exceeded

The committee's vote, Tobey added, "upholds my contention that the Department of Commerce went beyond the authority granted by Congress and inserted these questions without legislative authority."

The House Census Committee meanwhile approved a Congressional reapportionment bill which would exclude the counting of alien residents in the determination of the number of House members from each State.

The reapportionment measure, providing for an automatic reshuffling of Representatives in 1942, was approved, 10 to 5.

Opponents were said to have argued chiefly, at the closed committee session, against the automatic feature which would require no further action by Congress before the new apportionment is determined on the basis of the 1940 census of population.

Chairman Dunn (Democrat), of Pennsyvania, interpreted the majority vote of the commmittee as meaning that the group thought there would be less of a fight on an automatic measure, passed in advance of the census, than on reapportionment legislation brought up after the population count is completed, when States will know if they are to lose seats.

Wire-Tapping Inquiry Urged By Senators

Wheeler Mentions FBI as a Subject In Investigation

By the Associated Press

Warning against a "recent resurgence of a spy system conducted by Government police," the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce asked the Senate yesterday for authority to investigate wire-tapping by public or private agencies.

Wire-tapping and eavesdropping by means of voice-recording devices "are especially dangerous at the present time," the committee reported, because of the revival of the spy system.

"Persons who have committed no crime, but whose economic and political views and activities may be obnoxious to the present incumbents of law enforcement offices, are being investigated and catalogued," it advised the Senate.

Wheeler Mentions FBI

Although the committee did not refer specifically to any police agency in its report, it included an indirect reference to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, told reporters in response to a question that the committee had the FBI—among others—in mind when it said that "the most fundamental civil rights" had been violated in several instances by law enforcement agencies within the last six months.

In particular, Wheeler said, the committee had reference to actions of the FBI in arresting a number of persons in Detroit during an investigation of recruiting for the loyalist army in Spain.

The committee report mentioned a protest made by Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, to Attorney General Jackson against the FBI's methods in this case.

Study of Rights

The proposed inquiry, the committee said, would be useful to ascertain "in the words of Senator Norris . . . 'whether the legitimate rights and liberties of any of our people have been frustrated and denied,' and will be useful to prevent activities whether by public or private spy systems which 'are going to bring into disrepute the methods of our entire system of jurisprudence.'"

Senator Green (Democrat), Rhode Island, author of the investigation proposal, expressed the opinion that the committee report gave "added weight to the arguments for an investigation."

He proposed the inquiry, he said, primarily because of a belief that private tapping of the wires of public officials was increasing. But he was anxious also, he added, that any investigation include the activities of public agencies.

Green Not Eligible

Green expressed the hope that, if the inquiry was voted by the Senate, it would be headed by someone practiced in dealing with "reluctant witnesses." Green is not a member of the Interstate Commerce Committee and would not, therefore, be eligible to conduct the investigation.

Senator Wheeler said there was a possibility that he might undertake it if the inquiry materialized but that other business would probably prevent his doing so.

Meanwhile, Senator Norris said that so far as the Detroit arrests were concerned he would prefer that they be investigated by the Department of Justice.

Fears Partisanship

"We're too close to a Presidential election to expect a fair investigation by Congress," the Nebraskan declared. "A Congressional investigation would become a basket in which many people will try to get some partisan advantage."

Green's resolution would provide only for investigation of the use of wire tapping and sound recording devices and presumably would not extend to the "third degree" methods which Norris charged to the F. B. I.

District Committee Meeting Deferred

A meeting of the Senate District Committee to consider the Tydings fair trade practices bill scheduled for today was postponed yesterday due to the illness of Chairman King (Democrat), of Utah.

Senator King, who is opposed to the bill, told Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, that the committee will meet next Monday.

Senator King, ill several days with influenza, said last night he expected to be able to go to his office for a short time today.

Yugoslav Ballet Star Praises Capital Because It's Like Paris

Mia Slavenska, Yugoslavian star of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, was thrilled by her tour of Washington yesterday. It reminded her of Paris. Said Mia, "You wake up in the morning and say, 'Ach. I am in Paris.'"

Mia Slavenska Considers French City 'Wonderful' and Finds a Reminder Here In the Sweep of Mall Toward Capitol

Mia Slavenska, Yugoslavian star of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, smiled beneath her bright red hat yesterday afternoon and remarked that "Washington reminds me of Paris."

This was high praise on the ballerina's first visit, for she went on, "Paris is wonderful. You wake up in the morning and say 'Ah! I am in Paris!'" And she tossed her head so the antique earrings danced above her shoulders.

Paris is her second home, because of its "atmosphere," and Washington has the same atmosphere. There is something about the long sweep of park from the Lincoln Memorial to the Capitol that does it.

Her first home is Zagreb, Yugoslavia's second city, and maybe next year, if the war is over, she will go back. For many years she was premiere ballerina of the Zagreb Opera House, and there she was given by her native country the official title and style of "star."

By right of honor duly conferred, Miss Slavenska bears the title, "Etoile des Theatres Nationaux de Yugoslavia," (Star of the Yugoslavian National Theaters).

From the Willard Hotel, where she paused after a whirlwind tour of the city, Miss Slavenska hurried to the Yugoslavian legation, where a reception was to be given to her after the evening performance. Last night she danced in "Sylphides," and tonight will dance in "Carnival."

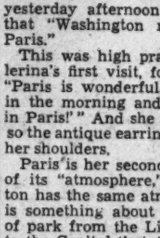
Her first hopes of appearing in Washington, when she toured America last year, were wrecked when she hurt her ankle in Montreal. But she is known here through the film "Ballerina," in which she starred.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra presents and cooperates with Les Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: 'Les Sylphides' (music by Chopin), "Rouge et Noir" (music by Shostakovich), "La Gaiete Parisienne" (music by Offenbach). Conductor: Efrem Kurtz.

Returning for another cooperative engagement with the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall, Les Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo faced last evening a large and enthusiastic audience, which must also be called a spectience, since the eyes were even more active than the ears in enjoyment of the performance. Leonid Miassin's expert troupe of dancers has by this time become thoroughly established in the esteem of Washingtonians, and the annual visit is long anticipated and too soon concluded. No small part of the satisfaction derived from the performances is based on the participation of our own orchestra without which the larger ballets would lose some of their impact.



Ray C. Brown

That is the case with the novelty offered on this occasion, "Rouge et Noir," danced to the music of Dmitri Shostakovich's first symphony. Labor as they might, a less number of musicians than compose a symphony orchestra could not do justice to the score, and it is with the full score that the choreography is identified. Thanks to the National Symphony, already versed in the music, the ballet lost no whit of its effectiveness and could be carefully assayed for its artistic values.

Next to the "Symphonie Fantastique" of Berlioz, "Rouge et Noir" is Miassin's most successful attempt to translate a major symphonic work into terms of visual motion and pantomime. As one read in the printed program the symbolical plot, with its references to the Poetic Spirit, Man, Woman and Destiny, one feared that it would not come off as the choregrapher had intended. But the performance put that fear to rout. As long as one did not press the analogies too far and used the symbolism merely as a guiding thread through the evolutions of the ballet, there were very few passages in the symphony questionable as to their appropriate application.

In the first place, Miassin has caught and neatly used the impudence which is one characteristic of the music. The sauciness of the costuming in maillots of red, black, yellow and white (colors in themselves symbolic of the spiritual elements involved) and a continual irruption of a mocking humor emphasized the composer's attitude as an enfant terrible. The music, to be sure, has its moments of serious intent, but that seriousness always leaves one in doubt as to its sincerity.

This quasi-profundity has been put to good use. The opening of the third movement, for example, has a genuinely touching effect of loneliness and terror of the unknown, when Woman is assailed by the Spirit of Evil. There are other passages wherein the suggestions of foreboding and despair in the music are utilized with skill. But the ballet as a whole is pervaded by a satiric undercurrent which matches the implications of the symphony. The costumes were singularly adjutant to the potentialities of the human body in the expression of emotions.

The first ballet of the evening was the familiar "Les Sylphides," always welcome as a spectacle of poetic grace and beauty. Seven compositions by Chopin are the traditional base for this dreamy vision, and by this time the orchestration had undergone the manipulations of Glazunov, Taneev and Stravinski. But were a dozen craftsmen to add their labors, something of Chopin's pianistic magic would still be missing.

"La Gaite Parisienne" brought forward Leonid Miassin and Alexandra Danilova to whom the waiting spectators gave an ovation. This rollicking evocation of a vanished epoch, danced to the effervescent music of Offenbach, was given by the company last season, and its repetition met with general approval.

Pianist Robbed Of Mink Coat Worth $3,000

Miss Eugenia Buxton Was Giving Program At Howard Chapel

Miss Eugenia Burton, concert pianist, last night was robbed of a mink coat valued at $3,000 while she was performing at a concert in Howard University Chapel.

Miss Buxton, who gave her local address the Mayflower Hotel, said the coat disappeared from a cloak room between 8:30 and 10 p. m. She played at one of a series of concerts being conducted at the university.

Two Bandits Hunted

Meanwhile Baltimore detectives were in Washington in pursuit of two bandits in connection with the holdup-shooting of a newspaperman in a Baltimore tavern Monday night.

A third bandit, who was captured after the robbery, informed police his companions were Washingtonians. The Maryland detectives came to the District at 2 a. m. and began a search of beer halls and pool rooms.

Robert B. Murray, 47-year-old copy editor on the Baltimore Sun, was shot in the chest by one of the holdup men when he attempted to prevent a robbery. A man who identified himself as James C. Smith, 22, of the 100 block E street northwest, was arrested near the tavern after the shooting.

Working with the Baltimore authorities, robbery squad police rounded up 22 suspects and were holding them for a line-up. Some were questioned in connection with the robbery early yesterday of Elbert G. Van Horn, a cab driver, of 738 Otis street northwest.

Gagged and Robbed

Hailed by two colored men at Connecticut avenue and McKinley street northwest, Van Horn was told to drive to the 700 block Euclid street northwest. The men attacked, bound and gagged him and drove to Fifty-third and East Capitol streets, where they robbed him of $3 and threw him from the cab.

His taxicab was found at Forty-third street and Sheriff road northeast.

Miss Nona Huddleston, Veterans Administration employe, of 1344 Otis place northwest, last night was robbed of $15 by a youth who snatched her purse at Fourteenth and Oak streets northwest.

Police Increase Urged

Dr. James A. Nolan, director of the Criminal Justice Association, in two addresses yesterday urged enlargement of the Metropolitan police force by at least 100 patrolmen.

Speaking to the North Seventh Street Businessmen's Association, at Immaculate Conception School, 711 N street northwest, and earlier to Georgetown Law Alumni Club at the National Press Club, Dr. Nolan declared the increase vital because of the expanding District population and resultant crime and traffic problems.

Dr. Nolan said the population has increased by 170,000 in the last ten years while only 82 policemen have been added.

Dr. Nolan commended the department for efficient work in spite of being undermanned.

Mrs. Obermeyer Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Rosina Obermeyer, a Washington resident for more than 60 years, will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at her residence, 726 Fourth street northeast. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Obermeyer died Monday at her home after a year's illness. A native of Germany, she came to Washington in 1878. For 20 years she served as matron of the German Orphan Home on Good Hope Road. Her husband, the late Karl Obermeyer, was superintendent of the home.

She is survived by two daughters, Miss Herminie K. Obermeyer, of Washington, and Mrs. Marie Burdine, of Miami, Fla.; a son, Herman F. Obermeyer, and a sister, Katherine Naegele, both of this city.

Wilbert Woodson Elected

Wilbert T. Woodson, superintendent of Fairfax County schools, was elected president of the Fairfax Rotary Club at its annual meeting Monday. Other officers elected were Paul C. Kincheloe, vice president; James Stone, secretary, and Hugh Marsh, treasurer.

Militia to Halt Completion Of U. S. Dam

Okla. Governor to Issue Martial Law Decree At $20,000,000 Project

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma City, March 12.—Gov. Leon G. Phillips said he would declare martial law tomorrow at the $20,000 Grand River Dam in northeastern Oklahoma and send troops to prevent its final completion.

Phillips decided he had reached a stalemate with the Public Works Administration, with whom he has been pressing a demand of the State highway department for $850,000.

The sum represents the State's claim for damages the vast lake would do to roads and bridges in the four counties it would invade.

The National Guardsmen will establish their rule only over the arch where the last bit of concrete would be poured to enable closing the gates and impounding water.

Phillips said he had heard from private sources that final work on the arch was under way.

The red-headed Governor said he did not know how many Guardsmen would be dispatched, nor what time they would move in.

The Governor's announcement followed a telephone conversation with Ray McNaughton, chairman of the board of directors of the Grand River Dam Authority.

He said McNaughton told him he was unable to obtain satisfactory assurance from Washington that the money would be put up for the benefit of Oklahoma if the State won its claim.

The controversy over completion of the mile-long dam, which would impound 52,000 acres of water to operate as a hydro-electric project, came to a swift climax this week after months of negotiations.

Few Oklahomans would be surprised if Phillips should take similar action at the $50,000,000 Denison flood control-hydro-electric project on Red River, if it became necessary to enforce his claims for damage to State property.

By the United Press

Acting Public Works Administrator E. W. Clark said last night the $20,000,000 hydro-electric dam on the Grand River, near Vinita, Okla., is being constructed under authority of the State legislature, not the Federal Government, and if Gov. Phillips wants to start a "civil war" in his State "it is just too bad."

Advised that Phillips had ordered out the National Guard to block construction, Clark said:

"Doesn't the governor know that the project is being built under authority of the State legislature with only a loan and grant by the Federal Government?

The Federal Diary:

'Domicile' Ruling Creates Another Enigma For 'Outlanders' in Matter of Divorce

By Edward Ryan.

Divorce and the District's income tax may become parts of one problem for Government employes here under the Court of Appeals' "domicile" opinion, attorneys said yesterday.

In ruling that James J. Sweeney, Justice Department attorney, was "domiciled" in Massachusetts while living here, observers said the court had thrown open legal questions about divorces, inheritance taxes, and estate taxes for Washington "outlanders."

The Government worker who convinces the District that he is living elsewhere and ineligible for local tax collections might have to go home, or to his "domicile" for a divorce, it was pointed out. A short cut through the legal background of this, attorneys said, would show that a man's marital status dwells where he does, and the court with jurisdiction over his "domicile" would be the one to handle the divorce.

It was suggested, too, that the estate of a Government employe who lived and died in the District, but remained "domiciled" outside, might be freed of District taxes on intangible property. Here again the intangible property and its owner have the same "domicile."

How far the court's decision benefited Government employes remained in the realm of guesswork for District officials and statisticians. The District had counted on getting about $1,000,000 from the income tax on individuals, with the heaviest proportion coming from those outside the Government.

Out of 127,000 or more Federal workers in Washington offices, about one-third were in the clear anyway, as residents of Virginia and Maryland, according to Civil Service Commission estimates. At least another third would have escaped under the exemptions for single persons receiving less than $1,000 and married persons receiving less than $2,500.

Out of the remaining third the District would have drawn its list of Government employes eligible for income tax payments. Probably more than half retain a fighting chance of escaping payment by proving residence in another State, it was estimated.

In the collapse of the income tax and Congressional moves toward a sales tax program, employe leaders saw a new beginning of an old fight. An income tax program has been supported by the United Federal Workers against the sales tax, which they hold would hit those least able to pay.

James R. Dodson, veteran Labor Department employe, has been appointed chief of Wage-Hour's fiscal control division, it was announced yesterday. His appointment was said to be one of a series of moves to bring Wage-Hour and Labor Department policies into closer harmony. Son of the late Charles E. Dodson, one-time chief of linotype machinists in the Government Printing Office, and a grandson of James P. Dodson, who worked many years in State, War and Navy, he started in the department as a $600-a-year clerk.

Ace Government weather prophets might be disturbed by this, but some of the men in their own accounting section have been showing scant respect for the bureau's .850 batting average in predictions.

The report is that some of the mathematicians have figured out the odds against the predictions and, especially in the colder months, have taken to betting against the forecaster as an easy way to pick up lunch money.

They play it cagey, though, and lay their bets on the predicted low temperatures, where Washington's mad weather gives them a sporting chance. The ones who bet against the bureau haven't figured their own batting average.

with the towns of Kexholm (Kakisalme) Sortavala and Suajarvi, a number of islands in the Gulf of Finland, territory east of Marajarvi with the town of Kuolajarvi (on the Salla front), part of the peninsulas of Rybachi and Srendi in accordance with the map appended to this treaty.

"A more detailed description of the frontier line will be determined by a mixed commission of representatives of the contracting parties, which commission must be formed within 10 days from the date of the signing of this treaty.

"Article 3. Both contracting parties undertake mutually to refrain from any attack upon each other, not to conclude any alliances and not to participate in any coalitions against one of the contracting parties.

Troops to Leave in Ten Days

"Article 4. The Republic of Finland expresses consent to lease to the Soviet Union for 30 years with an annual payment by the Soviet Union of 8,000,000 Finnish marks the Peninsula of Hanko and the waters surrounding it in a radius of 5 miles to the south and east and 3 miles to the west and north of the peninsula, and a number of islands adjoining it in accordance with the appended map, for the purpose of creating there a naval base capable of defending the entrance to the Gulf of Finland against aggression; for the purpose of protecting the naval base the Soviet Union is granted the right to maintain there at its own expense land and air armed forces of necessary strength.

"Within ten days from the date when this treaty becomes effective, the government of Finland shall withdraw all its troops from the Peninsula of Hanko, and the Peninsula of Hanko, together with adjoining islands, shall pass under the administration of the U. S. S. R., in accordance with this article of the treaty.

"Artivle 5. The U. S. S. R. undertakes to withdraw its troops from the Petsamo region, voluntarily ceded to Finland by the Soviet state in accordance with the peace treaty of 1920. Finland undertakes, as provided by the peace treaty of 1920, to refrain from maintaining in waters along her coast of the Arctic Ocean naval or other armed ships excepting armed ships of less than 100 tons displacement, which Finland has a right to maintain without restrictions; also not more than 15 naval and other armed ships with a tonnage of not more than 400 tons each.

"Finland undertakes, as was provided by this same treaty, not to maintain in said waters any submarines and armed aircraft. Finland similarly undertakes, as was provided by the same treaty, not to establish on that coast military ports, naval bases and naval repair shops of a greater capacity than necessary for the above mentioned ships and their armaments.

Petsamo Transit Is Granted

"Article 6. As provided by the treaty of 1920, the Soviet Union and its citizens are granted the right of free transit across the Petsamo region and back. The Soviet Union is granted the right to institute a consulate in the Petsamo region. Freights in transit across the Petsamo region from the U. S. S. R. to Norway, as likewise freights in transit across the same region from Norway to the U. S. S. R., are exempted from inspection and control, excepting only such control as is necessary for regulation of transit communications.

"Said freights also are exempted from payment of customs duties, transit and other duties. The above-mentioned control of transit freights is permitted only in the form observed in similar cases in accordance with established usages in international communications.

"Citizens of the U. S. S. R., traveling across the Petsamo region to Norway and back from Norway to the U. S. S. R., have the right of free transit passage on the basis of passports issued by the Soviet organs concerned.

Air Routes Planned

"Soviet nonarmed aircraft shall have the right to maintain air service between the U. S. S. R. and Norway across the Petsamo region with observance of general operating rules.

"Article 7—The government of Finland shall grant the Soviet Union the right of transit of goods between the U. S. S. R. and Sweden, and with the aim of developing this transit along the shortest railroad route, the U. S. S. R. and Finland find it necessary to build, if possible in the course of the year 1940, each party on its territory, a railway line connecting the town of Kandalaska with the town of Kemijarvi.

"Article 8. When this treaty comes into force, economic relations between the contracting parties will be restored and with this end in view the contracting parties will enter negotiations for conclusion of a trade treaty.

"Article 9. The present peace treaty comes into force immediately upon being signed and is subject to subsequent ratification. The exchange of ratification instruments shall take place within 10 days in Moscow. The present treaty is made in three originals, in the Russian, Finnish and Swedish languages, in Moscow the twelfth of March, 1940.

"Signed: Molotoff, Zhdanoff, Vasseleffsky, Risto Ryti, Paasikivi, Walden, Vaino Voionmaa."

Text of Protocol

By the United Press

London (Wednesday), March 13. Following is the text of the protocol appended to the Russian-Finnish peace treaty, as reported by the Moscow radio announcer:

"Both sides agree to the following order of withdrawal of their troops to new state frontiers:

"1. Military operations to cease at noon March 13, Leningrad time.

"2. On the first day a neutral zone one kilometer (about six-tenths of a mile) wide has to be set between the troops of both countries. Troops occupying foreign territory, as set by the new state frontier, have to move first.

"3. Withdrawal of troops behind the new state frontier of the whole of Finland south of Liekse must begin on March 15 at 10 a. m. along the whole line and on March 16 at 10 a. m. north of Liekse. The withdrawal should be not less than seven kilometers (about 4.3 miles) and a distance of seven kilometers must be kept during the withdrawal between the rear of troops withdrawing and the advance guard of advancing troops.

Point 4 Is Garbled

(Point 4 of the protocol was apparently garbled but may be summarized as follows: Withdrawal of troops must be accomplished according to an order which divides the whole front into six sectors. The withdrawal has to be completed between March 19 and March 26.)

"5. Evacuation of the Red army from Petsamo must be concluded April 10.

"6. The high commands of both armies undertake that defensive fortifications, power stations, industrial buildings, telephone exchanges, telegraph stations and communal buildings should be preserved and guarded against possible destruction.

"7. All questions of handing over territories which may arise during the withdrawal must be settled by representatives of both sides on the spot, wherefore both high commands will appoint special representatives.

"8. Exchange of prisoners should take place in the shortest possible time on the basis of special agreement."

district.

The treaty stipulation for a railroad connecting Kemijarvi with Kandalaska, on an arm of the Gulf of Finland, gives Russia the overland route to the Gulf of Bothnia which her troops tried vainly to force above Finland's "wasp waist." Russia also gets a large section of Finland east of Markajarvi, in this region.

Kemijarvi is the eastern terminus of the Finnish railway which runs to the gulf; the Soviet troops never were able to capture it. Kaidalaska is on the Russian Murmansk-Leningrad railway, which the Finns at one time claimed they had cut.

The treaty, an official communique said, was signed at 2:30 a. m. today (6:30 p. m., Tuesday E. S. T.) (before that, however, its general terms were announced by the D. N. B., German news agency).

Mystery Cloaks Fate of Finnish Red Government

One of the minor mysteries of the announcement of Russian-Finnish peace—aside from the mystery of why the Helsinki government had not heard from its Moscow negotiators—was the fate of the "Finnish People's Government."

This Communist regime, headed by a former Finnish Communist, one Otto Kuusinen, was established by the Russians at Tarijoki, near the Karelian Isthmus border, on the third day of the war. It promptly "granted" the Russian demands, and signed an "alliance" with the U. S. S. R. to combat the "Mannerheim White Bandits." Within a few days, it was established that the Kuusinen regime had never left Moscow.

Subsequently, the Kremlin announced it could not accept mediation offers because it did not recognize the existence of the Helsinki government, and that the "alliance" with the Red puppet regime proved it was "not at war" with the Finnish people.

Win or Lose, Soviet Army Has Lost Face

Invasion of Finland Has Shown World Grave Weaknesses

By Lloyd A. Lehrbas.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Win, lose or draw, the fighting Finns (at terrific cost to themselves) have debunked the myths that had grown up around the Red army.

The Finns' gallant defense of their territory against overwhelming odds has provided the rest of the world with a revised picture of the Soviet Union's power.

After the way the little Finnish army outfought the overstuffed Red army for three and a half months—Hjalmar Procope, the Finnish minister at Washington, estimates the odds at 50 to 1—Europe's jittery statesmen need no longer have nightmares in which they dream of 180,000,000 Russian "comrades" conquering and bolsheyizing the earth by force of arms.

That is not to say that the red army hasn't fought, or can't fight. The Finns have been the first to admit that Russian soldiers have fought bravely and well, storming strongly defended positions across the Karelian Isthmus in seemingly endless numbers even when they must have realized they were charging into the face of death.

Weaknesses Shown Up

The manner in which Russia has conducted its invasion, however, has shown up many weaknesses in the internal political, military and economic structure of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The Russian high command was inadequate to the task before it, overestimating the Red Army's power, underestimating the Finns' fighting quantities, and lacking the ability to organize an offensive that should have been able (considering resources) to conquer Finland in days instead of months.

The Red army's officers are inferior to the officers in other powers' armies; they still need years of seasoning in strategy, tactics and intelligent leadership, and were apparently greatly handicapped by the interference of political commissars.

Transportation Bad

The Soviet air armada, long reputed to be the world's greatest, failed to live up to advance expectations and—despite daily bombings of Finnish towns and cities—did not succeed in demoralizing the Finnish army or populace.

Russia's transportation system is still woefully inadequate, seriously handicapping the distribution of troops and supplies.

What happened in Finland is of special interest to the Allies and Germany, and must have given new heart to the jittery Balkans.

Germany through the years has dreamed of extending the German empire to the East and—until signing of the surprise German-Russian alliance—Hitler had made several threatening gestures in the direction of the Soviets.

Allies Reassured

The Soviets' military power, as shown up by the Finns, may now become a potent factor in future relations between Germany and Russia, to Germany's advantage.

If the Allies' rating of the Russians is as low as appears it will greatly strengthen the Anglo-French position in the Balkans and Near East.

After what has happened along the Mannerheim Line the Allies do not think the Russians will take any chances of becoming involved in another campaign in southeastern Europe or the Near East.

If and when the Russians are able to withdraw troops from the Finnish front they may strengthen their forces along the Rumanian and Turkish borders, but bets are they will take up purely defensive positions.

Carol's View Changed

When the Soviets first moved troops along Rumania's border, threatening occupation of the long-disputed Bessarabian provinces, the Rumanians were prepared to hand over that territory at Comrade Stalin's first growl.

After the Finns had stood up for weeks to the best (and worst) the Russians had, King Carol revised his estimate of the Soviet threat and, in a speech on Bessarabian soil defied any aggressor, speeded up fortifications construction, and mobilized over 1,000,000 men to defend "every inch of Rumania."

The Turks, too, revised their estimate of the Soviet's strength and began "talking back" cockily. Turkish troops are now massed along the Caucasus border, prepared to join forces with the Anglo-French armies which have sprung up in the Near East, if the Russians make a move.

All things considered, military observers believe Stalin will leave well enough alone after what he ran into in Finland, and will join the "sitzkrieg" favored elsewhere in Europe.

Allies Rally Many Races To Guard East

Senegalese and Sikhs Mingle With Poilus, Tommies, Australians

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, March 12.—The Near East today resembled a military League of Nations as the Allies labor to build up an army of the Orient to face any threats which spring may hold in store for this region.

This force as now constituted represents a liberal sampling of the diverse races of the British and French empires. From the mountains of Lebanon and Syria to the stretches of the western Egyptian desert there is a kaleidoscopic display of multi-uniformed soldiery.

The French poilu can now be seen haggling in dark bazaars of Damascus, near the tomb of Saladin, or lounging along the harbor of Beirut. Near Noms is a detachment of the hard-bitten Foreign Legion, and interspersed in the Syrian Lebanese valleys and villages are colorful colonials, including Madagascar Malgaches, flat-faced Annamites, Spahis, Algerians, Tunisians, Moroccans and strapping Senegalese.

R. A. F. in Evidence

The forces of Britain have established themselves in the hills of Palestine. The Australian expeditionary corps is settling down to training in the shadow of Jericho. Tommies are wandering about Jerusalem, where many recently have been called into service to support the police during land law riots.

From Haifa to Lydda one sees occasional camouflaged trucks. The Royal Air Force is constantly in evidence. Across the Jordan River the British officers are training the Arab legion of trans-Jordan. Daily motorcades loaded with potash, valuable for the manufacture of explosives, are winding up the mountain roads to the coast.

Naval preparedness also has not been neglected, the pipe-line termini at Tripoli and Haifa are being guarded, as well as Beirut harbor, where coastal artillery has been installed. There is a constant filtering of merchant shipping through the Bay of Acre to Haifa, where they are scrutinized by the British blockade control, and a careful watch is maintained in Britain's most important Mediterranean ports of Alexandria and Port Said.

War Appears Most Costly In History

By the Associated Press

The cost sheets of Europe's war are convincing bankers and Federal officials that it will be the most expensive conflict in history.

Great Britain already is spending at the rate of $9,600,000,000 a year. That amounts to 40 cents of every dollar its citizens earn. On a population basis, it would equal a $27,000,000,000 annual budget for the United States, more than double that of any of the high spending depression years.

Britons figure the cost will go up a third for the second year and will double by the third year if war goes on. The third year would reach a point which, if the budget were met out of pocket, would take 80 cents of every dollar earned in Britain—if the earnings came up to those of 1939.

French Spend 40 Per Cent

The French costs are a little lower than those of Britain, but still are high enough to wrench the souls of thrifty French taxpayers. France is spending at the rate of $7,400,000,000 a year, which would be equivalent to $23,000,000,000 for the United States. Compared to French earnings, however, the spending works out to more than 40 cents of every dollar the Frenchmen earn.

German costs are largely a matter of conjecture. The best estimates at which experts can arrive, however, produce the rounded conclusion that 60 cents of every dollar earned in Germany is being spent by the state. Three-fourths of this is being raised by taxes, contributions and profits from state enterprises.

Figures from Russia and Finland are hard to get. Nor is any overall figure available for neutral spending. Belgium and the Netherlands, each with less than one-fourteenth of the population of the United States, are spending $300,000,000 to maintain their armed neutrality, in addition to their regular governmental operating expenses.

British Tax Is 37½ Per Cent

Sweden, with a population half a million less than that of Ohio, is spending $475,000,000 this year, half of it to keep from being swept into the maelstrom.

Recalling their financial troubles of the last war, the nations involved are turning promptly to heavy taxes to finance the shooting. Private savings are being drafted, too, through forced loan subscriptions. Already the individual income tax in Britain has been hoisted to 37½ per cent.

Reich Battles Blockade Over Unused Routes

Devious, Round-About Ways Are Used to Get Goods Into Germany

By Frank R. Kelley.
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, March 12.—In an attempt to escape the tightening net of the British blockade, Germany is making use of circuitous costly land and sea routes to import raw materials essential for the Nazi war machinery, according to information reaching the British Ministry of Economic Warfare.

With her merchant marine driven from the seas and bottled in neutral harbors and with all neutral ships approaching Europe liable to search, Germany, it is said, is falling back on little used avenues which thus far the British have not been able to command.

Through equally devious routes the Nazis manage to export what they can, but the British are reluctant to disclose what they know about this aspect of blockade running, for fear of giving information to the enemy which would inspire new subterfuges.

Activity in Orient

From its world-wide system of collecting information the ministry of economic warfare has detected abnormal traffic along old land and sea routes in the Middle East which have not been used since the heyday of the Chinese Empire, and from the Dutch East Indies and Siam, northward to connect with the Trans-Siberian Railway at Dairen and Vladivostok.

Japanese and other neutral merchant ships are said to be making a harvest in running goods for eventual German consumption from southern China, Siam and Java, northward through the Yellow Sea to Dairen or Vladivostok, whence they are shipped by rail across Siberia and Russia.

From Java the Germans are believed to be drawing consignments of rubber, a war necessity. From Siam tin is exported to the Reich over the new route. From South China the Nazis appear to be obtaining wolfram and tungsten.

Suspicion that much of the material which goes into Dairen and Vladivostok is destined for Germany was increased by the fact that Russia herself favors the normal and less costly sea route across the Indian Ocean and the Red Sea through the Suez Canal.

U. S.-Made Ration English Test To Replace Own

British "Tommies" in the French front line soon will be eating a new emergency ration developed by dietary experts of the United States Army—and so will 65,000 American soldiers.

The British government, it was learned yesterday, has placed an initial order with an Indianapolis firm for a consignment of the new canned "chow."

The United States Army will give "field ration, type C" a two-day tryout during the big maneuvers in Texas next month.

The ration, designed for a possible three-day emergency during fighting, is packed in twin tin cans, each with its key opener.

House Passes $654,000,000 Naval Expansion Bill by 302-37 Vote

Fish Loses Move to Slash Plane Carriers

Measure to Enlarge Fleet 11 Per Cent Is Sent to Senate

A two-year naval expansion program urged by its proponents as the "best means of keeping out of war" was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

Few voices were raised on the floor in opposition to the $654,000,000 measure during less than four hours of debate. The vote on final passage was 302 to 37.

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee said the bill would enlarge the fleet by 11 per cent by adding approximately 21 fighting ships, 22 auxiliary vessels and 1,011 warplanes. He warned that Congres may have to consider a further increase next year, depending upon world conditions.

Fish Amendment Loses

The House rejected an amendment offered by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, which would have eliminated three aircraft carriers costing $141,000,000. He said the present seven carriers and one projected were more than needed for defense purposes.

"Aircraft carriers lead us into offensive aggression in foreign wars," Fish shouted.

Members of the House Naval Committee defended the type as the most vitally needed of all.

Chairman Vinson told the House the Office of Naval Intelligence had just furnished him latest information as to foreign naval construction which showed Great Britain to have 15 carriers built or building; Japan, 13; France, 4; Germany, 2, and Russia, 3.

Schafer Move Fails

Fish countered that the Navy Department had told him yesterday morning that Japan had only 8.

"You didn't go to the right place," Vinson answered.

The House also voted down an amendment of Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, to bar the sale by an American firm of any type of naval plane to a foreign government.

The bill would add 167,000 tons of combat ships and 75,000 tons of auxiliaries to the 20 per cent expansion of the fleet authorized two years ago. About 157,000 tons of warships of this earlier increase have not yet been laid down.

Plane Maximum Fixed

Vinson said the Navy now has built, building or authorized, 18 battleships, 8 carriers, 44 cruisers, 139 destroyers and 59 submarines. This is exclusive of ships listed as average but still in service.

The measure would fix the naval plane strength at a maximum of 4,500 first-line craft.

The bill marks a compromise from an original Navy request for a 25 per cent increase of some 77 fighting ships, 31 auxiliaries and 3,000 planes, spread over six years.

Meanwhile Secretary of War Woodring, urging an immediate appropriation of funds for starting a spare set of bombproof Panama Canal locks, wrote the Senate Appropriation Committee that the Army was ready to start work immediately on the project. The House eliminated funds for the locks on the ground work could not be started for two years.

Court Kills Long's Chance for Office

New Orleans, March 12 (AP).—Louisiana's Supreme Court today killed Gov. Earl K. Long's last chance to remain in public office after his term expires May 14.

The court, which only yesterday rendered its first important anti-machine opinion in a dozen years, today unanimously ordered dismissal of suits by Long to force certification of himself as the party nominee for secretary of state.

The court's decision ended Long's post-election fight for a place in the official family of Sam H. Jones, who defeated him in the February 20 primary.

Bishop Woodcock Dies in Florida

Louisville, Ky., March 12 (AP).—The Right Rev. Charles Edward Woodcock, 85, retired Episcopal Bishop of Kentucky, died tonight at his winter home in Fort Myers, Fla. Word of his death was received here by relatives.

He was consecrated Bishop of the Diocese of Kentucky in 1905 and resigned in 1935.

Finnish-Russian Conflict Summarized in Review

By the Associated Press

The Soviet Union's military machine brought war to a new quarter of Europe, the snow-clad Russian-Finnish frontier, by launching a swift attack there November 30—a war that aroused grave apprehension throughout Finland's Scandinavian neighbors and became an important factor in the larger European conflict.

Weeks of diplomatic negotiations, beginning early last October, had failed to bring an agreement on Russia's demands that the Finnish frontier be demilitarized and moved back out of "gun range" of Leningrad, that Finland lease Russia a small section of Finnish territory near the entrance of the Gulf of Finland (presumably Hanko Head and the town of Hanko) for military purposes, yield title to some small islands in the Gulf of Finland, a strip of the Karelian Isthmus north of Leningrad, and portions of the Rybachi Peninsula on the Arctic Ocean, in the Petsamo area.

The Russian demands on Finland were presented shortly after Moscow asked and got sweeping concessions for her three Baltic neighbors, Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia.

Those agreements were fruits of the German-Soviet pact and made Russia dominant on the Baltic.

Reds Strike November 30

But Finland was not so tractable. She agreed only to part of Russia's demands and this is what followed:

November 30—Red army strikes at Finnish defense lines on Karelian Isthmus; Helsinki bombed.

December 2—Finnish "people's government," set up near frontier, recognized by Russia; it "grants" Russian demands.

December 3—Five Karelian Isthmus towns given up by Finns, reporting heavy losses for Russians.

December 8—Finns report 200,000 Russians halted in heavy fighting along isthmus.

December 10—United States gives Finland $10,000,000 credit for non-military supplies.

League Expels Russia

December 14—League of Nations expels Russia as aggressor.

December 19—Allies announce decision to help Finns.

December 28—Viipuri brought under shell fire.

January 8—Forty-fourth and 163d Russian army divisions destroyed near Suomussalmi.

Koivisto Cut Off

February 19—Russians report capturing three towns on Gulf of Finland, cutting off Kiovisto, western anchor of Mannerheim Line.

February 19—Finns report wiping out Russian Eighteenth Division northeast of Lake Ladoga, killing or capturing 18,000 men.

February 21—Russia reports occupation of town and fortress of Kiovisto.

March 11—Russians report completely surrounding Viipuri and penetrating northeastern part of city.

50,000 Troops Offered

March 11—Britain discloses she and France are ready to give full aid to Finland if requested.

March 12—France discloses that 50,000 British and French troops, fully equipped, are ready to embark for Finland immediately if Finland asks for them.

March 12—D. N. B., German news agency, reports from Moscow that peace treaty and immediate armistice agreed upon, giving Russia the Karelian Isthmus, including Viipuri, and a military base on the Hanko Peninsula.

Germany Taunts Allies on Finns

nish independence from Russia in the 1918 struggle in the north, the war seriously conflicted with the Reich's own plans.

It offered the possibility of an armed Allied intervention which Germany in her own interest could not view with equanimity. The Germans claimed that once Allied troops and planes were in Scandinavia, they could operate against the Reich from there. This, the Germans declared, they could not permit.

The existence of this threat to the neutrality of Scandinavia relative to the Reich moreover offered the omnipresent possibility of Germany's supply of Swedish iron ore being cut off and the noose of the Allied blockade being more tightly drawn. Also, if Russia had become involved in war with the Allies she could have supplied fewer war materials to the Reich.

Germany's military arm would have had to be divided in order to face the threat from the north instead of being able to await with its full striking power whatever command shall be given it in the west.

But above the immediate material gain accruing to the Reich from the Russo-Finnish peace, the Germans anticipate an enhancement of their prestige in diplomatic channels which will place them in a stronger position in the Balkans. The Allied powers, the Germans contend, have hoped to extend the European war both into Scandinavia and into southeastern Europe because the Westwall allegedly prevents any successful military action against the Reich in the west.

Collapse of Franco-British machinations in the north, the Germans believe, will greatly weaken the possibility of their effectiveness in the southeast.

It was in the vein of admonishment to neutrals with a veiled hint of the fate they can expect in allowing themselves to be led by the French and British that the spokesman of the foreign office, commenting upon the Russo-Finnish peace, declared:

"The Finns have been clever enough not to succumb to siren calls of the British and French. They have shown themselves to be shrewder diplomats than the Poles and have been courageous enough to turn deaf ears to the west as soon as they recognized the true value of the Franco-British policy.

"Neutrals will undoubtedly take notice of the Finnish example as well as the bad faith demonstrated in Chamberlain's and Daladier's recent speeches. The Finns had three months to think it over while awaiting Allied help which never came, just as it failed to materialize in Abyssinia, Czecho-Slovakia, Albania and Poland. They would have been fools had they continued and permitted Great Britain to extend the battlefields.

"They would have been swept aside by Russia.

"Eventually some Allied troops would have been sent, but in the end the Finns would have been left in the lurch. For the past two days London showed that they merely intended to give a rubber check. The Russians were wise enough not to ask for too much.

"That is why Great Britain failed to transmit the Russian terms (the Germans maintain Great Britain learned from Russia of the terms for terminating the conflict three weeks ago and failed to transmit them to Finland). Great Britain wanted to keep on fighting until the last Finn."

With the restoration of peace in the north, the Germans feel that the war has reverted, for all immediate and practical purposes, to the stage it had reached on September 3 of last year, with the difference that Germany's eastern frontiers had been freed from any danger from Poland.

This, it is felt here, in view of statements in recent months by German leaders, cannot help but hasten the approach of some sort of showdown between the Reich and her western enemies.

What and when that showdown will take place, however, remains as much of a mystery now as it has been since the outbreak of hostilities.

The Russo-Finnish peace should come pretty much as a surprise to the German people, who have not been informed of the negotiations in progress.

All they have been told daily is that the British and French have been endeavoring to spread the war to Scandinavia.

Finns Expect, Can't Confirm, Peace Treaty

eral rule but no one prophesies that there will not be exceptions.

"It may be difficult to get our troops back from the front," one Finn said.

Though he knows that peace has been signed and has a vague knowledge of its terms, the full impact of the peace has not yet been brought home to the soldiers who have fought the war. Their reaction when the full terms are known to them is not easily predicted but it is known that they already are dissatisfied.

"We Have Wept Before"

In this respect a word from Mannerheim or some other influential soldier might have a great effect.

There was a disposition to be philosophical among some Finns who recalled the history of their country—a history of centuries of struggle for freedom.

"We have wept before," one of these said. "This is probably no more bitter than other tears."

Another quoted Runeberg, the Finnish national poet who wrote of the war in 1800, when Finland seemed crushed forever:

"A day will come. All is not yet lost."

News Not Confirmed

By Walter B. Kerr

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Helsinki (Wednesday), March 13. At 3:30 o'clock this morning (8:30 p. m. Tuesday, Eastern standard time), three hours after the news had been broadcast over the German radio, the Finnish government was unable to say whether the war between Finland and the Soviet Union had come to an end. It simply did not know.

For long after the German radio had told the story, and long after the terms had been broadcast by the Moscow station, Foreign Minister Tanner was still waiting for confirmation of the reports from Risto Ryti, the prime minister, who went to Moscow to negotiate and sign the peace.

For some reason no message by cable or radio was received from Ryti and none here could tell whether he tried to send the news or not, and if he did try, whether he was prevented by lack of communications.

"Nothing Tonight"

So at 3:30 o'clock a press officer told newspaper correspondents here:

"Gentlemen, I am afraid that hereafter you will have to get your news from Moscow. I have just talked with the foreign minister and he has heard nothing. I suppose we will hear nothing tonight."

"But," he was told, "we still don't know. Has Parliament finished its secret session? Has it accepted the peace terms and has it instructed the delegation to sign them? Or does it have to ratify the signatures after they have been put to the treaty?"

"I am sorry, gentlemen. I simply do not know. But I suppose that the session is over, and that the delegation has been instructed to sign. We won't know for sure whether it has signed, until we hear from the delegation. And for some reason we have heard nothing."

Air Alarm Sounded

Helsinki (Wednesday), March 13 (AP).—In yesterday's confusing welter of rumors of peace, war, truces and new negotiations the only solidly realistic contributions to the situation for the people of Helsinki were a short air-raid alarm at 4 p. m. (9 a. m., Eastern standard time) and an army communique which said Russia had lost 15 more bombing planes over Finland.

Yesterday's communique, dated noon (5 a. m., Eastern standard time), showed the Russians still were trying to take Viipuri.

Red Gains Admitted

The Finnish army admitted Red army forces had pushed further along the coast northwest of Viipuri, tightening their death grip on the battered city, where the first shot of the Finnish war of independence was fired 22 years ago.

(A Russian communique said Red units occupy strategic positions on four sides of Viipuri.)

East of Viipuri on the Karelian Isthmus the Finns reported beating back powerful Russian attacks except near Pali, where the Russians were conceded to have broken through the Finnish defenses.

The Finns said their artillery had scattered Russian units attempting to advance across the ice at Vuolsen and had repulsed enemy storm troops near Aryapaa. Lively fighting was reported on the front northeast of Lako Ladoga.

Bombings to Stop

Bombings which accompanied the Moscow peace discussions were confined to southern Finland, where at least two civilians were killed in towns behind the war zone.

The Finnish air force struck back, bombing and strafing moving columns of Russian troops, artillery and tanks.

Finnish figures now show more than 600 Russian planes have een shot down in the war and approximately 1,500 tanks and 300 guns either taken or destroyed.

Coup d'Etat Seen

Paris (Wednesday), March 13 (INS). A Havas (French) dispatch from the Russo-Finnish frontier today declared that some Finnish circles considered a coup d'etat possible in Finland, renewing the war. These circles predicted that the present Finnish government would resign if Parliament refused to ratify their peace treaty with Moscow, and then new Finnish leaders may be resolved to fight to the end.

Chiefs Out, Paris Hears

Paris (Wednesday), March 13 (INS). First partial confirmation from Helsinki that peace terms have been signed reached Paris early today in a dispatch asserting that the Finnish ministers of war and education had resigned as a result of the pact.

Italians Pleased

Rome, March 12 (AP).—Authoritative Italians received the news of a Russian-Finnish peace with "the greatest satisfaction" today.

Rivers, Harbors Congress to Seek $280,000,000

Appropriation of $280,000,000 for river and harbor development and flood control projects throughout the country will be purged by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, opening its thirty-fifth annual convention at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow.

The Budget Bureau has allotted only $25,000,000 for rivers and harbors and $70,000,000 for flood control. Maj. Gen. Julian Schley, chief of Army engineers, had recommended $79,226,800 for rivers and harbors and $206,624,000 for flood control.

More than 200 engineers and flood control and conservation experts are expected to attend the two-day congress. Speakers will include a score of Senators and Representatives, Army and Navy officers and Federal officials.

Halt New Deal Communist Trend, Gannett Urges

Boston, March 12 (INS).—Publisher Frank Gannett, Republican Presidential aspirant, tonight coupled a warning against a third term for President Roosevelt with a definition of G. O. P. aims as halting what he termed the present New Deal trend toward communism and dictatorship.

Speaking at a rally sponsored jointly by the Men's and Women's Republican Clubs of Massachusetts, Gannett put forward a 17-point program, including solution of the unemployment problem, restoration of normal agricultural income, elimination of waste from relief administration, encouragement of employer-employe profit sharing plans, restoration of dollar value control to Congress, assurance against involvement in war, trimming of waste from the defense program, limitation of a President's tenure to eight years, and attainment of a balnace of the Federal budget.

Allies Waited for Finns to Request Aid, Daladier Claims

50,000 Men Ready to Sail, Says Premier

International Law Observed, Paris Session Assured

By the Associated Press

Paris (Wednesday), March 13.—France and Great Britain had an expeditionary force of at least 50,000 men ready to sail on a moment's notice to aid Finland and were prepared immediately to take an official, organized part in the Finnish-Russian war had the Finns chosen to keep on fighting, Premier Daladier declared yesterday.

Only a formal appeal from Helsinki was necessary to set the Allied war machinery in motion, Daladier told a cheering Chamber of Deputies.

Daladier added that "a decisive answer in one sense or the other" had been promised by Finnish Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner following the decisive meeting of the Finnish Parliament which is to take the Russian peace terms under consideration. This answer either never came or was in the negative.

Britain Would Give Most

While mentioning 50,000 men as the number ready to sail, Daladier failed to make clear whether these were merely the French contingent or the French and British together.

In a brief series of remarks to the chamber he indicated, however, that it would have fallen to Britain to contribute more heavily in men and transports than France. Backing up Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration yesterday that "all available resources" would be sent if the Finns requested, Daladier said Britain "had multiplied her efforts" to this end.

The British-French expeditionary force, he asserted, had been ready under full equipment since February 26 to sail from both an English Channel and an Atlantic port aboard transports standing by with steam up.

Formal Request Needed

The full import of his announcement was not long in getting about. Only a few volunteers had gone from the Allied countries to the aid of Finland, although a considerable amount of war materials was sent.

Daladier explained that a formal call for help was needed from Finland before troops can be sent because the Swedish and Norwegian governments "oppose with all their force the passage of Allied troops across their territories."

"Even in the midst of war I do not wish my country to trample on international law," he said.

Welles to See Chamberlain, Eden Today

Party Spokesmen Give Their Views On Peace and War

By Frank R. Kelley.
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, March 12.—Spokesmen for the British Labor, Liberal and Conservative parties expounded their views on war and peace today to Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's special emissary to Europe, who ended his second busy day here in a two hour and 20 minute conference with Winston Churchill, first lord of the Admiralty, and favored by many to become prime minister before the war is over.

Tomorrow Welles will finish his sampling of British opinion by consulting among others, 77-year-old David Lloyd George, Britain's prime minister in the last war, a white-haired elder statesman, rounding out his fiftieth year in Parliament, as a vigorous foe of war with Russia and advocate of an honorable peace with Germany before the full fury of conflict bursts upon Europe. Lloyd George makes no secret of his hope that the United States will participate in an early peace conference.

After conferring with Lloyd George for half an hour in the morning, Welles will go to the American Embassy to receive Stanley Bruce, Australian high commissioner in London, and James Maxton, chieftain of the Independent Labor Party. After lunching with Ambassador Kennedy and the Embassy staff, Welles will call upon Anthony Eden, Dominion secretary.

At 6 p. m. Welles will visit Prime Minister Chamberlain, and will be the Prime Minister's guest at a farewell dinner. Thursday Welles will leave London for Rome via Paris.

After seeing the labor leader, Welles received Sir Archibald Sinclair, head of the opposition Liberals. Later Welles lunched with Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon.

Pope Pius, Unsmiling, Marks Anniversary of Coronation

By Camille M. Cianfarra.
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 12.—Pope Pius XII this morning attended a solemn ceremony in St. Peter's to celebrate the first anniversary of his coronation. Cardinal G. Granito di Belmonte Pignatelli, dean of the Sacred College, celebrated the pontifical high mass at the throne, at the end of which the Pope imparted the apostolic benediction.

Twenty cardinals, members of the Pope's family and of the diplomatic corps as well as a large crowd filled the huge basilica to pay homage to the Pontiff. Among the members of the diplomatic corps was Myron C. Taylor, who attended for the first time in his official capacity a religious ceremony in St. Peter's. He was accompanied by Mrs. Taylor.

The Pontiff listened to mass from his new throne. He looked pale and tired. His appearance in the basilica was greeted with tremendous applause, yet he never smiled. He somberly blessed the crowd, while he was borne through the aisle.

All Vatican employes were granted a holiday today and the Vatican buildings flew the papal flag. The flow of cables, telegrams and messages from sovereigns, heads of states, chiefs of government, high ecclesiastical and lay dignitaries as well as private citizens from all parts of the world which have been pouring in at the Vatican since March 2—the date of the Pope's election—ended today.

The first stamps and coins with the effigy of Pius XII also were issued today.

Dr. Neilson Urges Systematic Search For Tuberculosis

Cases of tuberculosis ought to be located "as systematically as we take the census," Dr. N. P. Neilson told public school principals, teachers and health workers at a tuberculosis institute here yesterday.

He urged more widespread use of X-ray and tuberculin tests. Dr. Neilson, executive secretary of the American Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, spoke at Roosevelt High School to the group from schools in divisions 1-9.

An institute for principals and teachers of divisions 10-13 will be held at 3:30 this afternoon at Banneker Junior High School.

Engineers Need Character, 300 Told at Banquet

Personal character is three times as important to an engineer as technical training, local students of electrical engineering were told last night at a dinner of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Washington section, at the Harrington Hotel.

Dr. Charles Fenton Scott, professor emeritus of electrical engineering at Yale University, told the students "it is not what the university offers but what the student does that counts."

Students in A. I. E. E. branches at George Washington, Maryland and Catholic universities and the Bliss Electrical College were guests of honor at the dinner. Nearly 300 persons attended.

Other speakers were F. Malcolm Farmer, national president, and H. H. Henline, national secretary of the institute. Roy W. Prince, of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., presided.

Typing Champion Exhibits His Skill At White House

Norman Saksvig, world's professional typing champion, was in town yesterday with advice for harassed Government typists who suffer from what is commonly known as "stenographers' fatigue."

Most office clerks he has seen, said Saksvig—who has pounded out 147 words a minute for an hour straight—go at this business of typewriting all wrong. They put too much effort into it, he contends.

At the White House, he showed the Executive Office staff just how a typewriter should be run with a minimum of effort. Never, said the champion, raise your wrists above the space bar. Let your fingers do the work and you won't get tired.

'A Sad Peace,' Is Reaction In Sweden

Scandinavia Takes Signing of Treaty For Granted

By the Associated Press

Stockholm (Wednesday), March 13.—Scandinavia took it for granted early today that a Finnish-Russian peace treaty had been signed, although official confirmation from Finland was still lacking.

The impression prevailed that Finland has had to make a considerable sacrifice in making peace, which gives temporary assurance, at least, that Scandinavian neutrality will remain intact.

Sources close to the Finnish Legation here said they were without information on the reported peace treaty but Helsinki correspondents of Stockholm newspapers said, before they were cut off by the Finnish censor, they believed the report was true.

Throughout yesterday, a tide of rumors of an impending or accomplished Russian-Finnish agreement ran in Scandinavia. Odds were 4 to 1 that the war would end.

Matching the burst of hope for peace, however, was the resentful feeling, openly expressed, that the Western Allies were seeking to compromise Sweden and her neutral neighbors in both economic and military measures by their pledges of intervention on behalf of Finland—particularly French Premier Daladier's announcement that an Allied force of 50,000 was ready to embark for the north if the Finns asked for it.

Enormous Headlines

Morning newspapers carried the news of peace, attributed to Moscow radio and German press dispatches, in enormous headlines.

The people stood in crowds in front of the newspaper offices and read silently, in some cases almost sullenly as popular sympathy with Finland's cause held sway.

"A sad peace" was a common comment.

The Copenhagen newspaper Politiken declared editorially, "Peace has been achieved, but a peace the conditions of which will bring pain far beyond Finland's borders. . . . March 12 was fixed as a day of fate in the life of the north countries."

The paper added, "If the fires of war had been spread over neighboring countries, then there would have been direct danger of Finland being completely destroyed."

One Stockholm newspaper said the final Soviet conditions had been presented to the Finns early today and that Josef Stalin himself had made a friendly remark to Dr. Juhu Kusti Paasikivi, one of the Finnish negotiators, telling Paasikivi that if he had continued to head the Finnish negotiators in pre-war conferences the war could have been avoided.

of the Finns; that they had at least 50,000 men ready to load into ships to send to Helsinki.

Though Josef Stalin is still known to have his reservations about cooperating too much with Adolf Hitler, it is felt here the Allies' anti-Soviet diplomacy during the Finnish war might induce Stalin to cooperate all the more with Hitler.

Military men suggested, too, that Germany, doubly strengthened by the removal of the threat of a war in the north and by the freeing of Russia's war supplies, might well be expected to undertake an attack in the west.

That Britain and France have not neglected preparation for such a contingency, however, was indicated by War Secretary Stanley's announcement yesterday that Britain's army in France had been doubled since October, thus placing about 316,000 British fighting men behind the Maginot Line.

The Balkans, it is feared here, may look upon the Finnish experience as another victory for the dictators and a defeat for the democracies, who are accused of failing to take effective action to back up their protestations of support for Finland.

Already in London legations one hears comment that Finland, championed by the Allies, went down just as Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and Austria. It is admitted, even in official quarters, that the defeat in Finland will result in reduced Allied prestiege in the Balkans.

What the average man here wants to know is why the Finns did not ask the Allies to send those 50,000 men. He knows of the valorous defense of the Finns and that they are still unbroken, that Russian progress during the last few days had not quickened. He knows, too, the Finns went to Moscow knowing that all the resources of the British and French empires was at their disposal and proceeded to make a peace which gave to the Russians even more than they asked in the first place without ever calling for Allied help.

These four points were known to Russians and Germans as the "Ironsides plan" for the chief of the British imperial general staff, Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, was said to be the leader of the group which believed the way to beat Germany was to attack her from the north.

Why Let Yourself Get Constipated?

Why endure those dull headachy days due to constipation, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?

If your constipation, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran.

This crunchy toasted breakfast cereal is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emergency relief. It helps you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day and month after month, by the pleasantest means you ever knew.

Eat Kellogg's All-Bran regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Contributions Continue to Swell Blood Bank Fund

With funds still coming in from sales of tickets, it may be a few days before net proceeds of the Easter style show held Monday at the Hotel Mayflower for the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank are totaled, officials of the Connecticut Avenue Association said yesterday.

Sponsored by the organization of Connecticut avenue merchants, the fashion display attracted approximately 1,500 paid admissions, it was learned.

Meantime, additional funds yesterday reached The Post, co-sponsor of the blood bank campaign with Station WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League.

Representing the receipts of benefit parties, the checks included $58.50 from Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15, American Legion, and $103 from the legion's Police and Fire Post.

Tonight and tomorrow night the American Legion's Government Printing Office Post will unreel the movie, "Alexander's Ragtime Band," in the plant's Harding Hall for the benefit of the blood bank.

Italian Press Defiant as Ribbentrop Goes Home

Italian commentator has ever gone toward a Nazi envoy.

Vatican circles are content that they and the Pontiff made their disapproval of Nazi policies quite clear, and satisfaction is being expressed that the Germans cannot claim to have enhanced their prestige just because their foreign minister had a long audience with the Pope. Rarely in modern Vatican history has any statesman received so unfriendly a reception. The way officials and prelates went out of their way to avoid being photographed with Von Ribbentrop is something that all Vatican City is chuckling about today.

Welles Tour Mentioned

However, the visit of Von Ribbentrop will have repercussions in other fields of international events that may prove important. For one thing, it seems certain that he and the Duce discussed Undersecretary of State Welles' tour.

Because of the minister's conversations, Germany was in a position to add to what had already been said to Welles in Berlin in the light of further reflections and the most recent developments.

It is reported that the Germans are somewhat alarmed at the impression they made on President Roosevelt's envoy, and desire to soften it. So far as the Italians are concerned, Welles is doubtless going to learn much more than he did on his first sojourn in Rome. Premier Mussolini did not want to be the first to put his cards on the table and he also wanted to be sure that Welles really had no proposal up his sleeve.

British Appear the Gainer

The Von Ribbentrop visit has also strongly influenced the vital question of coal supplies and Italy's relations with Great Britain—although apparently not in the direction that the Germans hoped.

The German envoy helped to precipitate a settlement, but it looks as if that accord will bring Italy and Britain closer together.

The Germans have been talking big about supplying Italy up to 6,000,000 tons annually by rail, but no qualified economic authority believes they can do it.

The fact that Germany and Poland together ordinarily furnish some 9,000,000 tons indicates what a gap there is to fill. The Italians have agreed not to send any more ships for German coal. Therefore, they must get their coal from Britain. So it seems clear than an arrangement will be reached. When the original negotiations started, the Italians are understood to have asked for 12,000,000 tons of coal from Britain, which would have made them independent of other supplies.

However, it was found impractical to arrange trading facilities to cover such a large amount, and the figure of 8,000,000 tons was agreed upon. This would cover Italy's most vital needs. The breaking off of trade negotiations left the whole matter in the air. Now it is presumed that after the British reply to Italy's protest is delivered—which is expected by the end of the week—negotiations will be resumed on more or less the same basis.

The atmosphere for the talks has become such that there are nopes of a satisfactory solution. Then, the problem will arise of what the Germans are going to do about it. They sank one Italian collier bearing British coal last week, but it is hard to believe they would try to hamper coal supplies from reaching Italy in that fashion regularly. If so, there would be a more serious crisis.

Press Unanimous.

The newspapers are unanimous about Von Ribbentrop today.

"In reality, the voyage of the Fuehrer's eminent collaborator had no particular immediate objective in view, nor the attainment of any particular accord between Rome and Berlin," writse Virginio Gayda in the Giornale d'Italia. "It had, above all, the aim of informing Italy better about the directive and intentions of Germany after the first six months of the war."

"Neither Italy nor the Duce can be influenced, as certain foreign newspapers have given to believe," Ansaldo also says today. "When the Duce decides to change the attitude assumed last September, he will do so on the basis of an evaluation proper to the event."

"Premier Mussolini's own newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, uses the phrase, "perfect continuity of the axis policy," which has a two-edged meaning: to continue the axis, but at the same time to continue the policy of nonbelligerency.

In short, if Von Ribbentrop came here expecting to get anything out of the Italians, he failed.

SHAMROCK PROSPECTS. This year's Cherry Blossom Queen, Miss Rose Colliflower, will also be a "Shamrock Queen" at the St. Patrick's party to be given in her honor on Saturday evening at the Neptune Room by members of the drama department of Catholic University. The C. U. dramateers will present songs, dances and dramatic skits. Among the crew will be Leo Brady, coauthor of "Yankee Doodle Boy," the play about George Cohan's life, produced by Catholic University with his approval; Jimmie Graham, who played the lead in the play, and Mimi Norton, pretty songstress. Neptune's own entertainers, Bert, Glen, Alice and Evalyn will sound off in melodies of Erin.

Another star St. Patrick's party will be celebrated in the Metronome Room next Monday. Eddy Brandt and orchestra will pop off some streamlined 1940 lyrics written in special honor of St. Pat. Bright decorations and attractive souvenirs in the "Wearin' o' the Green" manner.

FOUR-STAR SPECIAL! Ethel Barrymore Colt, daughter of the one and only Ethel Barrymore, will probably be the singing star in the Shoreham Blue Room next week, according to a dependable buzz.

LOTUS HOT-CHA. It's wicky-wacky week at the Lotus. The Tip Tap Girls are teaching the customers to do something they call the "Tippety-Tap" and a rare show it is to see nervy patrons do their bit in a floor show. But that star clown on Monday was a "ringer." He was Wardell, of the Wardell and Dade dance team, one of the best. Jive, at its steamiest, gets a big inning in the dances of Keller and Martin, perfectly described by Bill Strickland as "a pair of slap-happy kids." Audrey and Price, late of New York's Glass Hat, offer beautifully sleek Latin American dances.

P. S.: Watch out for next week at the Lotus. Al Davis' big Manhattan revue has been booked.

PARTIES are getting us down. Monday there was the press preview of O'Donnell's Sea Grille with everybody oh-ing and ah-ing, munching and sipping, then the trip to the Shoreham to see their new and glistening floor show. Then, naturally, we set all sail for the Anchor Room for the debut of Eileen George, the pint-size lass with the ten-gallon voice. . . Last night there was the christening of the new Casino Royal (and don't let us hear any of you call it the Casino Bamboo), a No. 1 party with the gayest of Wally Wanger revues and fine Oriental food . . . Tonight the Lounge Riveria will be ablaze with that celebration of Pete Macias' first big year at that topflight spot.

PETE MACIAS,
Lounge Riviera's maestro. His first Riviera anniversary will be celebrated tonight

LAUGHS IN RHYTHM. Mayfair. "He Played His Ukelele As the Ship Went Down," a nutsy English novelty by the Rhythm Boys that squelches that superstition about the British lack of humor.

Troika. Luba Malina's version of "La Cucharaca." Too funny for words when she makes big eyes and stamps her feet.

Mayflower Lounge. "The Man Who Comes Around" with "Ha-Cha" Gardner bringing the little fellow around.

La Salle Versailles. Les Colvin's parody on "Trees." But you'll never be able to hear the regular "Trees" again without a giggle.

Shar-Zad. Bill McCune's new parody on "We, the People." According to Bill's idea, the pee-pul's crying need is two portions of jive for every "lickey."

Hi-Hat. "Pinchinello," the snippety new song that Angie Rodante is airing with the Diplomats. Bright as a new penny.

PEACE, IT'S WONDERFUL. When you get that urge to be like Ferdinand and just sit quietly and smell the flowers—then hie yourself to the Harrington Tavern. You can sit quietly there and smell something better than flowers, the aroma of fine cocktails mixed with precision.

HEY PIGGIES! It's "Piggy Night" tonight again at River Bend. Don't blame me if you gair five pounds. Huge quantities of George Stein's rhythm, too.

BIGHEARTED ROBIN HOOD. The original Robin Hood was a do-gooder, in his own way. The Washington Robin Hood also goes in for making the public happy. Interesting and tasty specials are always on the food and beverage menus. Fine, too, is the entertainment of Lynne Allison, Tommy Johnson and Eddy Whitesell.

DOWNER-DORSEY. Bill Downer's 12-piece orchestra at the Nightingale offers more Tommy Dorsey effects than any other band around. Bill is both a friend and admirer of Dorsey's, frankly says that he patterns his music in the Dorsey style.

District Leaders To Attend Institute

All white public schools in the District will close at 1 p. m. today so teachers and officers may attend an institute.

Dr. Charles H. Judd, director of the education program of the National Youth Administration, will speak on "The Youth Problem and the Responsibility of Education" at 2:15 p. m. at McKinley High School auditorium.

The Board of Education recently authorized Supt. F. W. Ballou to conduct teachers' institutes. Colored schools will close at 1 p. m. tomorrow, and Dr. Judd will repeat his address for them at Armstrong High School auditorium at 2:15 p. m.

Hoover Shaken By Finn News

New York, March 12 (U.P.).—The United Press tonight showed Herbert Hoover dispatches from Moscow outlining terms of the Russo-Finnish peace agreement and asked him if his organization would continue collection of Finnish relief funds in this country.

The former President was visibly affected but said he could say nothing tonight.

"I may have a statement tomorrow," he added.

Nover to Address Center on War Phases

Barnet Nover, Washington Post columnist, tonight will address the Jewish Community Center institute on "The War in Europe." David Wiener, attorney, will preside as chairman of the meeting, which begins at 8:30 p. m.

Soviet Victory Blow to Allies, Is View Here

Procope Is Silent, Apparently Stunned; Norse Envoys Relieved

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The reported end of the Russo-Finnish war brought a variety of reactions in Washington last night.

Hjalmar J. Procope, the Minister of Finland, adopted a policy of silence pending official word from his government in Helsinki. However, in view of his optimistic statements in the last 10 days, he could not have been but stunned by Finland's capitulation to the harsh Russian terms.

In his last press conference, Minister Procope said that for Finland to have accepted the original Russian demands would have been like the United States surrendering the Golden Gate of San Francisco, the islands off Nantucket Sound and part of the New England States to a foreign power. Russia, he said, would have gained "a complete grip" on Finland. Therefore, he added, Finland would "fight on."

The concessions Finland now has granted Russia, judging from the Moscow communique, are far greater than the original demands, including as they do the surrender of the whole of the Karelian Isthmus with its Mannerheim Line and the strategic and as yet unconquered City of Viipuri.

By an ironic coincidence, the blue and white flag of Finland yesterday hung at half staff outside of the Finnish legation. It had been half-staffed because of the death of Reino Juva, 27-year-old junior clerk at the legation, who died yesterday in Garfield Hospital after a two-month illness.

Perhaps the most relieved diplomats in Washington yesterday were those representing Sweden, Norway and Denmark. From the time the Russo-Finnish war started, they had feared that it would spread and make a battlefield of Scandinavia.

It was generally agreed that Britain and France had suffered another diplomatic defeat.

Military Men Differ

However, military men differed on the military aspects of the war's end. Some held that the Allies had missed a chance to strike a blow at Russia and at the same time to flank Germany. There were others, though, who held that the Allies were lucky they hadn't made Scandinavia a "new front." Germany, they argued, would have had better communication lines in such case, and might have given the Allies a beating.

Most military observers expected the Russian bear to spend considerable time licking his wounds before he would again go on a rampage. Therefore, they believed it would be necessary for the Allies to become the aggressors if a blow is to be landed directly against Russia on her southern border, where are located her vitally important oil wells.

The Russo-Finnish peace comes at a time when Finland has hardly begun to use the $20,000,000 credit recently extended by the Import-Export Bank, after action by Congress.

Jones Not Surprised

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones announced last night that the $20,000,000 loan would be at Finland's disposal to help in rehabilitation and refugee work. He pointed out that Finland's past record for paying her debts makes her still a good financial risk.

Although he avoided comment on the peace terms, Jones said he was not surprised that hostilities were about to cease. He said there "was no purpose in going on and having thousands of persons slaughtered" in an apparently hopeless cause.

Finns were hopeful that Americans would continue to extend the aid that is necessary to rehabilitate the widely devastated republic and thus help her to get strong and resist any further aggression.

Department were silent last night, awaiting word from Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt in Moscow.

Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said that if Finland was satisfied with the peace terms, all her friends would have to bow to the inevitable. At the same time, he praised Finland for exploding the Communist ballyhoo that the Red army was invincible.

Commenting formally, Chairman Bloom said:

"If it is true, as I hope it is, that Moscow and Finland have agreed upon peace terms satisfactory to both countries—I hope that this same way of settling differences between nations without resorting to the killing of not only the soldiers of their respective countries, but of innocent women and children, will bring reason and logic to the other belligerent countries, and that they will come to some peaceful solution of their differences. This should be an SOS to all the nations now at war."

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, took a different view, characterizing the peace pact as "a Hitler victory as well as a Finnish defeat."

"It is another victory for tyranny and dictatorship and another defeat for the cause of democratic government," Norris said.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, said that the peace sounded "more like a holdup than a treaty."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, a member of the isolationist group, said, "That's their business, not ours."

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, said, "Every friend of Finland had hoped that she could maintain her independence—and evidently she has done so, but at a tremendous sacrifice."

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina—"It's a victory for Germany. Now that hostilities are about to cease, Russia will be able to provide Germany with necessary materials. Finland knew what to expect from England? Didn't she see what happened to Poland and Czecho-Slovakia?"

Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Laborite), of Minnesota—"My God, those are harsh terms! But what could Finland do? She had been deserted by England and France. They're all a bunch of crooks."

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana—"Those are pretty hard terms for Finland. My sympathies are with Finland and I regret to see her humiliation. Nevertheless, the fact that there is peace lessens the probability of getting the United States into the war—and that's the chief thing I'm interested in."

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts—"Russia as usual drove a very hard bargain."

Representative John Kee (Democrat), of West Virginia—"The terms seem to be terribly harsh."

Sweden Buys 150 Warplanes, Ammunition

$8,500,000 Bomber Purchase Disclosed As Bertil Leaves

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Swedish arms mission announced last night it had placed orders with American munitions companies for about 150 warplanes and 5,000,000 rounds of machine gun ammunition.

Details were not given, but a member of the mission said the plane order was placed with the Vulte Aircraft Co. and that most of the planes would be bombers. The plane contract totaled about $8,500,000, and the ammunition order between $200,000 and $300,000.

At the same time, it was revealed that Prince Bertil and several aids will leave today for Stockholm to consult his government on further purchases totaling about $10,000,000, mostly tanks and anti-tank guns.

Offices of the mission here will be closed but several officials will remain in this country to supervise contracts under way and place others should their government decide to conclude pending negotiations for the tanks and guns. The latter, it was said, would be double-purpose weapons, capable of use against both tanks and planes.

The aircraft and ammunition orders bring the total Swedish purchases to about $20,000,000. All but about $3,000,000 was for warplanes, some 300 being ordered.

Reason for not concluding the tank and artillery orders, it was indicated, was because facilities for producing them do not exist and there would be some delay in providing jigs, dies and tools for equipment. Stockholm officials may decide to enlarge Swedish arms plants.

China Regime To Sign Peace With Japan

Yonai Will Pledge Support Tomorrow For Wang's State

By Hugh Byas.

Tokyo, March 12.—A new Chinese government, prepared to sign a peace treaty with Japan on principles already agreed upon, is at last about to appear. Japan's support, which is the new government's main asset, will be pledged by Premier Yonai, tomorrow in response to Wang Ching-Wei's statement of policy, made in Shanghai today.

Admiral Yonai will not announce Japan's peace terms, but officials state he will "indicate the direction of Japan's policy for settling the China incident." The actual peace terms will be embodied in a treaty negotiated with the Wang government after it has established itself as a working entity.

But whether Wang succeeds or fails—Japan cannot admit the possibility of failure—the advent of his government is an event of great importance. It is a carefully planned first step toward a settlement of the war in China and in the Japanese government's view it will change the course of events there as a dam changes a stream.

What Japan expects can be best described by repetition of the substance of a conversation this correspondent had with an official who knows the government's views. He said the new government's establishment would create a changed situation and Chunking would fade from the picture and become a mere backwoods regime.

Foreign governments, he declared, would have to deal with the new government in all matters within the area it will control.

Allied Mission Reassures U. S. on Blockade

Embarrassment to American interests rising out of the Franco-British contraband control will be eliminated if by so doing the Allies will not weaken "the fight for their lives against a formidable enemy."

That pledge was made in Washington yesterday by an official two-man delegation, publicly discussing for the first time their delicate mission of ironing out difficulties incident to the Allies' economic warfare.

In a press conference at the Hotel Mayflower, Charles Rist and Frank Ashton - Gwatkin — official representatives of the French and British governments, respectively—frankly stated that preservtaion of the anti-German blockade is of crucial importance and its efficiency must not be impaired.

At the same time, however, they explained that their governments are desirous of making such concessions to neutral commerce as are possible without reducing effectiveness of the contraband control.

Rist and Ashton-Gwatkin arrived in New York March 4. Since then they have been conferring with officials of the State, Treasury and other Government departments.

"The first stage of our discussions probably will be completed by the end of this week," said Rist, explaining that the collection and airing of grievances is occupying this first stage. The matter of settling the difficulties will be the task of the second stage.

"We wish to remove such difficulties wherever it may be possible," said Rist in his prepared statement, "and where it is not possible, to explain the reasons.

"It must be remembered that Great Britain and France are fighting for their lives against a formidable enemy. We believe we are fighting nof for our own lives but for the whole future of Western civilization.

"We cannot afford to take risks or in any way to hamper the efficiency of our contraband control which is a very important part of our effort to defend ourselves and to win the war."

Asked whether the French and British World War debts to this country had come up in their conversations, they replied in the negative.

The Rist Mission

Since the war began, relations between the United States and the Allies, particularly Great Britain, have not always been as happy as they might be.

From time to time American feelings have been exacerbated by British action—the prolonged detention of American ships at control points, for instance, or the seizure of American mails. The British, for their part, have complained of an alleged American lack of understanding of the necessities arising out of the Franco-British position and the vast problems facing the Allies.

This state of affairs is unfortunate. It is also, in some measure, inevitable. In modern war there probably cannot be any clear line of demarcation between the rights asserted by belligerents and the rights insisted on by neutrals. Fighting for what they believe is their very existence, belligerents are not inclined to be tender of neutral interests. And the Allies, for their part, can point out that any measures they may have taken against neutrals are mild in comparison with Germany's U-boat and mine warfare against neutral as well as belligerent shipping.

Accepting the inevitable differences between the belligerent and neutral attitudes, there is, however, no reason why questions of contraband control, the search and seizure of mail, trade dislocation and other matters at issue between the United States and the Allies cannot be deprived of their dangerous possibilities by frank and open discussion.

In this connection the visit to Washington of Prof. Charles Rist and Mr. Frank Ashton-Gwatkin may be productive of good. Prof. Rist is adviser to the French blockade ministry. Mr. Ashton-Gwatkin occupies a similar position in the British ministry of economic warfare. They are here to talk over with responsible American officials questions involving the blockade and wartime trade shifts which have come up between their countries and the United States.

It is quite possible that neither they nor the governments they represent are prepared to go the whole way in meeting American demands. But if they and their governments are willing, as one must assume they are, to go to any reasonable lengths to meet American wishes, they will find this country not unresponsive. Given the will to more harmonious relations, no problems at issue between us and the Allies are incapable of accommodation, even in wartime.

Wedge Of Dissension

The Senate has shown good judgment in calling for a showdown on the Hatch bill. It is evident that the "clean politics" measure has the support of a substantial majority of the Senate. Opponents have only one chance of defeating it and if they resort to a lengthy filibuster to uphold the right of politicians to mulct public servants paid with Federal funds, their position will be much weaker than it is now.

As Senator Clark pointed out yesterday, a filibuster is already in progress. Few Senators are inclined to discuss the bill on its merits. Most of the opponents are obviously speaking to prevent the issue from coming to a vote. Their amendments, for the most part, are designed to introduce extraneous issues and make the bill unpalatable. When so large a number of legislators are engaged in a filibuster, it is not necessary for them to quote by the hour from Poor Richard or the Bible to make their intentions plain.

The Senate has already demonstrated its lack of patience with these tactics by emphatically voting down the Brown amendment designed to raise a ban against political activity on the part of various corporation officers and directors. Senator Smith's effort to squelch White House politics deserves a similar fate. Neither proposal is relevant to the central purpose of the Hatch bill—to prevent the use of Federal money appropriated for the benefit of the States from being frittered away by political machines.

Judging from the temperament of the Senate, the Hatch bill will probably be passed before Congress adjourns. It is not likely that its opponents can bring about its defeat by prolonged debate; and if they could, the measure would doubtless be enacted next year. All its opponents can hope to accomplish is to drive the wedge of dissension deeper into the Democratic Party.

Everyone who has watched the progress of the bill knows that this is a fight within the majority party. Republican Senators are merely standing by while the debate goes on and casting their votes in support of the position taken by the Democratic leader in the Senate and the President. So it is doubtful whether the Hatch bill is suffering half so much from this filibuster as is the party to which the insurgents give allegiance.

The D. C. Tax Dilemma

Because of the importance of the principle involved, the Court of Appeals' decision in the Sweeney case ought to be carried to the Supreme Court. District authorities are well advised to seek a final ruling on the question of whether Government employes living here for indefinite periods are domiciled in Washington. Nevertheless, the effect of that move is further to complicate the problem of repairing the city's shattered revenue system.

If the Court of Appeals' decision is upheld, the District income tax ought to be abandoned. But that will also necessitate the enactment of a new revenue bill to save the District from a serious loss of revenue. Temporarily, the city could borrow funds from the Federal Treasury. Such an expedient, however, would necessitate heavier taxes later on. Presumably Congress will have to act at its present session if a chaotic situation is to be avoided.

While Corporation Counsel Seal appeals to the Supreme Court for a prompt review of the case, therefore, the House District Committee may well proceed with the work of formulating a new local revenue bill. Should the opinion of the Court of Appeals be overturned, which seems unlikely, such legislation could be dropped. If corrective measures should be held in abeyance until the Supreme Court speaks, it might be too late to enact a District tax bill at the present session.

In the meantime, the local authorities have no alternative to enforcement of the income-tax law. So long as that measure remains on the statute books it must be applied to all those who fall within its terms as defined by the courts. The fact that this may mean gross discrimination as between private and Federal employes does not give the Commissioners authority to suspend the law.

Mr. Seal has given clear warning, moreover, that not all Government employes will be exempted. He appears to have exaggerated the difficulties that many such employes will encounter in showing that they are domiciled outside the District. Yet, the opinion in the Sweeney case definitely indicates that Washingtonians in the Government service who have given up their legal residence in the States from which they came will be subject to the tax.

No less important is the fact that many who choose to claim legal residence in the States will immediately become subject to State income taxes. Hereafter these Federal workers will have to pay a premium for the right to vote and maintain their allegiance to a State. And if they decline to support governments "back home," which no longer render them any substantial service, they will have to join the voteless legions of the Nation's Capital.

So the most far-reaching effect of the Court of Appeals' opinion may be the disfranchisement of thousands of Government employes. That probable outcome should not be ignored by the House committee which is shaping legislation to reorganize the District government. If Federal workers are induced to abandon their voting rights in the States by the threat of triple taxation, certainly they should have some voice in governing the community in which their interests are now centered.

Wrong Approach

Chairman Farley of the Democratic National Committee has made the expected reply to the proposal of Chairman Hamilton of the Republican National Committee that no party convention books be issued in 1940. The chieftain of the majority party has no intention of giving up this lucrative source of revenue. The minority will forbear so that it may more freely denounce what Mr. Hamilton calls the "shameless" use of this device in 1936.

While Mr. Hamilton has succeeded in putting the majority party on the spot, it does not follow that he has offered a solution of the campaign book problem. The Republicans can afford to set a good example in this respect while they are in the minority. No doubt the campaign argument which the sale of Democratic convention books of 1936 has given the G. O. P. is worth a good deal more to it than the money it might raise from the sale of similar books this year. But even if Mr. Hamilton's challenge to the Democrats to match the virtue of the G. O. P. had been accepted, both parties would have been free to resume this form of shakedown in later years.

In other words, the abuses to which Mr. Hamilton directs attention call for a strengthening of the law and not merely a gentlemen's agreement between the two major parties. Corporations are forbidden to contribute to national political committees under the Corrupt Practices Act. The sale of convention books to corporations that have or may have important business dealings with governmental agencies is a flagrant evasion of this law. The extent to which that evasion was carried in 1936 and 1937 is sufficient to point the need for a more explicit statute.

Why doesn't the Republican Party throw its weight behind an amendment to the law that would make it impossible for any party to engage in disguised solicitation of campaign funds from corporations?

Finland Capitulates

Except for the actual cessation of hostilities, which is scheduled to take place this morning, the war in Finland is over.

For three and a half months Finland fought against overwhelming odds with such valor and fortitude as to win her undying fame. Aid went to her—from Sweden and the other Scandinavian countries, from the Allies, from this country—but only in driblets. Some of this help, notably our contribution, was of a kind which the hard-pressed Finns did not want or could not use.

During the last few days, while the die was being cast in Helsinki and Moscow, promises of large-scale assistance were made to the beleaguered Scandinavian democracy. But such offers came too late. The 50,000 men which Premier Daladier informed the French Chamber were all ready to go to Finland from French and British ports would have helped that country to continue its fight had they arrived there weeks ago. In the opinion of those responsible for Finland's fate, they could be of little help now.

So Finland capitulated. And it was a capitulation. The terms which Russia sought to impose on Finland last fall and whose rejection by the Helsinki government led to the Red invasion are exceeded by the terms which Finland has now accepted. The whole of the Mannerheim Line is to fall into Russian hands. Lake Ladoga is to become completely Russian. Hangoe is to be leased to the Soviet Union for 30 years and to be transformed into a Russian naval base.

Thus Finland finds herself today in a position similar to that of Czecho-Slovakia after Munich, a nation whose defenses have fallen into enemy hands and which depends for her continued independence on the forbearance of a powerful and unscrupulous neighbor. It may be, of course, that this helplessness will be mitigated somewhat by a German guarantee, although on this point there is still silence in Berlin and Helsinki. But that would mean only, if Finland does not become a Russian protectorate, she would have to live under the sheltering wing of the Third Reich.

The victory is Stalin's. Even more the settlement achieved at Moscow yesterday is a victory for Hitler. Russia emerges from the struggle with her gains achieved but also with her military prestige sadly impaired. Hitler has now been freed of the fear that a second front would be created by the Allies on the Scandinavian Peninsula and his hope that Russia will supply Germany with needed raw materials has been strengthened.

By the same token the Moscow settlement is a defeat for the Allies. Their last-minute efforts to bolster up Finland's waning will to fight reflected their concern over what was happening in the north of Europe. But it was too late for them to do anything. One effect of the Finnish capitulation, which they were helpless to prevent, will be a weakening of their prestige in such vital areas as the Balkans and elsewhere.

Vesting the pardoning power in certain Governors is equivalent to equipping the jails with revolving doors.

Yes, this is a free country and you may say what you please, but it's extremely difficult to get anybody to listen.

"Now Is The Time"

From the Buffalo Evening News.

Easter comes early this year, so it is in order for the tailors now to discuss what the well-dressed man will wear. At a New York style show, there was exhibited an article of attire that turned out to be a modern version of an old favorite of the gay '90s. It was a four-button sack coat.

If this should develop into a "trend," there may come in due time various sartorial accompaniments. Trousers with high pockets, "toothpick" shoes (or for those who prefer comfort the congress gaiter with its elastic gusset), tan cheviot topcoats with big pearl buttons, handlebar mustaches, chest-protector neckties, the roached hair-cut—these may again decorate the scene.

Fashions go in cycles, and the things that are viewed with approval by one generation may be ridiculed by the next. One has only to think of the hats that women are wearing, along with the snood. On the other hand, the attempt to revive the corset proved futile. Men are more conservative in the matter of dress. But perhaps the tailors just intended to throw out a hint that now is the time to order a new suit.

Possible Sales Tax

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the past several weeks your columns, both news and editorial, have been filled with comment on the District income tax.

To date the tax has been taking a pretty bad beating. Not only have most of the comments been bitter; the tax has been undergoing a slow process of emasculation through exemptions which, if it has not done so already, will render the tax a complete failure as a revenue raiser. As a result, the Commissioners, in their desperate search for funds, will almost certainly jump to the alternative which is already looming on the horizon—the sales tax.

Whether or not those protesters who are seeking these exemptions have studied the problem at all, I don't know. But the fact remains that those of the low income group who have fought hardest for the exemptions will, in the end, pay far more under a sales tax than they would have, had they simply groused a bit (as is their inalienable right) and laid their income tax on the line.

For example: A $3,000 income to a married person, less exemptions, deductions, earned income credit, etc., would very probably be subject to no tax at all. Assuming that most of this income would be spent in the District, this person, under a 2 per cent sales tax (the usual figure in other States) would, on the other hand pay close to $50 in tax, no mean difference. (This figure may be questioned. Explanation: The minimum 1 cent tax on sales below 50 cents runs considerably over 2 per cent; cigarettes, small food purchases, drugs, etc., all fall in this group; hence the figure).

I wonder if the protesters and exemption-seekers have thought of this angle? P. A. WYCKOFF.

Beauties Of Wrestling

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In response to L. K. S.'s inquiry appearing in your paper of March 7, "hard-boiled" would probably reply: "Ah, the pity of it all!

And then "hard-boiled," if he was a good-hearted sort who did not wish to amuse himself unduly at the expense of a foreigner who was ignorant of one of America's most popular indoor sports, would probably take this attache of one of the embassies to one of the local wrestling matches so the attache could appreciate for himself the pantomimic ability, the athletic skill, and the cooperation required of these modern gladiators in their titanic contests. Examination Of An Examination

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of March 11 appeared Dorothy Thompson's article on Unemployment, with the subhead, "The Figures Need Examining." If she was not writing this with her tongue in cheek, and for the purpose of exemplifying the ancient bromide that "figures don't lie, but liars can figure," it is suggested that she should proceed (a) to examine the head of "the Grouse," the fictional character whom she interviews, and (b) do a job of careful examination of facts with relation to the figures which the Grouse assembles for her.

If we drop the imaginative approach in the presentation of this statistical puzzle, it may be assumed that the Grouse's figures are in fact her figures, and that she would have her readers believe that at present there are about 2,000,000 unemployed in this country, instead of 9, 10, 11 or 12 million, as variously estimated. Surely she does not believe her readers are so credulous or so lacking in intelligence that they will accept such an absurd estimate of present-day unemployment.

However, here are certain factors which Miss Thompson should take into consideration in a re-examination of her figures:

1. Technological unemployment. Assuming that our production of goods and services during 1939 was on a parity with that of 1929 (and there is basis for that assumption), the important unemployment angle is the fact that the 1939 production was attained with the employment of from 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 fewer workers than were required for the 1929 volume of production. Improved machines and processes affected this displacement of labor.

2. Each year during the decade 1929-39, about 650,000 youths came of working age, a total for the decade of, say, at least 6,000,000.

3. Part-time workers, those on relief work, and those on direct relief cannot be counted as "employed" in any honest computation of unemployment. Say that these groups totaled 2,305,000 in 1939—your Grouse figure for December of that year.

4. The best available estimates show that for the year 1929 there was an average unemployment of at least 2,000,000 workers, despite the fact that that was the year of our maximum national income.

Now if it be conceded that on the average, throughout 1939, we employed only as many workers as were employed, on the average, throughout 1929, what became of the workers enumerated in the four preceding paragraphs? They aggregate in numbers well over the 12,000,000 figure which is the top estimate of current unemployment.

At the same time Miss Thompson might try out the figures for one of the depression years which show (Kneeland Report on Consumer Expenditures in the United States, page 51) that one-tenth of the consumer units (families and single individuals) in the United States had incomes under $340; the second tenth, incomes of $340 to $545; third tenth, $545 to $720; fourth tenth, $720 to $880; fifth tenth, $880 to $1,070; sixth tenth, $1,070 to $1,275, and seventh tenth, $1,275 to $1,540. A little work on these figures shows that almost two-thirds of our consumer units had incomes under $1,500 and an average income of $826 a year.

Does this suggest anything to Miss Thompson and her Grouse that will prompt her to consider the grave inadequate-income factor in her discussion of unemployment?

CLAUDE WATTS.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The rich man passes through the eye of a needle without any trouble today. He has hooked up with agents of heaven to carry on the gospel of hate—hate Russia!

It used to be: Love your enemies. Now the camel with the biggest hump of hate for the Soviet system can readily squeeze into elysium.

Everything is being revised.

Dorothy Thompson in her column of March 11 does a lot of revising. She now finds that democracies have a disease, "pessimism and illusion, combined with utopianism." She also finds that there is no unemployment here—well, hardly any. We thoughtlessly think there is because that "is constantly reiterated and is in all the papers all the time."

But there ain't! She proves it mathematically, and without being a mathematician either. In fact, if we employed the reiterated number of idle we should have to "give a job to everybody who is lame, sick, insane, criminal, feebleminded or a hobo by avocation." We just don't think!

Dotty does some revising upward, too. She discovers that in purchasing power "the 1939 national income was 4 per cent higher than in 1929." And that makes me feel better in stomach and spirit.

Orchestral Crisis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am fully in accord with the views of your correspondents in The Post of March 10, who came to the defense of Dr. Kindler (if such were needed) in rebuttal of the ridiculous attack on him by Mrs. Harry Raymond. One only has to compare the intense, vivid playing of the National Symphony under Dr. Kindler's direction with the mechanically perfect but lifeless performances of the Philadelphia Orchestra under Ormandy's baton to realize how far above the ordinary rank of conductors is Kindler.

But the amazing thing about all the correspondence published yesterday is that no mention was made of the present crisis confronting the orchestra. There has been considerable discussion of this previously in the local papers, but I have seen only one logical, unbiased statement of the situation, that written by Delbert Clark in the music section of the Sunday New York Times two weeks ago.

The situation briefly is this: (1) the musicians do not now receive adequate compensation; (2) they have asked the Orchestra Association to try to raise a sustaining fund large enough to give them an adequate compensation; (3) the association has refused to try to do this.

As a member of the association, I do not see why the directors could not have agreed to try to raise the larger sum. If they had tried, and the goal could not be reached, then a compromise could have been effected on the basis of the amount actually collected. As it is, the existence of the orchestra and all that it means to the community is threatened by the unreasonable attitude of the directors of the association.

I have an idea the directors' attitude is governed largely by their antipathy toward unions. Certainly there are many objections to certain union methods, but no one can deny that the lot of the professional musician would be an extremely difficult one without the protection of the musicians' union.

At any rate, the present situation is that the few who control the destinies of the orchestra are apparently willing to let it pass out of existence without any real effort to save it. The many thousands of music lovers, including the members of the Orchestra Association who are not on the board of directors, apparently have nothing to say about it.

They cannot of course complain too much about this state of affairs, because the few who direct the association are the contributors of a large part of the sustaining fund. But surely there are enough members of the board of directors who are willing to forget their prejudices and make a real effort to prevent the impending catastrophe which the loss of the National Symphony would mean in Washington's musical life.

JAMES H. LEWIS,

"Inadequate Defense"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I congratulate you on your editorial in The Post of March 1, pointing out the need for a change in the method of providing counsel for indigent defendants in criminal cases.

May I also extend to Mr. Edward Folliard my congratulations for his admirable presentation of the facts in this case. It was a sample of the type of journalism which makes me a daily reader of The Post.

I trust that The Post will continue in its efforts to remedy the abominable situation of inadequately providing the poor with defense counsel. LAW STUDENT.

Muse Over Georgia

News stories of the death of Karl Muck in Germany March 4 recalled the trouble the celebrated interpreter of Wagnerian music had back in 1917 as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It was over his playing too much Wagner and too little "Star-Spangled Banner." The stories mentioned Dr. Muck's internment for alleged pro-German sympathies, reminding me of Otto, who also was interned—in the same camp.

Otto heard the last concert Dr. Muck played in America. It wasn't in Boston, or with the Boston Symphony—but with an orchestra of pro-German suspects in a War detention camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

"We went down on the same train," Otto told me. "He got on in Boston, I in Washington . . . I don't mean we were in the same seat or that we got chummy. Dr. Muck—instinctly you called him "Doctor"—never got chummy with anybody. But he was pointed out to me, and I knew him because of what I had read in the papers."

"Dr. Muck was pretty much by himself all the way down and later. Always he looked like he was thinking. He had plenty of time to think once we got there.

"Most of us were poor devils, and had to work for our board and bunk. Not Dr. Muck. He had money, of course, and he could buy better accommodations, better rations.

"I have never forgotten one picture of him—in a bath towel, sunning himself in a hammock in the camp yard. With sweat streaming off my face, I envied him that towel and that hammock more than all his honors as a conductor . . . well, days passed and weeks. While Dr. Muck was sunning himself, brooding in a bath towel, we worked with pick and shovel.

"We had been laying a foundation for new barracks—to be occupied, we learned, by more interned Germans from some place in Oklahoma or Arkansas. One day the new boys arrived—maybe several hundred of them—and with them came a German band."

I laughed. Otto stopped me.

"No, no," he protested. "I don't mean a tooting trio like you see on the street corner. I mean a real band, a big band, a brass band, a full-size military band that was in the midst of an American tour. Naturally they didn't parade into camp playing 'Marching Through Georgia.' But they brought their instruments along.

"That band put ideas into somebody's head. Oh, not Dr. Muck's. But there was another big orchestra leader staying at Fort Oglethorpe—a German who thought he could organize a symphony orchestra in the camp.

"You see, every third German could play an instrument—many had been playing in orchestras aboard German ships confiscated here when war was declared. Others had been holding down good music jobs in this country. So this fellow figured he had manpower for an orchestra—when the military band arrived he was sure of it. So he asked Dr. Muck if he would conduct the orchestra in a concert.

"Dr. Muck, I was told, said 'no.' He continued to say, 'no.' He was tired, or he was bitter, or he had decided after Boston never to conduct in America again. But the other conductor kept after him, promised to do all the work of organizing the orchestra and conducting the rehearsals. Finally, Dr. Muck agreed—they said he could not resist an orchestra right there at his hand. A concert was scheduled.

"It took place in the big mess hall we had built. Biggest place I ever saw. They fed 3,000 of us in there every morning, noon and night. That was the only place for the concert, and believe me it was packed for Dr. Muck's performance. Hot—but no matter.

"Funny," said Otto. "I don't remember what was played on that program. Probably some Wagner—there was something so crashing at the climax I thought, really, that low barracks roof would go off. And I am sure he did not play the Star-Spangled Banner.

"I can see him today just as plainly as if it were that night. He was a little man, Dr. Muck. Yet he towered over that orchestra. His hair was noticeably gray, but it was the gray of steel. I don't mean he was cold exactly, but he was still way off.

A friend of mine who played piccolo by night and a pick ax by day told me Dr. Muck was absolutely uncompromising—a prison orchestra or the Boston Symphony—it made no difference to him. The music had to be played so.

"What struck me was Dr. Muck's lack of gesture. I thought conductors waved their arms wildly, shook their hair like it was a mop being aired. Dr. Muck stood straight and solid, his hands in front of him. You hardly ever saw his baton. He flicked it and the results were tremendous.

"The sight of him that night was electrifying. Such music from men I knew as ditch diggers. You had a feeling something was going to blow off. To the very end of the piece the suspense was everytime terrific.

"In one concert Dr. Muck paid us—certainly me—for all the work we had put in on that hall. Freely I gave him his hammock.

"I was released from camp shortly afterward. The war was over. Dr. Muck was still there when I left, but the camp was breaking up. About three months later I read in a paper that he was put on a boat for Germany. He never came back."

Books And Things

Brave New Roads

THE DETROIT-PONTIAC road was laid out in 1817—a 16-mile, 16-foot-wide road, built of round logs. In mid-century it was converted into a plank road. In 1916 it was repaved for automobile traffic; and it was still 16 feet wide. In the 1930's, bit by bit, it was widened to 200 feet, and 50,000 cars now drive it every day . . . . That, to me, is the most impressive traffic story in Norman Bel Geddes's "Magic Motorways" (Random House, $3.50), which tells in book form, by text and diagram and photograph, the story so excitingly told by Mr. Bel Geddes's "Futurama" at last summer's World's Fair. . .

Five million people saw that General Motors exhibit. Sometimes 10,000 people were standing in line, waiting to get in. It was a toy city, a toy world. But it was more than that. It was the drama of our age and our country—the automobile age in the automobile country. Every one of us more than 30 years old has seen a miracle come to pass; every one old enough to have any memory has seen some revolution on the highways. And Mr. Bel Geddes, even more artist than engineer, dramatized the miracles and revolutions we have all seen, and imagined some more to come, on the Flushing flats; and again in this book he makes the picture of the future of the motor world exciting.

In 1903 Sewell K. Crocker got through from San Francisco to New York in his two-cylinder Winton car in two months, two days. Most drivers take a week to 10 days to cross the continent today. Mr. Bel Geddes expects to live to see automobiles make the journey in 24 hours. He tells you how it may be done; and if you doubt, he says you are just one more like the old driver who whipped up Dobbin and said, "Any one who drives faster than I do is driving too fast." I've said it to myself; haven't you?

The cars get better every year. Mr. Bel Geddes seems to doubt it, but I think the drivers are better, too; a nation of boys and girls who have grown up behind steering wheels ought to drive more instinctively than their parents, who made the transition from buggy whips and bicycles. But what Mr. Bel Geddes, in this book, as at the Futurama, is most concerned with is the roads. That Michigan highway which kept its 16-foot width for a century is, he says, typical of our horse-and-buggy thinking about roads. We are only beginning a major transformation of the face of the country.

You and I read this story piecemeal on every Sunday's automobile page. We see it being realized by Mr. Moses' transformation of the waterside. And when we drive out across the continent we provincial New Yorkers discover that, marvelous as Mr. Moses' parkways are, and inhuman as are our traffic jams, they are not unique. Chicago's lake front outshines what New York has yet accomplished; Los Angeles has as tough a traffic problem as Forty-second Street . . . What Mr. Bel Geddes has done in "Magic Motorways" is to assemble, in word and in singularly graphic photographs, the story of the beginnings that have been made, and to offer his own sometimes rather dogmatic solutions for the future.

Cricket Makes Good

"Conscience" has made the movies. The "Still Small Voice" is pretty close to being the screen sensation of the year.

Walt Disney has put 'em in pictures. He has done it through the medium of cricket, out of Dickens by Hollywood. The cricket, called Jiminey Cricket, moves through the picture as the conscience of Pinocchio, always arriving in a moment of temptation to tell Pinocchio the right thing to do.

It is the first time conscience has even got as far as a screen test. Hollywood has, in fact, been regarded as the last place to look for it.

Maybe you never have thought of your conscience as a cricket. Probably you pictured it as something more ponderous and imposing. But a cricket seems to fill the bill. Ever since ye ed saw the film he has been having cricket trouble.

A few days ago he thought of sticking up a couple of banks, and presto!—a cricket stopped him. That evening he had about decided to steal an automobile or something, when out popped a flock of crickets to make him understand that he would have cricket trouble all his life if he persisted. Today he thought of robbing a kiddie-bank and betting it all on a horse when he became fairly alive with the darned things.

That's what Disney's cricket is going to do to millions of Americans. It is going to make them cricket-conscious.

Scallywags, temporizers and the weak-willed in general are going to have a tough year unless they keep away from the movie houses.

Personally we never thought of our conscience as looking or behaving like a cricket until Disney brought it up. We thought it was much bigger. More like a penguin. That must be why it was so often ineffective.

But now we know it was a cricket all the time!

We remember the constant chirps. . . . "Hey, you'll be sorry." . . . "Lissen, you can't do that!"

Yes, it's a cricket all right. A good deal like Jiminey Cricket, too. Only he isn't a distance runner like Jiminey. He's more of a sprinter. He is quits after about 5 furlongs. Hey, cricket! Come on out on the track; you've got to be trained for stamina and endurance.

Prestige Counts

By Barnet Nover

The Diplomatic Front

EXCEPT for what happened in Poland during the first three weeks of September, the major battles in the present war have not been fought on the battlefields but in the chancelleries, not by generals at the head of marching armies but by sedentary statesmen and obscure experts equipped with weapons no more lethal than persuasive tongues and flowing pens and endless statistical tables.

War, said Von Clausewitz, is the continuation of national policy by other (namely, military) means. This war has differed from all others in that it has witnessed the continuation of policy for the most part by the same means as those employed in time of peace. These means include diplomacy, economic and financial pressure and the threat of force rather than its application.

That is why, except for the struggle at sea, no aspect of the war has been more important than the diplomatic. And while the diplomatic struggle has not been decisive so far, its potential bearing on the ultimate outcome of the war can hardly be exaggerated.

This is a war in which, because of the absence of large-scale fighting, the economic factor has assumed an importance it never achieved even during the last war.

Primarily for that reason it has been a war without neutrals. For while it is possible to be neutral in a military sense simply by abstaining from fighting for either side, it is almost impossible for a nation to be neutral in an economic sense. And none has been. Economically, so far as this war is concerned, every nation, near or remote, large or small, belongs in one camp or the other. In other words, they find themselves voluntarily or through the force of necessity neutral for and against one side or the other in the conflict.

To be sure, neither side has neglected the more conventional goal of war-time diplomacy, namely, to win military allies. But this aspect has been very greatly overshadowed by the efforts made to win economic allies.

In this struggle Germany won the first battle with the second Ribbentrop-Molotoff pact which definitely committed the Soviet Union to at least an economic alliance with the Third Reich.

The next struggle was won by Great Britain and France when they persuaded Turkey to make a military alliance with them and, what is of more immediate importance, to shift her sales and purchases from the Third Reich to them. The abolition by Congress of the arms embargo was also a great economic victory for the Allies. Their latest triumph occurred the other day when they prevailed upon Italy to promise to send no more ships to Rotterdam to haul away German coal. In return, the Italian colliers seized by the British blockade authorities were released and allowed to proceed to Italian ports. If, hitherto, Italy has been the economic as well as the political ally of Germany, she may now, perforce, move in the other direction.

That will depend, as the attitude of all the other European nations who still hesitate between both camps will depend, on certain tangibles and many intangibles. And of the latter not least important is prestige.

Prestige is something which can neither be weighed or measured. It is, for the most part, an estimate by one nation of another nation's strength and its readiness and capacity to use that strength. In wartime it comes very close to being an estimate of victory.

If, for instance, the nations along Germany's border are convinced that a German triumph is certain, their attitude toward the Reich will be far different than if they are convinced that Germany is doomed. And this estimate is not infrequently influenced, sometimes to a profound degree, by what third nations do.

There can be no doubt whatever that German prestige and hence its bargaining position vis-a-vis weak neighbors was considerably increased as a result of the Polish triumph. Nor can there be any doubt that Allied prestige suffered because of their failure to do anything to prevent Poland from being overrun.

That is one of the reasons why the diplomatic struggle over Finland during the last few days was so intense. Belatedly but nontheless clearly, the Allies came to realize that a Finnish capitulation on almost any terms would, particularly after their offer of large-scale aid, be a great victory of prestige for the totalitarian powers, a diplomatic defeat of major magnitude for them.

It would be wrong to assume that such a defeat would be fatal. Allied economic power remains no whit less great after the Russo-Finnish settlement than before; with Russia at peace, Germany will get more from Russia than she has been able to get hitherto, but that aid is hardly likely to be considerable for some time anyway. Nonetheless the repercussions of the battle over Finland are certain to be fateful throughout Europe and throughout the world.

The effect of Finland's capitulation coming as it did after frenzied offer of aid were made to that struggling republic by Great Britain and France may be particularly serious, from the Allied point of view, in Scandinavia and the Balkans.

The Scandinavian countries have been under terrific pressure from both sides; so have the nations inhabiting the Balkan Peninsula. The Moscow settlement swings Finland and Sweden into the Russo-German orbit. And the nations of the Balkans are certain to be more chary than ever of doing anything, regardless of Allied pressure, that might result in antagonizing Russia or Germany.

The jubilation in Berlin over the Moscow peace is justified. Germany is still very far from having won the war. But without lifting a finger, except in warning to Sweden, she has won a great battle.

How Many Jobless?

Catches In Calculations

BY AN INGENIOUS computation, my colleague, Miss Dorothy Thompson, has succeeded in wiping out from two-thirds to three-fourths of our unemployment problem. According to Miss Thompson's calculations, we have only 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 unemployed, apart from the 2,300,000 on the WPA rolls who she thinks should be classified as employed.

If true, Miss Thompson's conclusion would be pleasing and astounding enough to justify a special national holiday. Incidentally it would be sufficient reason for closing up the headquarters of the Republican National Committee and sundry Republican Presidential aspirants and conceding the election to the Democrats.

UNFORTUNATELY, Miss Thompson makes one fundamental error (not to mention two or three smaller mistakes). She assumes that the age-distribution of our population is the same now as it was in 1929. In December, 1929, about 38 per cent of our total population was employed. Since then our population has increased by about 10,000,000. Taking the 1929 standard, Miss Thompson concludes that only 38 per cent of these ought to be working. By adding this 38 per cent, or 3,800,000 workers, to those actually at work in December, 1939, she finds that our unemployment was only 2,000,000 greater than in December, 1929. Now, according to Miss Thompson, 37 per cent of our total population is actually at work, as against 38 per cent in December, 1929.

The painful fact is, however, that the increase in our population during the last ten years has been entirely in people of working age. The birth rate has declined. Actually, the number of people of working age has increased somewhat more than the total population. While our total population is now about 10,000,000 greater than in December, 1929, the population of working age is about 10,600,000 greater. (For population of working age the years 15 to 65, inclusive, are used.)

In December, 1929, about 62 per cent of our population of working age was actually working. In December, 1939, only about 51 per cent was working. (In both instances, housewives and other home workers not receiving salary or wages are, of course, excluded.)

A ROUGH CALCULATION of the extent of unemployment is made in this way:

In December, 1939, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, about 1,200,000 fewer workers were employed outside agriculture than the average for 1929. Actual physical production was about equal to the average for 1929. So a displacement, due to technological advance, improved organization of business, etc., of about 1,200,000 workers is indicated.

In the ten-year period the population of working age has increased by about 10,600,000. Taking the 1929 standard, about 62 per cent would expect to work. Here are 6,575,000 additional unemployed.

Add 2,000,000, as the estimated average unemployment in 1929. This unemployment may be regarded as "normal" but it is nevertheless unemployment. (Miss Thompson uses as a starting point the number of employed in December, 1929. According to the National Industrial Conference Board, whose estimates she seems to be relying on, 3,000,000 fewer workers were employed in December, 1929, than in September, 1929, so here are 3,000,000 unemployed to begin with, even assuming there were no unemployed in September, 1929.)

Here we have a total of 9,775,000 unemployed. We have not yet taken account of a possible, or probable, decline in employment in agriculture. There is technological advance in agriculture as well as industry. And in ten years our foreign markets for agriculture have diminished.

Nor have we taken account of seasonal unemployment in agriculture. In December, 1929, according to the Department of Agriculture figures, 1,500,000 fewer workers were employed on the farms than on the average during that year. During the winter months, there is always a seasonal addition to the total number of unemployed, due to lack of work in the fields.

The various estimates of unemployment are made up more or less according to this pattern. They vary at present from about 9,000,000 to more than 11,000,000. Numerous refinements can be made. For example, a larger percentage of youth 15 to 21, inclusive, are in school or college, and therefore off the labor market, than was the case in 1929.

On the other hand, probably a larger percentage of our total population of working age is looking for work now than in 1929. Miss Thompson used the example of an engineer with a wife, an 18-year-old daughter and a 17-year-old son who were in school. The engineer lost his job. Not only he, but his wife and his daughter and his son began to look for jobs. Thus the number of unemployed was increased by four instead of one. If the engineer gets another job and the children return to school, the number of unemployed may, likewise, drop by four.

THE ENGINEER'S case is not unusual. Undoubtedly the ranks of the unemployed today contain many people who would stop looking for jobs if the head of the family could find work for an adequate wage or salary.

But these extra work-seekers are not usually counted in the estimates of unemployment. The estimates assume that the percentage of the total population of working age that wants to work is no greater than in 1929. Actually it probably is greater, and the unemployment estimates should be increased accordingly. This was indicated by the registration of the unemployed—the Biggers census—taken by the Government in November and December, 1937. This revealed an extraordinarily high percentage of women seeking work.

If these extra, and perhaps temporary, work-seekers are added, the unemployment estimates, all around, probably would be from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 higher than they now are.

Miss Thompson's conclusion that the WPA workers should be counted as employed is a handsome indorsement of WPA. One hopes the politicians of both parties will agree that there should be no reduction in WPA employment next year, and will appropriate money accordingly.

On one major point Miss Thompson seems to be correct. That is that in real goods produced, our national income in 1939 was about as high as it was in the banner year, 1929. Here is something to be thankful for.

More Tablecloth Mathematics

Discourse In Dialogue On Arithmetic, Debt And Taxation

By Dorothy Thompson.

"AHA!" said the Grouse, and put down his coffee cup with a laugh. "You see we were right."

"Right about what?"

"About this unemployment business. Read Mr. Arthur Krock."

"What does he say?"

"He's been around looking at the Government statistics. And they agree by and large with my tablecloth figuring. . . . There aren't any 9,000,000 unemployed. In fact"—the Grouse was reading—"the official figures are more favorable than mine."

"Where'd you get yours?"

"From a couple of private economists, the Statistical Abstract of the United States, the World Almanac and the fact that I've had high school arithmetic."

"Don't brag, dear. What do Mr. Krock's figures show?"

"The Government's figures, not Mr. Krock's. They show that I underrated, not exaggerated, employment. I estimated that 48,609,983 people were employed in December, 1939, including WPA, and they put it at 51,865,000. I estimated 37 per cent employed, as compared with 38 per cent in 1929. Mr. Krock's Government statisticians say 39.6 per cent were employed, or above the 1929 percentage. But we come to approximately the same conclusion. If 1929 is the norm—and it's supposed to have been an all-time high—there are only 4,000,000 unemployed in this country, including those on WPA, and if 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 jobs can be found, everybody employable is at work."

"IN HEAVEN'S name, why hasn't the Government published the figures before this? Why, it's the best possible argument for the New Deal."

"Is it? Ah, that's the question. It may be a good argument for the New Deal or it may be a good argument for the incurable resiliency of this Nation's economy. It may prove one thing or it may prove something else. We'll go into that in a minute. But it's a very bad argument for what the radical New Dealers want to do in the future. And so the information is suppressed."

"But it's outrageous, not to tell the people the truth."

"Your name is Shirley Temple, and John Chamberlain was right when he called you a philosophical idealist. You think governments collect statistics for the sake of ascertaining facts."

"That's what we pay our taxes to hire statisticians for."

"The statisticians are honest men. They collect the facts. But the politicians use the statistics to support the particular case they want to prove. The New Dealers want to prove that Government should go on spending—that an emergency still exists. The bureaucrats want bigger and better appropriations. If it can be proved that there is no serious and continuing crisis they will have lost campaign material. They want to show that though things are better they are still bad."

"And the Republicans?"

"The Republicans, should they get the power, will also want to spend, for that is the nature of politicians. And they want to prove that the Democratic Administration has practically ruined the country."

"Isn't anybody interested in the truth?"

"In the facts, my dear. Say 'facts,' not 'truth.' Truth is elusive. And the answer is: Very few people are, and they are not usually listened to. Because the facts are often not dramatic and to make, let us say, a party platform and program on the basis of facts would require careful analysis and sober judgment. Neither is regarded as valuable for campaign purposes."

"You are cynical."

"No, resigned. But if you are interested in facts I'll suggest some more—and maybe some other journalist in Washington will check them."

"What facts?"

"I suggest to you that the real issue in all this spending-lending business is the question of whether Government taking and spending should be centralized or decentralized, whether it should be increasingly gathered up into the Federal Government, or distributed among the States, counties and municipalities. I suggest to you that what the New Deal has done has been to shift the debt and shift the patronage, without vastly increasing the ratio of debt increase that has been going on with acceleration for the last generation."

"EXPLAIN YOURSELF." . . .

"We will use the same method we used in questioning the unemployment figures," said the Grouse. "We forgot unemployment, and concentrated on employment, and we reached startling conclusions and upset a pet slogan. Now, let us forget the Federal debt and its rate of acceleration, and concentrate upon the indebtedness of States, counties and municipalities and their rate of acceleration."

ARTHUR KROCK
His calculations of unemployment and Miss Thompson's appear to agree

"Well, what do you find?"

"There ain't none between 1932-1940. The acceleration," said the Grouse inelegantly. "In fact, there is a decline. In fact, the States and counties and municipalities have reversed the whole trend of the previous generation. They have remained static, while the Federal debt has shot forward."

"What were they doing previously?"

"I wish you wouldn't write on the tablecloth."

"Writing on the tablecloth," said the Grouse, attacking the tablecloth. "The oftener it has to be washed, the more employment for laundries; the quicker it wears out, the better; the more ruined tablecloths the higher the purchasing power."

"Don't be silly."

"In the land of the silly behave like the silly. It gets you Government jobs. Besides, there's something in it. It's a way of redistributing income—income, my dear, not wealth. Some day we will ruin a cloth over this question of income and wealth."

"GET BACK to the subject."

"Certainly. What happened to the indebtedness of States, counties and municipalities under Messrs. Hoover, Coolidge and Harding?"

"The question is rhetorical."

"From 1922-'32 the total debt of such local governments rose from $8,917,000,000 to $18,112,000,000, or an increase of 103 per cent—more than doubling. In the same years the Federal debt decreased from $22,964,000,000 to $19,487,000,000—a decrease of 15 per cent.

"In other words, we had an increase of all public indebtedness of 88 per cent in the incredible boom decade of the '20s. That increase of 88 per cent occurred in spite of the fact that private borrowing was going on in such a fashion that it brought about credit inflation and a crash. Per capita of population, we had an increase of public debt incurred by local governments of 71 per cent in the boom years; in the previous decade we had a per capita increase in the indebtedness of the same bodies of 100 per cent. Since 1932 these bodies have not increased their indebtedness, but the Federal Government has."

"Well, anyway, the rate of public spending has accelerated."

"Not at a more rapid rate of increase than in the whole preceding generation. It has gone up steadily, no matter which party was in power. The local public indebtedness rose from $23.70 per capita in 1902 to $102.75 in 1932. It increased 71 per cent per capita in the boom years and 100 per cent per capita in the preceding decade. Well, when the local bodies stopped and the Federal Government began, the increase between 1932 and 1940 was 106.5 per cent per capita."

"PROVING WHAT?"

"Proving that a steadily greater proportion of the national income is being taxed, invested and spent collectively than ever before. And this happens to be true of every industrial country on earth. It happens whether conservatives or Socialists are in power. But this Administration has taken over from other public bodies practically the whole increase. WPA is nothing but the transfer to the central government of the functions previously performed by the local governments."

"Is that a good thing?"

"That is another question. The local governments might have done it more corruptly. The point is, can we halt the rate of acceleration? The employment figures and other statistics seem to indicate that we can.

"But you can't count on the politicians. Whoever controls the local bodies will want them to have the power of the purse. Whoever controls the Federal Government will want it to have the power of the purse. And the statistics will be used to prove whatever the politicians want to prove. As for the people—their function is to pay and to applaud."

Russian Spy Reported In Custody in Capital

Miami Beach, Fla., March 12 (AP).—Representative Dies prepared to close the Florida phase of his un-Americanism investigation today to return to Washington, where it was unofficially reported an important Russian spy had been taken into custody.

The Miami Herald said it had learned authoritatively that a man supposed to head a "Soviet spy ring" in the United States had been apprehended and would be taken before the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities, probably Friday. Dies is chairman of the committee.

George H. Balsley, 22, University of Virginia student.

Summerset S. Robey, 70, 1359½ Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

A watchman in the Evening Star building, Hanagan was on his way to work late last night when hit by an auto on Constitution avenue, between Tenth and Twelfth street northwest.

He was rushed to Emergency Hospital, but was dead on arrival. Driver of the car, Arthur G. Stevens, 41, of 2300 Eighteenth street northwest, was held by police for the inquest.

Winney, a retired plasterer, succumbed to injuries suffered in an accident February 10, when he was felled by a laundry truck in the 200 block of H street northeast. Police said he refused treatment, but later collapsed and was taken to Emergency Hospital. An old fracture of his left hip had been aggravated and required treatment. On February 16 Winney was transferred to Gallinger Hospital. An autopsy will be performed.

George Balsley, formerly of 4880 Glenbrook road northwest, died in an ambulance after an automobile accident near Gordonsville, Va. His companion, Walter D. Woodward, 22, of Richmond, Va., received extensive cuts.

Balsley was the son of Commander Alfred H. Balsley, U. S. Navy, executive officer of the U. S. S. Wyoming. Mrs. Balsley and her daughter, Mrs. Betty Hines, were visiting in Puerto Rico while the Wyoming was in the Caribbean. Informed of the accident, they left by air and are expected Friday.

George Balsley was in his fourth year at the University of Virginia, where he lived with his 21-year-old brother, Frank, and another student in "Little Pantops," a house on the outskirts of Charlottesville.

He attended St. Alban's School here and Valley Forge Military College before going to the university. Both brothers were taking the Reserve Officers' training course.

Balsley and Woodward were believed to have been returning to the university from Gordonsville when the accident occurred.

Operator to Appear

Woodward is the son of J. E. Woodward, of Hampton Gardens, Richmond.

Logan-Thomas Circle And Summit Park Groups Back Quiz

A House move for investigation of small-loan companies in the District won approval of two citizens associations last night, while two organizations voted against proposal to legalize horse racing betting here.

Logan-Thomas Circle

Opposition to legislation of horse racing here and protest against "exorbitant" fines for jaywalkers were voiced last night by the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association.

The organization discussed, but took no action on, a request by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board for indorsement of its policy in allowing citizens of the neighborhood to decide on granting of liquor sales permits. Investigation of loan sharks was given a vote of support.

The association held its annual dinner before the meeting at 1120 Rhode Island avenue northwest. It contributed $5 to the Metropolitan Police Boys Club fund.

Summit Park

The Summit Park Citizens Association last night voted its approval of the House resolution to investigate the activities of small-loan companies in the District, and commended Thomas E. Lodge for his administration as chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

The association also asked that Pennsylvania avenue, between Second and Seventeenth streets southeast, be improved by shrubs and grass in the center parking strip. The Health Department was urged to institute a refundable charge for milk bottles.

Stanton Park

The Stanton Park Citizens Association went on record in opposition to the Reynolds bill which would permit horse racing and pari-mutuel betting in the District.

The unit also asked Traffic Department officials to make a survey of the six-way intersection of Third and D streets and Massachusetts avenue northeast with a view to alleviating congestion there.

Appointed to the intergroup committee of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club were Mrs. J. Kidwell, A. H. Panzer and Vernon W. Cooper.

Senora DePelencia Speaks at Box Supper To Aid Migration

Forty thousand former loyalist soldiers face expulsion from French refugee camps and execution in Franco Spain, it was reported here last night.

Senora Isabel DePelencia, Spanish Minister to Sweden under the former regime, told an audience of 400 at the National Press Club that 200,000 Spanish refugees are held in French camps.

"There is a serious danger they will be forced to return to Spain," she said. "At least 40,000 of them would certainly be executed under the new laws of 'political responsibility.'"

Senora DePelencia charged that more than 1,000,00 men, women and children are imprisoned in Spanish concentration camps.

She appealed for contributions to aid migration of refugees from France to Latin America. Her listeners, to further this cause, had brought their own box suppers to the Press Club auditorium, paying 50 cents for admission.

Leon Henderson, member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, auctioned off supper boxes packed by Mmes. Louis Brandeis, Hugo Black, William O. Douglas, Harold Ickes and Francis Biddle. Representative Caroline O'Day (Democrat), of New York, and Lady Wilmott Lewis.

A bottle of champagne went for $10 to Gardner Jackson, legislative representative of Labor's Nonpartisan League, who paid $105 last December for letters purporting to establish a link between Representative Martin Dies and William Dudley Pelley, Silver Shirt chief.

The benefit supper was arranged by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot. Henderson is chairman of the local committee of the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign. Secretary Ickes heads the national organization.

Explorers Meet

A lesson for the United States can be drawn from the decline of civilization in the wake of soil erosion in North Africa, Dr. W. C. Lowdermilk, of the Soil Conservation Service, told the Washington round table group of the Explorers Club last night.

The speaker, who recently returned from a study of soil and of "the fate of the land" in Europe, North Africa and the Near East, appeared on the "African Night" program of the group, meeting at the Army and Navy Club. C. D. Manifole talked on "Liberia." William Henry Jackson, 97, of New York, who is known as "the father of the picture post card," told of his experience in photographing scenes with the Hayden Expedition to the western part of the United States some 70 years ago.

D. C. to Collect Income Tax While Waiting Court Test

While seeking a final court test on the taxation of persons "domiciled" here, the District will proceed without pause in the collection of the local income levies, it was reiterated yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The city heads yesterday admitted the United States Court of Appeals ruling, in the case brought by James J. Sweeney against the levy of an intangible personal property tax, was a "blow" to the income tax, but directed Corporation Counsel Seal to seek an appeal to the Supreme Court.

Meanwhile, Seal said he would meet tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. with Chairman Nichols of the House District subcommittee on Fiscal Affairs, to discuss a bill he drafted providing for a combination sales and personal net income tax for the District. Seal said Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, also a member of the subcommittee had requested a copy of the proposed bill. Representative Dirksen vigorously opposed the income tax measure.

Yesterday, Seal appeared before the Board of Commissioners, recommending the District ask the Supreme Court for an immediate review of the Appellate Court decision. The Commissioners were unanimous in their decision to seek the appeal. Seal said it would be a matter of "a week or ten days" before any action is taken on the application for a writ of certiorari.

The effect of the court's ruling on the number of persons filing a return on the income tax was "nil," according to Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent. More than 550 persons yesterday sought the aid of the District's special tax consultants in filing their returns. The average has been about 600 a day.

Corporation Counsel Seal advised local residents in doubt on the tax to file a return and pay under protest. He said that the District would require each protestant to prove he is eligible for the exemption implied by the Court of Appeals.

Seal insisted each case would have to be decided "on its own merits."

The bill drafted by Seal on request of Chairman Nichols provides for a 2 per cent sales tax exempting purchases of medicine, food commodities for use off the premises, products having a special tax such as gasoline and products sold to the Federal Government, and a graduated income tax on incomes above $10,000.

Lodge Denies Liquor Board 'Rule of Fear'

Chairman Defends Administration; Mrs. Mason to Testify

The District liquor inquiry will be concluded this week, Chairman Herman Eberharter, of the special House subcommittee, said yesterday as the committeee asked Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, vice chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, to testify today.

Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the board, who yesterday defended the administration of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, will be questioned further this morning.

Eberharter said he expects to end the public hearings this week after which the subcommittee will decide whether to drop the inquiry or to ask the House for funds to hire an attorney and conduct a more thorough investigation.

Lodge Denies Charge

Lodge denied that the ABC Board administers the law with "a rule of fear," but insisted it is not bound by the rules of evidence which govern court proceedings. The board is a quasi-judicial agency, he said, which is similar to independent Federal commissions

Members of the subcommittee during cross-examination questioned Lodge regarding charges he was autocratic, delved into irrelevant matters and was subject to various influences in reaching decisions.

Lodge denied all of the charges.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, asked the ABC board chairman whether he was influenced in any way by the fact that a former law partner, F. Joseph Donohue, is now associated with Milton Kronheim, jr., son of the leading local wholesale dealer in Washington.

"Not a bit in the world," said Lodge emphatically.

"Not a Dry at All"

Schulte also asked the witness whether he had promised "to clean up the city" when "campaigning" for his job.

"I did not campaign for the appointment and never made any such statement," Lodge replied. "In fact, I didn't know I was going to be appointed until 24 hours before I took the job."

When the question of influence of church and dry groups on the board arose, Eberharter asked:

"Then you're not an ultra dry?"

"I'm not a dry at all," retorted Lodge.

The ABC board chairman recommended that the 400-foot restriction zone around schools and churches be restored, and that the board be given more inspectors. In response to an inquiry from Schulte, he said he would favor a 10 p. m. weekday closing hour for package liquor stores.

Impartiality Claimed

He declined to express an opinion on restoration of the bar at which a customer might stand. He said he had a great deal of respect for the opinion of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, who made the recommendation, but that he wanted more time to study the matter.

In opening his testimony with a prepared statement, Lodge said that the ABC Board is bound to be criticized because of the controversial subject with which it deals.

"The fact that one group interested in the situation believes that the board is too harsh, while another interested group believes the board is too lenient seem to me to indicate that the board is administering the act impartially," he said.

The majority of licensees cooperates in general with the board, he said, in observing the regulations.

Nolan Cites Case, Scores Bail System

Convict Released Pending Sentence Arrested for Theft Of $117 in Goods

The District's system of releasing under bond persons accused or convicted of crimes was attacked last night by city officials and Dr. James Allen Nolan, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, after a study of the case of Aldo Pieri.

Pieri, 24, of 215 K street northeast, was ordered held for the grand jury in Police Court yesterday, charged with a crime for which he was arrested while he was free under bond pending sentence on a charge of robbery and three counts of narcotics law violation.

He was arrested an charged with grand larceny, Saturday, 18 days after pleading guilty before District Court Justice Peyton Gordon to the previous crimes.

Calls For Supervision

While pointing out that the police have yet to prove Pieri guilty of any other crime than those he admitted, Nolan called the case a "classic example" of weaknesses in the District's bail bonding system.

He called for supervision of persons on bond "as careful as the supervision of convicted offenders by parole officers." He said he believed the supervision ought to be made by bondsmen.

Speaking generally, and not of the Pierri case in particular, Nolan declared:

"Compulsion" for Crime

"A man free on bond might be said sometimes to be under a kind of social an l economic compulsion to commit another crime. Certainly he has no chance to make money within the law while under criminal indictment, yet frequently he finds it necessary to raise sums to pay attorneys and fees to the very bondsmen who make his liberty possible."

United States District Attorney David A. Pine, whose assistant, George E. McNeil, handled the Pieri cases, pointed out that his office is without power to determine when and how a defendant should be released on bond. Bond may not be denied before conviction, except in extreme cases, he said. It was added, however, that defendants may be remanded to jail to await sentence following conviction or pleas of guilty.

Pieri pleaded guilty February 21. Justice Gordon released him under total bond of $8,000, and referred the case to the probation officer for study. Friday Pieri was brought before the judge for sentencing. Sentence was postponed, however, because an attorney for another defendant was unable to appear.

Charged With Theft

Twenty-four hours later, Pieri, still free on bond, and a companion were arrested at Eighteenth and T streets northwest, by Lieut. Joseph Shimon and Detective Sergts. Harry Britton and Charles Carver. Packages the pair carried, according to Shimon, contained $117 in merchandise identified as stolen from a downtown department store.

In Police Court yesterday, Judge Edward M. Curran, raised from $500 to $2,000 the bond for Pieri's companion, John Edward Histon, 38, of 601 K street northeast. Bond for Pieri was set at the same figure, but he was unable to make it.

Miss Chiles is the author of a biography of John Howard Payne, who wrote "Home Sweet Home." In her addres at the Washington Club, she traced his career as actor and playwright. She explained that "Home Sweet Home" was written as part of an opera about a girl who was away from home and lonely. Payne, an American, wrote it during a stay in Paris, she said.

British Ambassador Greets Girl Scouts on Anniversary

British Ambassador Lord Lothian cut the Girl Scouts' twenty-eighth anniversary cake yesterday at their Washington headquarters. Winifred McGowan is the lucky girl getting the first piece

The Girl Scouts of America were greeted yesterday on the twenty-eighth birthday of their organization by the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, in a message broadcast from National Girl Scouts Little House, 1750 New York avenue northwest.

Lord Lothian praised the Scouts for "organizing happiness on a community basis." He said they "proceed from strength to strength because they are firmly rooted on the eternal principle that the first function of man is to love God and the second to love his neighbor as himself."

Mrs. Henry H. Flather, chairman of the National Little House Committee, received the Ambassador and other guests. An honor guard was formed by Girl Scouts in the uniforms of all countries affiliated with the Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, carrying flags of those nations.

Mrs. Henrietta Bagger Plum sang "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton," and a group of scouts sang "Ash Grove," under the direction of Mrs. E. B. Reid. The Ambassador cut the birthday cake.

Among the guests were Mrs. Wayne Macpherson, niece of Mrs. Juliette Low, founder of the movement; Mrs. H. C. Kramer, commissioner of District Girl Scouts; Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, jr., chairman of the Juliette Low committee; Mrs. LeRoy Barton and Mrs. A. S. Taylor, leaders; Mrs. Proctor Dougherty, chairman of the public relations committee; Miss Bessie Vine, director of Region three, and Miss Eleanor Durrett, director of D. C. Girl Scouts.

House Group Speeds D. C. Funds Bill

Amount to Be Kept In Line With Budget Figures, Caldwell Says

Rushing through the District budgetary estimates, members of the House subcommittee on appropriations indicated yesterday that the 1941 supply bill will be kept close to the $40,300,000 recommendation of the Budget Bureau.

After hearing officials of the Welfare and Police Departments and the schools, Chairman Millard Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, said the estimates are being considered carefully, but added, "We're not wasting any time."

"A more judicious expenditure of welfare funds will effect substantial improvements," Caldwell said.

He added that some additions above the estimates may be found necessary, but he indicated the increase would be small.

No increase in the personnel of the Metropolitan Police Department is expected to be provided, despite the plea of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, that more police are needed to combat crime.

Members of the sub-committee intimated that the total of the District supply bill will adhere closely to the Budget Bureau recommendations throughout and hinted that some cuts may be made because of the uncertainty of the return from the local income tax.

Caldwell said that Thursday afternoon will be devoted to the annual citizens forum. All hearings will be completed this week, although it is not known when the bill will be reported to the House.

District officials said the subcommittee is pushing the District supply bill with more speed than in any year within their memories.

Before starting the hearings, members of the subcommittee made inspection trips to all of the local welfare and penal institutions.

The subcommittee was enlarged at the beginning of the session to eight members by Chairman Edward T. Taylor, of the Appropriations Committee, in a move to have the House give more consideration to District fiscal problems.

Bar Drafts Lower Cost Service Plan

Modernization Of Capital Laws Also Is Urged By Association

A system of low cost legal service was proposed last night in a committee report adopted by the District Bar Association, meeting at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

Another report, urging quick passage of a Congressional bill to modernize District laws, denounced criminal and corporation laws here as "antiquated," asserted interest and usury laws needed "overhauling," and charged that dower and curtesy laws "have outgrown the usefulness."

Nathan M. Lubar, chairman, said the committee on low cost law services felt that a system could be arranged so that individuals of low income, who were not charity patients and who could afford to pay something, "should be given the opportuntiy of obtaining the same legal services any person of affluent financial means could obtain."

The most prominent members of the bar would be willing to cooperate, the report said.

The system proposes a central office, with a clerk registering applicants and qualifying them with the low income group. From there office clients would be referred to the individual attorneys listed for the purpose of advice, assistance or legal services. The clients would be charged standard fees fixed by the bar association.

The committee expressed the opinion that the low-cost service would help a large group of people who seldom seek legal advice or assistance because of the cost involved.

Acting on advice of the report the association voted to have the committee continue its study and outline definite plans for a low cost legal system.

Attorneys employed by the Bar Association to provide free legal aid in the Municipal Court assisted 1,425 new applications in 1939, an increase of about 5 per cent over the previous year, according to the report of Robert M. Gray, chairman of the committee on legal aid.

Preceding the business meeting the Bar Association held a memorial service for 14 dead members. They were John Paul Earnest, Paul Sleman, Royal C. Johnson, Frank W. Mondell, Robert T. Scott, Justice Joseph W. Cox, Gibbs L. Baker, Charles A. Douglas, Percy H. Marshall, James W. Beller, Charles Henry Butler, A. Coulter Wells, R. Golden Donaldson and Frank S. Easby-Smith.

Archbishop Vows to Guard U. S. Liberties

Spellman Invested With Sacred Pallium In Church Pageantry

By Walter Kiernan
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, March 12.—With a solemn pledge to defend the fundamental liberties of American citizenship, the most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, archbishop of New York, today was invested with the sacred pallium—symbol of spiritual leadership—in a ceremony as patriotic as it was rich in the colorful pageantry of the church.

Two possible nominees for President of the United States, the claimant of the lost Austro-Hungarian throne of the Hapsburgs, and as many church and lay dignitaries as could crowd into St. Patrick's Cathedral heard the archbishop's ringing declaration. In solemn, measured tones, he affirmed:

"In the presence of God and before all of you I confess my Catholic faith. I profess and glory in my American citizenship. I pledge myself to defend our fundamental liberties shining as they do like flaming jewels in our frame of government, priceless and precious.

Rebukes Critics

"I am for all our freedoms and our freedom. I am opposed to tyranny, even though it call itself freedom. I am opposed to anarchy even though it call itself liberty. I am opposed to traitors though they wave American flags and call themselves patriots. I am opposed to lawlessness and violence in speech and action.

"I believe in America, in the fundamental righteousness of our Constitution, the basic righteousness of our people in their sincere desires to live in harmony, helpfulness and peace with their fellowmen and in obedience to her laws and the commandments of the church."

The archbishop expressed gratification over President Roosevelt's designation of Myron C. Taylor as his personal envoy to the Holy See with the rank of Ambassador so that, in the President's words, "Parallel endeavors for peace and the alleviation of suffering would be assisted."

Of opposition to that step, he said: "It is disconcerting to hear criticism that implied a preference to have men continue to slay one another rather than have peace through the cooperation of a Catholic and an Episcopalian.

Archduke Otto Attends

"The Holy Father is not alone the supreme head of the Catholic Church," he said. "He is also head of a sovereign state. Thirty-eight countries have representatives at the Holy See.

"Nobody protests because President Roosevelt has an Ambassador to Great Britain, even though King George VI is the head of the Church of England."

Tydings and Wallace Join Chorus of Praise for Hull

Secretary of State Hull, reputedly President Roosevelt's own candidate for 1940, received glowing praise last night from Secretary Wallace and Senator Tydings, who was one of the targets of the 1938 Democratic purge.

Two other speakers at a "Democratic forum" conducted at the Carlton Hotel by the Women's National Democratic Club, paid their respects to the Administration's foreign policies.

In the latter category was Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, who read an address prepared for delivery by his brother, House Speaker William B. Bankhead, himself a candidate for 1940.

A fourth speaker was Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University, who, like Bankhead, praised existing foreign policies.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace described Hull and the State Department as "shrewd bargainers in making tariff treaties.

"I think that few people realize," Wallace declared, "how hard and realistic in bargaining our State Department really is. Most people think Secretary Hull is an idealist, with his head in the clouds. He may be a Tennessee mountaineer, but he's cut his eyeteeth in Washington for a good long time."

Senator Tydings, who a few hours before had attacked from the Senate floor White House efforts to end his Senatorial career in 1938, declared:

"One of the striking features of the recent conduct of our international relations has been the apparent desire of our Secretary of State, the Honorable Cordell Hull, to promote trade between nations.

"In the face of tremendous obstacles, he has assiduously clung to his task."

In his prepared address—his regard for Hull developed during a panel discussion that followed the addresses — Secretary Wallace charged "short-sighted" policies of Republican administrations with partial responsibility for the European War.

Wallace, in reply to a question from the audience, denied the contention that high wages for labor were the result of high tariffs. "Generally speaking," he said, "high wages depend upon a high ability to produce. Tariff-protected industries sometimes have lower wages."

Speaking of domestic problems, he characterized southeastern United States as agriculture's sorest spot. The section, he said, "enjoys a standard of living below that of European peasants."

Rail Fares Cut To Minimum 1.5-Cents a Mile

By the Associated Press

New York, March 12.—Eastern railroads announced today a sliding cut in round-trip coach fares to a minimum of 1½ cents a mile in connection with the 20 per cent reduction in one-way fares ordered last month by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

D. T. Lawrence, chairman of the Traffic Executive Association of the Eastern territory, explained the roads adopted a "descending scale," with a 2-cent fare for the first 100-mile one-way distance, graduated downward to 1.5 cents for the longer distances.

The new rates, both one-way and round-trip, become effective on March 25.

The commission's order required the carriers to lower the coach fare to 2 cents from 2½ cents, a rate which had been in effect for more than a year on an experimental basis.

Political Lever Seen in Lower Farm Rates

Revision of the farm credit system would give the Secretary of Agriculture a "terrific political lever," Representative Pace (Democrat), of Georgia, told the House Agriculture Committee yesterday.

Pace raised the question of political pressure on farmers in hearings on a bill which would lower Federal farm loan interest rates and retire capital stock in the land banks.

"You and I want to see farmers get as low interest rates as possible," said Pace. "We don't know who the next Secretary of Agriculture will be, but it seems to me there's a terrific opening here for political considerations." He estimated by lowering to 3 per cent the interest rate on land bank loans, and on land bank commissioner loans, the bill would give the Agriculture Department control over about 85 per cent of the Nation's $7,500,000,000 farm debt.

Gov. A. G. Black, of the Farm Credit Administration, who testified before the committee, indicated he believed such fears groundless. He said a provision in the bill calling for use of "productive value" as a basis for appraising refinanced farms would leave the way open for other considerations in making sound appraisals.

While Black made clear he was speaking neither for nor against the bill, he declared that it would not be "unhealthy" to enlarge the Federal farm loan system, "even to the extent of having practically all the eligible mortgages." At present the system covers about one-third of the total national farm credit.

Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, said that under the bill, the Farm Credit System "certainly would not absorb all the agricultural loans." He said that losses, under the proposed Government guarantee of land bank bonds, would be reduced, Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska, said he believed losses would be greatly increased by removing the farmer's share in ownership of the banks.

The committee today will hear testimony from William Thatcher, legislative chairman of the National Farmers Union, who said he would support the measure.

Milwaukee's Socialist Mayor Leads in Primary

Milwaukee, March 12 (AP).—Daniel W. Hoan, Milwaukee's Socialist mayor since 1916, took a 4,155 to 2,940 vote lead over Carl F. Zeidler, his closest opponent, as returns from the first 33 of the city's 435 precincts were counted tonight at the close of the "nonpartisan" primary municipal campaign.

Trailing third behind Hoan, who is seeking renomination to his eighth term, was Attorney Earl Lillydahl with 1,247 votes.

Massachusetts avenue west entrance (right) of the Thomas Circle underpass, the District's largest highway project. First car will pass through at 10 a. m. tomorrow

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

In all its buff-and-blue, $500,000 splendor, the new Thomas Circle underpass was thrown open for a public and official preview yesterday.

The buff-colored tile walls with dark blue trimmings glistened under indirect lighting; the eight ventilating fans whirred with annoying discomfort to the ears and the proud sponsors grinned broadly as they exhibited their latest contribution to traffic betterment.

There was considerable comment on just what and what has not been achieved by the District's largest highway project.

It was agreed that the tunnel, itself, was a masterpiece of workmanship. It also was agreed that the two-way underpass would undoubtedly relieve Thomas Circle traffic congestion. But officials withheld comment on the surface changes—a system of channelized traffic lanes dotted with an array of 58 vehicle and pedestrian lights—until "we see it work."

Commissioner Hazen assured the press and public that "this project is only the beginning."

"We won't be satisfied," he said, "until similar jobs have been done at Dupont and Scott Circles. This, I'm sure, is going to prove a revelation to both motorists and pedestrians."

Several visitors to the Thomas Circle preview—official and unofficial—expressed grave misgivings anent conditions at the tunnel's west exit. It was obvious to observers that a "bottleneck" has been created by surface construction and cars leaving the underpass are very likely to come in violent contact with cars traveling Massachusetts avenue adjacent to the exit ramp.

"Traffic is supposed to converge at that spot and if cars keep in their own lanes, everything will be all right," said Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

"Anyway, there would only be little sideswipes," volunteered Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, emphasizing "little."

Whitney Leary, chairman of the traffic advisory council, was "very much impressed" with things, but added:

"While we have the utmost confidence in the way this has been worked out, we want to wait and see how it goes. I'll be disappointed if everything doesn't work smoothly."

The tunnel—two lanes in each direction—is 415 feet long. From ramp to ramp, the distance is 1,000 feet. Interior of each tunnel is 22 feet wide. There will be no chance of monoxide gas accumulating because of eight ventilation fans.

Two large pumps, capable of draining 30,000 gallons of water a minute, will keep the underpass free from moisture.

First cars will enter the underpass at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Maeterlinck's 'Blue Bird' Is Temple Springboard

Technicolor Fantasy Is Booked for Easter; The Circus Changes Its Mind and Dates; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

WHEN THEIR DIMINUTIVE DUSE, Shirley Temple, slipped from the leadership of the world's cinema box-office last year, Twentieth Century-Fox—which is by way of saying Darryl F. Zanuck—thought they ought to do something about it.

Perhaps her vehicles had not been all that they should have been. Possibly she was outgrowing the distinctly juvenile picture-plays in which she had been cast. Maybe any number of things. Anyhow, something had to be done. That something turned out to be a new picturization of Maurice Maeterlinck's imaginative and lilting fantasy of "The Blue Bird" accorded a preview screening yesterday afternoon for the drama desks.

BELL

Beyond the claims of any earlier production of "The Blue Bird," the present opus boasts the advantages of superlative Technicolor and musical embellishment. It also can lay legitimate claim to the most distinguished supporting cast with which the prodigious Miss Temple ever has been surrounded. To name only a few of them, there are in the contributory ensemble Spring Byington, Nigel Bruce, Gale Sondergaard, Sybil Jason, Eddie Collins, Jessie Ralph, Laura Hope Crews, Cecilia Loftus, Gene Reynolds, Claire Du Brey—back from the obscurity that has enveloped her since the old silent days of her stardom—Sterling Holloway, Thurston Hall, Edwin Maxwell and an imposing list of others.

All of which takes me back a few years to the time when Tom Moore presented an earlier "Blue Bird" at the Strand, then the top picture house of the town, the Rialto, Palace, Metropolitan and Capitol, nee Fox, not yet having become even so much as prophetic blueprints. It was our job to write and stage a prologue for the picture, which, incidentally, also opened in an Easter week—just as Miss Temple's will. Maybe the prologue was what ailed it!

Mr. John Ringling North, the present mainspring of "The Greatest Show on Earth," has changed his plans. Instead of deferring its visit to the Capital until June, as recently exclusively reported in this space, the Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey Circus will put in its appearance for a three-day local stand on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 16, 17 and 18. This moving forward of the schedule seems to be due to the fact that Brooklyn has been deleted from the show's itinerary. It will open under canvas, for the first time in its history, in Baltimore the first three days of the Washington week and will play Philadelphia after, instead of before, the Capital. This rearrangement of dates will give this city a glimpse of the circus' speed when it is pressed for time. It will be the first time in years that the tent show will be set up on the day of its arrival in town. Heretofore, it always has come in on Sunday and gone leisurely about its business, with wide-eyed fans gaping from the sidelines. You'll have to stay up all night to get the same "kick" this time. And again I am indebted to Melvin D. Hildreth for the information. The circus would be in a tough spot without Mel. So would this column.

So the Jody Baxters turned out en masse. Some 250 aspirants for the title role in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's forthcoming picturization of "The Yearling" presented themselves to William Deering, M-G-M talent scout, at the Mayflower on Monday. The remaining line was so long that he remained over until 5:30 p. m., yesterday to give all applicants a fair chance. Out of the total number, about 10 showed signs of promise as a future Jody. Their names have been written down for later calling in the national finals.

One wonders if it was contradiction or corroboration that prompted John Monk Saunders to hang himself by the neck until dead a day or two ago. I met John first in 1928, when his screen play of "Wings" was bringing Buddy Rogers to stellar eminence. His theory was that heroes are a race apart. Ordinary, hum-drum individuals in the usual walks of life, they respond with superhuman courage when confronted with acute emergencies. In a blaze of inspiration they meet extraordinary situations with extraordinary daring and then, more often than not, slip back into the stereotyped pattern of their lives. This conviction of Saunders' was later expressed in "The Dawn Patrol" and others of his film plays. When he and Fay Wray were honeymooning here at the Mayflower after an elopement from an Eastern Shore motion picture location in Maryland, there was no premonition of this week's tragic demise. I wonder what John was thinking when he tightened the noose?

Woo-Woo Note

The bathroom scene is kept in in "Lady in Waiting," the dramatization of "The Nutmeg Tree," starring Gladys George, coming soon to the National. But how?

In Hollywood

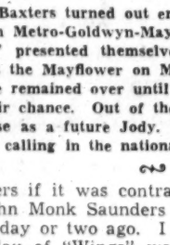
Hollywood, March 12.

"Corot's in a back seat,
Rembrandt's eyes are wet,
Romney looks astounded,
Disney's in the 'Met'" . . .

So wrote H. I. Phillips in The Washington Post when Walt Disney crashed the inner sanctum sanctorum of the country's greatest art museums. Mickey, Pluto, Dopey, Pinnocchio, and even the tiny rabbits from Snow White" are now among the revered objets d'art in the intellectual world. Walt, whose genius extends far beyond the animated cartoon and into the business world, recently put several thousand studio originals on the market. And now connoisseurs plus the general public are clamoring for them. Mrs. Isabel Hopkins at her Casa Manana Hotel in La Jolla had over a hundred of the Disney originals for sale. Told me they are an absolute phenomenon on the art market her gallery was jammed with buyers. Had so many sales she had to hire an extra bookkeeper.



HOPPER

One 9-year-old tot came in with a $100 check and said "Grandma gave me this for my birthday, and I want $100 worth of animal pictures." Disney doesn't claim that his work is art. But 20 important museums, including the Metropolitan, have purchased Disney originals for exhibition, claiming the works as examples of "the new American art."

So now, with Mickey Mouse rubbing elbows with the great in art galleries, the rest of the world will probably sit up and take notice (that is if they still think of such things.) And maybe, even realize that America is not only the Nation that turns out their best war machinery and occasionally floats a nice, fat loans, but also has its own culture. And to think it came from Hollywood! ! !

When Johnny Weissmuller heard that an eastern radio station was going to do a Tarzan series and use his famous "yell" which he originated, and therefore, he thinks, should belong strictly to him, his attorney advised him to make a record of the yell. He did, and now it's on its way to the United States Patent Office.

Milton Gropper, the Broadway playwright, is working on a story which will wow you. His novel, "Grounds for Indecency," which picture he wants Ginger Rogers to do.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 12.

DR. GLENN FRANK: Within the next few days, Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins will announce plans for a conference with economists for the leading business firms of America, to compare notes. . . . Christopher Morley: That dispute you've been having with foreign literary agents, concerning the percentage of royalties for the sale of "Kitty Foyle" in Italy, now is academic. The Italian government has banned the sale of that book. . . . Laurel and Hardy: A new comedy team soon will start using the name "Laurel & Hardy" for a vaudeville tour, and you won't be able to stop them—because they're using their real names. The team will be composed of the wives you recently divorced—Ileana Laurel and Madelyn Hardy.

SAM GOLDWYN: John Barrymore is entitled to some of the credit for the success of "Wuthering Heights," the movie for which the New York Film Critics Circle awarded its prize to you this year . . . During the estrangement between Barrymore and Elaine Barrie, Charlie MacArthur sat with John and asked him about the romance. Barrymore used the most eloquent phrases to describe his yearning for Elaine . . . And so MacArthur incorporated these burning love-passages in the script he and Ben Hecht wrote for "Wuthering Heights."

DRAMATISTS GUILD: John Gunther, author of "Inside Europe" and "Inside Asia," now is writing a play. . . . Martin Manton: Lepke Buchalter, whom you once released on bail—which resulted in his becoming a fugitive for more than two years—is expected to join you at Lewisburg Penitentiary, but not for a long. Prison officials insist that, despite FBI promises, their recommendations will not prevail—he'll eventually spend his Federal term at Alcatraz. . . . Heywood Hale Broun: Your father's famed whisky-flask for which you bid at the Broun auction now belongs to Carl, the waiter at "21." Joe Brooks, whose bid was highest, gave it to him.

LUCIUS BEEBE: All the articles written about Oscar Levant describe him as a slovenly dresser. As a matter of fact, Oscar at one time was among New York's best-dressed men. That was when he was younger, and unknown. . . . He'd go to London every year, and his tailor there would make five new suits for him, annually. He had money, but few people knew about him. . . . Now that he's become famous, he hasn't as much money, and has no time for tailoring.

FRANCHOT TONE: Ernest Hemingway didn't come to the premiere of his show "The Fifth Column" because—as he told his friends—"I don't like the theater. And I don't like actors." . . . Jim Farley: The Townsendites are making a big recruiting drive for a Youth Organization. Their plea is: "Join our fight, we'll retire the elderly folks, and then there'll be jobs for you." . . . Thornton Wilder: Phil Wood, who portrayed the Choirmaster in the movie version of your play, "Our Town," died last Sunday. He had just finished his role—which called for him to stand among the dead on the hilltop, in the closing scene of the film.

CHUCK FENSKE: Glenn Cunningham, whose retirement from competition at Madison Square Garden was announced at the K. C. meet Saturday night, will race again—as part of an All-Champions track meet for the benefit of Finnish Relief. . . . Paavo Nurmi isn't permitted to race, because of an old ruling against him, resulting from a question concerning expenses he received for a meet in Sweden. The Finnish Relief Committee wanted to ask the A. A. U. to waive the prohibition against his racing, but Nurmi is proud, and refused to let them do it. . . . When he posed with Maki and Herbert Hoover, he wouldn't smile for the camerman—even though the Finnish Consul General urged him to. "This," explained Nurmi, "is not time for a Finn to smile."

GOV. HARRY HORNER: One of the nation's biggest oil men, now in Florida, will pop into the headlines soon, because of his contributions to the insurgent campaign funds in the Democratic primary in Illinois. It concerns the backing of Lieut. Gov. Stelle. . . . Jack Dempsey: Dorothy Lamour, who made a free guest-appearance at your Dempsey-Vanderbilt Hotel in Miami Beach, discovered that she could get $2,000 from other cafes there, for doing the same thing. And so she's completing plans to return to night-club work in Miami, next season. . . . Westbrook Pegler: One of the principal men associated with the new musical, "Louisiana Purchase," was in Seymour Weiss' hotel room, when a phone call came resulting in the income-tax settlement in return for campaign support.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA: The printing racket investigators have unearthed an irrelevant but amusing sidelight in their current inquiry. On April 29, 1939, a full-page ad extolling your virtues was published here . . . The ad carried a small foot-note announcing that the space had been donated by the civic-minded Burland Printing Co.—the company you recently barred from bidding on municipal contracts.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 12 (INS). I strongly suspect that there is a deal brewing between Samuel Goldwyn and Darryl Zanuck. I hear, unofficially, that Goldwyn and United Artists may settle their battles with a compromise and in that case Sam will be free to make outside affiliations. Today Zanuck bought a half interest in the contracts of Virginia Gilmore and Dana Andrews from Goldwyn. Together they will groom other promising young people with the hope they may find some movie talent.

LOUELLA PARSONS

A word about Virginia Gilmore, who for seven months has undergone all sorts of major changes—teeth, figure and so on—to say nothing of dramatic training to fit her for the Hollywood battle. Zanuck will introduce her to the public in a modernized version of "Bad Girl," the movie that brought Sally Eilers and Jimmie Dunn stardom. The history of the Gilmore girl is interesting. She was working in a department store in San Francisco when Goldwyn discovered her and brought her to Hollywood.

A tragedy that shocked Hollywood today was the suicide of John Monk Saunders. Brilliant and erratic, he was at one time one of the best known writers here. He authored "Dawn Patrol" and other war-time successes. More shocking than Saunders death was poor Fay Wray's reaction.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Cary Grant and Phyllis Brooks seem to be taking up where they left a few months ago; Hanley Stafford, "Baby Snooks" papa, on the radio, is marrying Viola Vonn April 12. They will honeymoon in Honolulu: Marguerite Clark, who shared the movie throne with Mary Pickford years ago, arrives in town this week and will be feted at a cocktail party by the Edmund Lowes; was that Alex D'Arcy with Arleen Whelan at the Bublichki? The David Selznicks at Arrowhead Springs away from the excitement of "Gone With The Wind" taking the baths and resting. They played bingo in the big room with all the visiting firemen and had fun; Bette Davis came to Bob Taplinger's cocktail party with Arthur Farnsworth and a few minutes later Anatole Litvak arrived alone. He departed with Miriam Hopkins who also was by herself.

Alice Faye making her first appearance since her break with Tony Martin, at the Victor Hugo. Her escort was Sandy Cummings, an advertising man; Loretta Young and Tom Lewis, still an item, at the Cafe Lamaze; George Brent returns from Honolulu on Saturday and Ann Sheridan couldn't be happier; Dorothy Lee and her former husband, Marshall Duffield, of all people, ring-siding at Slapsie Maxies; Myrna Loy is back from the home town, ready to report this week at M-G-M for her next movie with William Powell; Lucille Ball is suffering with wisdom tooth trouble; Dr. and Mrs. Sayle Taylor entertaining in honor of William Jewell of the college debating team at Earl Carroll's. His guests are the Joe E. Browns, Rudy Vallee, Patricia Dane, Arleen Whelan, Virginia Carpenter, Dr. Harry Martin and this writer.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

A Woman's New York

Puk Paaris Continues Publicity Drive

New York, March 12.

THE hottest job of press agenting seen around this town in some time has centered on the exquisite person of a girl who calls herself Puk (pronounced Pook) Paaris, a blonde model who hails from up Scandinavia way. I suppose all this hullabaloo is the outcome of her desire for a Hollywood shot, and of course her pictures look very fetching in the paper.

HUGHES

Pook's publicity barrage really began when she got out a summons for a broking gentleman named Gaston, on the grounds that he kept calling her up at four in the morning, desiring serious talk about "life" and other cosmic matters. Then the press got at her for details of this and other matters concerning her, and she gave the boys and girls some very slick copy. For instance, two of her best beaux have been Burgess "Buzz" Meredith and Franchot Tone, two of our leading squires about town.

The ever-obliging Pook came to bat with the announcement that she is 85 per cent in love with Meredith, who is soon to star in the revival of "Liliom" with Ingrid Bergman, the new Swedish sweetie. Thus we are permitted to guess that Tone is a mere 15 per center. Or maybe the remaining 15 is scattered. The two gents in question have had nothing to say, being smart, and the charge against the broker was quietly dropped, after it had made the newspapers. He, too, quickly faded out of the Pook Paaris picture.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Col. Chuck Lindbergh must be a happy man these days. He and his highly talented missus go charging quietly about town, and no one pays him any mind, which is what he likes. Of course, the Colonel is not "news" at present, and anyway, he is very unpopular with the bulk of the press. I saw him on the Avenue the other day, and the crowd didn't seem to recognize him. He looks very well, and very young, and it must be nice for him to just walk around unmolested.

Navy Blue Spring Song

Pompadour Effect, Also Bangs in For Young Women

The general style trend in coiffures for the younger woman is hair lifted on the sides and waved upwards. Front section is arranged either with bangs or with a definite pompadour effect. Instead of being combed straight down to soft curls, the back of the head is swirled and waved, according to Miss Jean Jolie, fashion editor of Beauty Culture magazine.

Miss Jolie reports that a recent meeting of 12 New York hair stylists who are guest artists at the International Beauty Show in New York now in session, these 12 decided that the trend for spring would be toward the wave and curl combinations.

"This means," says Miss Jolie that the small type rolls and curls have been eliminated and in their place are lifted wings, puffs and swirled effects. These are much more graceful and certainly more flattering and feminine than any hair arrangements in a long time. Hair will be tapered to an average length of between four and five inches, which is not too short and allows enough body to the hair. The wave and curl combination is in my opinion an outgrowth of too many seasons of two years ago and last year's extreme styles."

Pineapple Gem Pie Influences Appetites

FROM the tip of its snowy meringue topping to the crust that lines the pie-pan, pineapple gem pie is a masterpiece of pleasing flavor contrasts. It's the kind of dessert that will appeal to every member of the family, as well as guests. It is a fruited version of the cream pie which combines a smooth cornstarch filling and fluffy meringue topping.

The filling is made as usual with milk, eggs, sugar and cornstarch which have been combined and cooked until smooth and thick in the top of a double boiler. The sirup, however, drained from a can of pineapple gems, replaces a little of the milk in the usual recipe. This addition of fruit sirup to the filling gives it a delicate pineapple flavor. The following is the recipe for making this dessert.

Gem Cream Pie

Heat 2 cups milk, but do not boil. Mix 3 tablespoons flour, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add slowly to hot milk, stirring constantly until well blended. Cook until it starts to thicken, add ½ cup sirup drained from gems, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and the grated rind of 1 lemon, continue cooking and stir constantly. When thickened pour over 3 beaten egg yolks a little at a time. Return to heat and cook 3 minutes longer. Add 1 tablespoon butter and remove from heat. Cool. Pour into baked pie shell. Arrange 14-ounce can pineapple gems over the custard and top with a meringue made by beating 3 egg whites until stiff but not dry, and 6 tablespoons sugar, add 2 tablespoons at a time. Bake in a moderately slow oven, 325 degrees until puffy and golden brown. Yield 6 to 8 servings.

Protein Diet of Movie Stars All Right With Added Vitamins

By Ida Jean Kain

YOU have probably been hearing the "high protein" diets. Some of the movie stars have taken them up and that seems to be all that is needed to set a fashion in food or anything else.

One of the most talked about protein diets is the chop and steak version. You have fruit juice and black coffee for breakfast; two chops and a green vegetable for lunch, and a lean steak and a green vegetable for dinner. Such a menu is high in protein and low in calories. You would feel fairly well fed on it and you would lose weight.

Protein has a distinct advantage for the reducer. To some extent, protein speeds up the body processes, enabling you to burn more food or to burn it at a slightly faster rate. If you think of food in terms of fuel, protein is like kindling—it makes the fire burn faster.

Nitrogen Important

But the idea that the more protein you eat the more you reduce is an erroneous one. Protein contains 113 calories per ounce, the same number as carbohydrates. When more protein is taken than is needed for the body's repair work, the excess is then used as energy. And when you take more protein than you use in energy, you certainly will not reduce.

When protein is used for repair, the nitrogen it furnishes plays an extremely important part in this work. But when protein is converted into energy, the nitrogen must be excreted through the kidneys. For this reason, no one should go on a very high protein diet without his doctor's permission.

The chop and steak diet is all right as far as it goes. You need protein, and it is provided in an excellent quality. But the menu is inadequate, for it fails to supply sufficient amounts of the vitamins A, B and C. It is also deficient in the minerals, calcium and phosphorus. To balance this menu, you would have to add a glass of skim milk to the luncheon and dinner menus, more green vegetables to the menus for minerals and bulk, and, in addition, supplement the daily diet with one A, B, C vitamin concentrate.

The whole thing resolves itself to the principles of the adequate diet . . . A good reducing diet must supply all the essential elements, calories excepted. Assuming you are too fat, you can safely draw on the stored calories for energy.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Craves Plain Sunny Wall Coverings; Wife Gives Him Nile Green, Bilious Pink, etc.; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What can a mere man do when his wife forces him to live in the midst of colors which give him the heebie-jeebies? I detest pink, blue and green rooms. My wife knows it. We have been married a good many years and I have not been backward in expressing my views about colors. But for some strange reason women think men don't know anything about colors.

We have a pink drawing room,—that terrible pink one sees in sea shells. Our dining room is a sort of bilious green which makes me shudder every time I enter there. Our central hallway is papered with a conglomeration of red and green which gives me the nightmare.

For years, I managed to keep my study walls painted cream, and my bedroom painted in a slightly lighter yellowish tone. I like plain, restful walls. But while I was away in Florida fishing, this winter, my wife had these rooms done over,—and you should see them. The study is painted Nile green, and the bedroom is a delicate electric blue.

An interior decorator was called in to supervise the complete refurnishing of both rooms, my wife told me with great pride. I'd like to choke that decorator. I hate to be regimented. I hate rooms that look like millions of other rooms and haven't the slightest individuality. I should like to throw ink all over my study walls and force a return to neutral yellow walls. I'd like to have my old, comfortable furniture back in place. My wife and her beloved decorator (if there really was a decorator) haven't left me a restful spot in my home.

There will be a monumental row if I declare myself and have my two rooms done over to suit my own taste. Should I do it? Or would you advise me to suffer in silence? IRRITATED HUSBAND.

Atmosphere of Peace Beats Arty Decor

DEAR I. H.: Come the revolution in which you throw off the yoke of wifely tyranny and take an irrevocable stand for cream-colored walls in your own private suite—you'll find me right behind you with the second brickbat, if you get my meaning. I believe that fair-minded judge and jury would hold you bullied and persecuted beyond the limits of man's endurance, in being obliged to contend with an "interior decorator's" choice of "Nile green" and "delicate electric blue" wall coverings in your masculine sanctuary, when all the while your soul cries out for an atmospheric backdrop that is symbolic of sunlit air.

Speaking as one tired mind to another, I endorse your color choice without qualification or reservation. I know from experience the "heebie-jeebies" engendered by bilious, assertive or conglomerate-colored wall paperings. Give me the "airy" colors,—the diaphanous creams, the translucent grays, which seem to dissolve encroaching walls into nothingness before one's very eyes. Because I believe your color sense is infinitely more civilized than your wife's (judging from the evidence submitted), I think you are entitled to strike,—and boldly!—for the right to express it in at least one corner of your home.

With deadly calm or roaring belligerency (as best interprets your temperament), tell your wife that the worm hath turned; that either she gets busy and restores your retreat to its original condition, or you take leave of her—AND that decorator's phantasy which she calls home—for a stay of indefinite length at your club or some men's hotel. Tell her the length of your stay will correspond with the length of time it takes her to bring back cream colored walls to your bedroom and study, and to put your comfortable, familiar furnishings back in place.

Or, if you cannot sincerely utter and execute so downright an ultimatum, just quietly ring up a painter or paper hanger and ask him to stop by at an appointed hour with a book of samples. When he comes, choose your paint (or paper) and make a date for renovating your private suite under your personal supervision. All finished with him, muster your time-tested furnishings out of storage and into position, and do what you like with the decorator's tentative replacements. Having carried your long overdue revolt thus far, you may be fired with sufficient courage and enterprise to carry the war into the enemy's camp,—by demanding a "compromise" choice of wall coverings in the communal quarters of drawing room, dining room, entrance hall, etc.

It is an acid commentary on your wife's lack of generosity and wisdom, that she would stubbornly override your preferences and bait your idiosyncracies in regard to colors. After all, a man's home is his castle, eh what? And usually his money buys what goes into it—so why shouldn't his likes and dislikes be accommodated there? Someone should tell your wife that an authentic atmosphere of peace is the greatest artistic achievement in home-making. Thus, if the colors she obstinately introduces in her home produce a contrary effect, they are "poison" colors, even though, in the abstract, they might beguile the senses of an esthete.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Stretching Exercise Aids Actress

Hollywood, Calif.—Nell O'Day, Warner Brothers' new import from the New York stage, keeps her figure slender with one, and only one, exercise. In addition to her badminton, swimming and riding Miss O'Day practices a stretching exercise every morning and night.

She stands erect with feet apart, hands hanging limply at her sides, the whole body relaxed. Then with one movement Nell tilts her chin, the rest of the body in the original position, and tenses every muscle at once from the toes up. In this movement she concentrates on stretching the muscles of the abdomen and hips.

Pearls Preferred By Bette Davie

Hollywood, Calif.—Bette Davis has played so many costume roles lately in which she was literally dripping with jewels that she deliberately underplays this item in her personal ensembles.

Miss Davis likes the simplicity of snow white pearls. At a recent function she wore a white crepe dinner gown, gold embroidered at the waistline with braid and small beads. The same touch tipped ears, exposed in an upswept coiffure, with small crescents of gold and pearl beads. Bette wore no other jewelry.

Pinchots Fete Former Spanish Woman Envoy

Senora de Palencia, Once Minister To Sweden, Entertained at Tea; She Is Here on a Lecture Tour

HOPE R. MILLER

In this country on a brief lecture tour, Senora de Palencia, will be off by plane today for Boston and will go from there to New York. Whether she will remain around these parts to finish her book on life as a diplomat, she does not yet know. But chances are she will complete it in Mexico, where she has made her home for the past six months, and where her family is living now.

Informal from first to last was yesterday's gathering in Mrs. Pinchot's spacious and handsomely furnished second-floor drawing room. The Pinchot home is one place where, when you are invited for tea, you really have tea—instead of cocktails—along with a variety of delicious sandwiches and cakes.

Mrs. Leon Henderson, smartly turned out in a hunter's green ensemble featuring a wide-brimmed matching hat, presided at the tea table; while the hostess mingled in a gathering that assumed sizable proportions before it drew to a close. Half an hour later, the crowd had dispersed, as most of the guests were going on to the benefit "box-supper social" at the National Press Club auditorium.

Receiving with her husband yesterday afternoon, the hostess wore a floor-length frock, made with a dark green satin skirt and a figured brocaded jacket, fashioned on fitted lines. All in black, with the exception of an exquisite amber necklace and bracelet, was Senora de Palencia.

Among those who dropped in to chat with her were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Etone, Leon Henderson, Dr. Don Louis Quintanilla, Mexican minister-counselor; Aubrey Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Straus, Mrs. Teresa K. Liss, and many others.

LATER, SENORA DE PALENCIA was the featured guest speaker at the "box supper" fete given for the benefit of Spanish refugees who will be transported from France to the Latin-American countries.

A large number of notables were on hand for the event, which was high-lighted by the auctioning off of eight boxes prepared by some of the guests. Leon Henderson, chairman of the local Spanish Refugee Committee, was auctioneer.

Among those who entertained a large party at the event were the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold. Their company, which gathered at the Wardman Park apartment of Mrs. Wesley Sturges and then went on to the Press Club, included Mr. and Mrs. William P. McCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, Dr. Edward Acheson, Lowell Mellett, Mr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle and several others.

Prominent women who prepared suppers that were sold "by the box" included Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mrs. Hugo Black, Lady Lewis, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Representative Caroline O'Day, and many more.

Mrs. Pinchot was in charge of arrangements. And, as somebody in last night's gathering said, "Anything Cornelia Bryce Pinchot puts her hand to—is sure to turn out a success."

STILL THEY COME: Add another name to the list of titled Britishers scheduled for a visit to Washington this season. Arriving March 25 will be Sir Stafford Cripps, who will be widely feted during his stay. He served with the Red Cross in France during the last war, and has held a number of important positions since then.

And that reminds me—the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady will gather in a few friends at tea-time this afternoon to meet a couple of visiting notables—Frank Ashton-Gwatkin, who is adviser to the British blockade ministry, and Prof. Charles Rist, who holds a similar position with the French blockade ministry.

HERE AND THERE: John Gunther, author of the best-sellers, "Inside Europe" and "Inside Asia," will write his next book here. It's to be called "Inside America." Incidentally, Mr. Gunther recently spent some time here on his way back to New York from Florida. Reports have it that he will write a play before he returns to Washington, takes a house in Georgetown and settles down to begin his book.

Speaking of plays—when Vincent Sheean was in Washington early in the winter, he told friends he was planning to write a play. He did—in ten days. It's entitled "The International Incident" and will be on the boards shortly.

SOCIETY CAVALCADE: Mrs. Francis Biddle, who will observe her second "at home" of the season this afternoon, will leave tomorrow for Philadelphia to attend the performance of the Choric Players tomorrow evening. Her poem, "Plain Chant for America," will be presented on the program to be given at the Play and Players Theater under the direction of Emile Beliveau, of New York. Works of Alfred Kreymborg and Amy Lowell will also be included in the evening's entertainment, which will combine the best features of the old Greek chorus, straight drama and the tableau effect. Mrs. Biddle, as you know, writes under the name of Katherine Garrison Chapin.

OFF TO NEW YORK yesterday afternoon was Mrs. Edward Acheson, who will spend the next few days at the Hotel Chatham. Dr. Acheson will join her there the end of the week, and on Saturday morning both of them will go to Middeltown, Conn., where Dr. Acheson will be an usher at the wedding of Winthrop Lorin Warner and Louise Bunce. The Achesons will return to Washington Saturday night, and on Sunday, they will entertain a few friends at a picnic at Rolling Valley, their farm in Virginia. Another fete on the Acheson calendar is the cocktail party they are planning for Tuesday, March 19.

Miss Bakenhus, Dr. Beck Wed

Dr. and Mrs. Lyle Vibert Beck are on their wedding trip following their marriage in Philadelphia last Saturday at noon. The couple will make their home at 3645 Locust street in Philadelphia upon their return.

Dr. Beck is the son of Mrs. Harry Fowler, of Los Angeles. The Rev. M. Franklin Daskam, officiated at the ceremony in the Germantown Unitarian Church.

The bride, who was escorted by her father, wore a blue costume with a matching hat and a bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Her matron of honor was Mrs. Herbert Wochele, of Cleveland. Dr. Conway Zirkle, of the University of Philadelphia, was the best man.

A breakfast at Alden Park Manor followed the ceremony.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Great Grandson of Geronimo Paints Murals for the Department of Interior

ALAN HAUSER, great-grandson of Geronimo, who was the last of the Apache chiefs, is one of the Indian artists, who has been dwelling quietly in our midst here working on murals in the Department of the Interior. Mr. Hauser appears as un-Indian as his name; wears ordinary clothes and lives unromantically in a boarding house. He resembles his race, however, in that he is exceptionally silent.

The United States Government spent thousands of dollars and lost hundreds of men trying to eliminate the artist's great-grandfather, about whose life a movie was recently made. Geronimo fled to the mountains of Mexico with about a hundred men and women of his tribe and put up an heroic resistance before he was conquered. Mr. Hauser studied at Government schools for Indians and has a studio in Santa Fe

Young Archduke Otto, pretender to the nonexistent Austro-Hungarian throne, and his brother, Archduke Felix, were dallying with an unexciting dinner alone the other night at a local hotel. Where were Capital hostesses that evening?

At one dinner given for the Hapsburg scion during his stay here, all the ladies curtsied and some even called him "Your Majesty." The other guests, who included one Cabinet member, were told by the host that they must not leave until Archduke Otto had departed.

WHILE SKIING in New England booms, hospitals in little towns there are sharing in the general prosperity. One erstwhile struggling institution in a Vermont hamlet has grown so rich off ski casualties that it has built an extensive new wing. On another mountainside a sign reads: "Please be careful while skiing. Our hospitals are already full."

Latest Washington victim is Edward Burling, jr., who returned from Canada with a broken leg. Also back, but sound in limb, are the Creighton Peets, who spent several weeks in St. Sauveur with the Burlings. They report that the woods up there are full of novices either from or well known to Washington. Among them they ran across Flora Mather, of Cleveland, niece of the Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi, who frequently visits here. She says that she will come again in the spring.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY seems to have sagged into a between-season doldrum, but better times are coming. Already many parties are being planned for April, and there will be dozens of debutantes this spring. Arthur Bradley Campbell will definitely present his two attractive cousins, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser, to Capital society. The trio arrives from Palm Beach April 3 and will stay at the Hay-Adams House.

The two girls were brought up in England by their great-aunt, the late Marchioness of Huntly. Marjorie has a pilot's license and both are good at sports.

ANOTHER VISITOR promised for April, whose interests, however, are as far away from a debutante's as could be imagined, is Constantia de la Moura. She is the Spanish aristocrat, who gave up her money and lands to join the republican cause and recently wrote her autobiography, "In Place of Splendor," telling of her experiences in the recent civil war. A refugee from her country, she is now living in Mexico, where she is a neighbor and friend of Mme. de Palencia. The latter spoke here last night at the box supper given for Spanish refugees.

Attache and Wife Entertain Chileans

The Commercial Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell entertained at dinner last evening in the Shoreham Blue Room in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Guillermo del Pedregal, who are visiting here from Chile.

In the company were the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Cabero, the Minister from Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle, the Minister from Paraguay and Senora Fernandez, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Dr. and Mrs. Oscar D. Albertini, Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris.

D. A. R. State Conference Closes With Banquet

Federal Security Administrator McNutt Addresses District Group at Mayflower; Mrs. Harry Oberholser Elected Regent

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

The annual state conference of the District Daughters of the American Revolution closed with a banquet last night at the Mayflower Hotel, addressed by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt. The banquet followed the day's business session at Memorial Continental Hall when election of officers took place, with Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser heading the slate as state regent.

She succeeds Miss Lillian Chenoweth, who has served for the last two years, and will take office at the time of the Congress of the National Society, in April. Other new officers are Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, of Susan Reviere Hetzel Chapter, vice regent; Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, Elizabeth Jackson Chapter, chaplain; Mrs. Roy C. Bowker, Potomac, recording secretary; Miss Margaret Naylor, Livingston Manor, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edgar E. Good, Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter, treasurer; Miss Ruth Ann Parker, Captain Wendell Wolfe, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Claude A. Cook, Col. James McCall, registrar; Mrs. Jesse Scott Arnold, President Monroe, historian; Miss Phebe Ann Ross, Columbia, librarian.

Discussing the position of the United States in the face of the international situation, the Federal Security Administrator declared it should give us no reassurance that this part of the world was the only one in which freedom prevailed.

He asserted that the Nation, thoroughly aroused to the dangers of war, was giving the attention deserved to our military and naval defense for the first time in a quarter of a century. "Our people have learned the lesson in time to avoid disaster. We have learned that only the strong can be secure in a world dominated by power politics. This time we are prepared."

"Our defenses against an enemy are good. But what of our internal strength? In the final analysis, a nation is no stronger than the morale, the health, and the strength of its people. Wars are not won on the battlefields alone. A nation of citizens, however loyal, cannot stand the physical, spiritual, and economic strain of a costly and protracted international struggle unless they comprehend and believe in the principles involved; unless they love their country above all else; and unless they have the moral stamina to make supreme sacrifices for what they believe to be right and justice.

"While we build up our Army and our Navy and our air defense, let us not neglect the great work of building firmly and securely the kind of society implied in our ideal of democracy."

Miss Chenoweth presided at the banquet, wearing a white organdy gown, embroidered in pink and blue flowers. Mrs. Oberholser, the incoming regent, wore aquamarine lace.

A shower motif was carried out in the decorations, with the flowers drooping in graceful sprays from tall vases and little umbrellas the favors at each place. In an amusing skit, a surprise feature of the program, Irving Bucklin, dressed as a woman good-will emissary from England, presented Miss Chenoweth with a large umbrella as a "goodwill gift from the queen."

The skit and the favors were all planned by Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg in keeping with the shower of gifts for the new chapter house to be purchased with the funds raised in her golden jubilee committee's button drive. In addition to reaching its goal of $1,000 for the fund of the National Society, D. A. R., the committee collected $750 to be used for chapter house furniture. Mrs. Holzberg, Mrs. Alexander Bell and Dr. Ella R. Fales will survey the needs of the new clubhouse before the gifts are decided on by the state board. Mrs. Harry C. Groves is chairman of the chapter house committee.

Among the guests at the regent's table were Mrs. McNutt, Representative Wall Doxey, of Mississippi, and Mrs. Doxey, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general; Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, president of the National Society, Children of the American Revolution; Robert Tracy, vice president general of the Sons of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Tracy; Frank B. Steele, of the Sons of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Steele; Miss Page Schwarzwaelder, treasurer general; Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general; Mrs. Henry C. Swann Sinclair, regent of Virginia; Charles Colfax Long, State president of the Sons of the Revolution; Chalmers Seymour McConnell, State president of the Sons of The American Revolution; Mrs. William Sherman Walker, of the National Coalition. The newly elected officers also were seated at the table.

The music for the banquet was provided by the Marine Orchestra and by Miss Maxwell Galloway, soprano, who sang, accompanied by Mrs. Lois Marshal Hicks, State chairman of music for the D. A. R.

At the morning business meeting yesterday, Mrs. William H. Wagner, chairman of the Junior American Citizens Committee, presented a check for $350 to R. C. A. Cammerer, vice president of the Boys Club of Washington, for a cabin to be built at Camp Reeder, Md., and to be named in honor of Miss Chenoweth. It will be completed by July 1 and will house ten boys.

Mrs. Wagner also presented a check for $20 to Miss Ruth Robbins, director of Holiday House, of the Girls Friendly Society, where the D. A. R. sends many of the girls it sponsors at summer camps.

Boys and girls of the junior American citizens groups gave a program at the morning session, with Joyce Hendricks as announcer.

Through the approved schools committee, of which Mrs. Orie E. Gibson is chairman, the District daughters will give money for a room in the new annex of Tammassee School to be named for Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig.

A two-day session of the thirty-fifth annual State convention of the Maryland D. A. R. will convene at the Belvedere Hotel in Baltimore today with Mrs. Wilbur Blakeslee, State regent, presiding. The motif of the conference is the golden jubilee of the national society. Mrs. Charles Herbert Brown is chairman of conference arrangements, with Mrs. John Collinson as vice chairman.

St. Mary's Alumnae

Alumnae of St. Mary's School in Raleigh, N. C., will hold a dinner tonight at the Parrot Tea Room. Miss Letitia Knox, 3125 Cathedral avenue, is in charge of reservations.

A. A. U. W. Fetes Poetry Winners at Dinner

Poems of Student Winners in Contest Read by Miss Walker

Poets are those who record experiences we've all had and who find their poems in the midst of everyday life, Robert P. Tristram Coffin, told members of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women last night.

Mr. Coffin, one of the three judges in the annual poetry contest sponsored by the branch for students in local universities and colleges, is here from Brunswick, Me., and spoke at the dinner given at the clubhouse honoring the contest winners. He is the guest of his cousin, Philip O. Coffin, and Mrs. Coffin, both of whom were present, accompanied by Mrs. George S. Patton, wife of Col. Patton, commandant of Fort Myer, herself a writer.

Miss Rose Parkman, chairman of the poetry committee, announced as the contest winners, Rex Lowman, of Gallaudet College, first on "Arachne;" Ariel Mengarini, a premedical student at George Washington University, second on "This Is November;" Margaret Pallansch, a senior at Trinity, third on "Thought," and Elizabeth Hanlon, also a senior at Trinity, fourth, on "Patriot, 1939."

These were selected from among 60 poems submitted by 25 students. Judges, in addition to Mr. Coffin, were Isabel Fiske Conant, of Brookline, and Lura Beam, of New York, a member of the national board of the A. A. U. W.

The prize poems, which were read by Miss Alberta Walker, of the faculty of Wilson Teachers College, were discussed by Mr. Coffin before he read from his own works and talked on poems and poets in general.

"I don't go at it in a mysterious or ritualistic way," he said of his own writing." I keep my eyes open, see what everybody sees and record the incidents and episodes in a form easily understandable—giving pleasure to those who recognize in them their own experiences."

Mr. Coffin defined poems as "commonplace experiences with a middle, a beginning and an end." Living is poetical but pointless, he said. Most people do not take time to think it through. The poet does. He expresses what others feel. His poems are a codification of experiences we all have had. People read them and say: "I've felt like that; I've done that."

"They lived the experience but didn't know there was a poem in it at all," said Mr. Coffin. "The poet finds his best poems in the street, on the plain, under the trees. I call mine Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday poems, because they are from the middle of a week-day world. Sunday poems are more rare—You don't have to wait for Sunday to find them but you won't find Sunday ones unless you keep in practice all week.

"Poetry, unlike science, does not deal in remote, abstract principles. The poet always has his hands full of substantial everyday things. The philosopher writes of justice as a principle—the poet defines it in substances"—And then he reads from his poem, describing the mother and father bird feeding their young returning to the nest all day long, with no thought of whose turn it was or which had been fed last.

"A poet is always putting different kinds of good substances together," said Mr. Coffin. "Most people enjoy winter and summer separately. The poet brings them together," he said, illustrating with his poem describing the little boy, wading in "lakes a thundercloud had made on the lawn" that felt like winter on his bare feet, while there was summer all around.

One of the prize-winning poems also illustrated this combining of the seasons. It was that by Ariel Mengarini:

THIS IS NOVEMBER

Wind-warped and postled
The lindens.
How faint
A dry leaf rustles
A dry complaint!

From green to yellow
The lindens' shawl.
From babble to bellow
The waterfall.

From love-note to leaf-tone
The bobolink.
Pack up your cretonne
And don your mink.

O, but life was a flower
For bees to loot!
The first fall shower

Ihlder Talks On Housing

"The Housing Problem and What Can Be Done About It" was discussed yesterday afternoon before the housing group of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters by John Ihlder, of the Alley Dwelling Authority. He spoke at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Claudius Bennett on Klingle road.

Discussing the fundamentals of the problem, Mr. Ihlder defined it as that of having enough good dwellings at prices their occupants can afford to pay.

"It is therefore an economic problem, the crux of which is the housing of the low-income group," he said. "The problem is that of poor people living in poor houses.

"In dealing with it, the cost of the house must fit the income of the family and the endeavor must be to cut the cost of the house and raise the income so as to bring the two in closer relation to each other.

"For those in comfortable circumstances, private enterprise is adequate to provide housing. How far down the scale private enterprise can and will go is for it to determine. But, no matter how far it goes, there will always be some whose incomes are too low and for them public enterprise is necessary."

Mrs. Chester Williams, chairman, presided.

Bess Goodykoontz Queries Alumnae Of Mortar Board

How many high schools are there in the United States? How many college students, teachers, school children and what is the cost of education per child each year?

These were some of the questions put to members of the alumnae chapter of Mortar Board, national honorary sorority for senior college women, last night at their annual banquet by Miss Bess Goodykoontz, assistant United States Commissioner of Education. Miss Goodykoontz, a member of Mortar Board, was guest speaker and, in addition to discussing some of the projects of her office, she entertained the members with a quiz. The banquet was at the Dodge Hotel.

Every two years a census of education is taken, she explained. This being a census year she tested the members on some of the factual information assembled. Answering questions others could not, Miss Goodykoontz told them there were 1,600 high schools and a third million college students, 1,000,000 teachers, 26,000,000 children in school and that the cost of education is approximately $70 a year per child.

Miss Goodykoontz also told of the educational survey of all 48 States now being conducted by the Office of Education.

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 12.—One of our favorite characters on the Washington Ball Club is Clyde Milan, coach of outfielders and spinner of tall tales. His poker face, as he draws the long bow and blandly tells a whopper, would have been worth a fortune to Arnold Rothstein.

POVICH

The Nats' rookies who have been listening to Milan's yarns of hunting ever since camp opened here three weeks ago don't know yet whether he has been making sport of them or whether he is, indeed, a combination Daniel Boone-Deadshot Dick. Not until he reaches his own room does Milan indulge in a chuckle.

"I'm no better shot with a rifle than the average Texas native down my way in Lubbock," Milan will explain. "But you have to knock down everything you shoot at to tie us. If you miss one, you're beat."

The funniest thing happened last fall, according to Milan who was addressing a big audience of lobby-sitting rookies in the Nats' hotel last night.

"We're coming home from a hunting trip, eight of us, when the warden grabs us. We're in a tight fix, 'cause we've got nine deer and one deer per gun is the limit. That warden wouldn't give us any chance to explain, durn him. He said, 'Milan, you're coming along with me. The rest of you can go.'"

"How come he singled you out, Clyde," a rookie asked.

"Oh that warden was pretty smart. He said 'Milan, that ninth deer is yours. It's shot through the heart.'"

He used to have a bird dog, he was saying, that he always thought was the best bird dog in West Texas until one day the fool pup apparently went completely haywire on a point.

"That pup got a point on some quail in front of some marshland one day and when I flushed 'em and they flew up over the water, I banged one down. The bird fell into the water and for some reason my dog wouldn't retrieve it. He just stood there pointing on the edge of the water until I walked over and started to investigate. That dog didn't have a point on the quail. He was pointing a big bass that was just lazing around the pool. I lashed the pup right across his rump for his foolishness. But that night I was sorry I did it."

Came the inevitable "Why?"

"Well, you see, I reached down there and grabbed that bass and that night when my wife was cleaning it for eating, there was the quail in the fish's innards. What a nose that pup had for a bird."

He used to get a laugh, Milan was saying, from the tenderfeet that came down his way to hunt in their store-bought outfits with the latest thing in high-powered blunderbusses. "I used to turn a pretty penny taking 'em out in the deer season.

"We had a fellow down there from Boston one day and we told him all the rules. We told him not to shoot just because he saw something moving, because it might be another hunter. We told him he had to see three prongs on an animal befoore he could fire.

"Well, he went out alone one morning and came back after a bit all excited. He rushed into camp kind of shaking like and said 'Where's Jim?'

"I told him Jim was out tinkering with the car."

"'Where's Joe?' he said, all excited like.

"'Joe's in his bunk', I told him.

"He wanted to know if Sam was in the kitchen.

"I said, 'Yes, why?'

"And he said, 'W-w-well, th-then, I g-g-guess I sh-shot a deer.'"

That particular Easterner wasn't so bad, though, as the tenderfoot Milan had in tow last season, Milan was saying. He waited for somebody to prod him with a "Why not?" and then spun this one.

"This fellow goes out on a cold morning in his car looking for a buck and drives as far as he can toward the woods. The last thing he does is take a big fur laprobe he has in his car and drape it over the radiator so it won't freeze up on him. Then he sets out.

"He dosen't know so much about those woods and apparently he gets all turned around but he wants a shot at a deer badly and then all of a sudden he draws a bead on something. He cuts down with everything he had in that gun, but he never did knock over what he was aiming at, so he pulls a brand new store knife out of his belt and figures he can finish it off easy with that knife.

"When he reached his deer was he surprised."

Milan got the "why?" he had been fishing for.

"Well, you see, when that tenderfoot got within knifing distance he found he had shot that lap robe and his car radiator full of holes."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Miami, Fla., March 12.—The competition in big league baseball is getting a little tougher each year, but paradoxically the jobs are getting easier, old Syl Johnson was telling us today.

The ancient pitcher for the Phillies, who is starting out on his twenty-first year of baseball, 17 of them in the majors, looks back a full generation and he sees sharp changes in the way men are handled today.

CONSIDINE

"A kid coming in today has pretty much of a snap of it if he's got the stuff," the kindly old boy mused, as he squatted in the lobby of his hotel after a workout.

"Today a kid gets good coaching, careful handling, better equipment, the benefit of better training methods, more money and a dozen other things—compared to what we used to get. The old timers help the kids today. In my day as a rookie they treated us like dirt."

"Hell," swore the old gent, "when I was with the Tigers in the early '20's it was as good as a rookie's life to grab a bat and start for the plate to get in his raps. One of those old guys would yell, 'hey, where you going?' and shove him out of the way. Bucky Harris went through a whole spring training season one year with the Tigers—when Cobb, Heilman, Veach and those great old timers were around—and got up to the plate only once. Can't say how he made it that time.

"It was the same way with pitchers. We used to pitch our arm off in batting practice. Now they have special fellows for that. And we always pitched the early season games—you know, the chilly days in the spring. The old fellows wouldn't want to take a chance on their arms."

Old Syl, who is listed on the Philly roster as a coach but who will see plenty of service this year in the box, thinks baseball gets better all the time, however. "The average kid coming in today is better than the average kid of 20 years ago," he said. "Smarter, too. They know how to treat him, and how to help him."

He thinks the strangest thing ever happened to him in baseball was that Arky Vaughan twice hit him on the chin with line drives, with the same runner on third base, and that the ball each time ricocheted back to the catcher who scoped it up and got the runner trying to score from third. Happen last year and the year before.

Old Syl said he wasn't in a position to say much about the relative merits of the two leagues.

"They treat me fine over in this league," he said, "and there isn't a finer man to work for than Mr. Nugent. He pays real well and he'd pay us more, if he could afford it.

"As for the National League, we've got a few boys who can really hit that rock, but my goodness, they've certainly got a lot of them in the American, haven't they?"

Old Syl would like to be an umpire when his wrinkled arm finally gives off its last wheeze, which gives you some idea of what a stretch with the Phillies does to a man.

Last summer we wrote a little piece about a fine, hopelessly dare-devil kid named Walter Buro, who was shooting himself out of a catapult at a swimming pool in Lake Mohawk, N. J., each Sunday afternoon the device, home-made, flung him nearly 100 feet through the air and about 40 feet high—and sometimes it knocked him out and they'd have to fish him out of the pond. But he figured that some day Billy Rose or the circus would discover him, and he'd be in the dough.

One of the newsreel companies asked him to put on a show for them down here the other day. Something went wrong. One of his legs buckled under the savage thrust of the awful device, and today the doctors snipped off his leg.

He was no fool, no matter how foolhardy his trick was. He took these fearful chances in the hope of getting a start in life, and he lost. He was, and is, a good brave kid. We hope this terrible accident won't lick him.

Harris Happy Over Success With Shifts

3-Way Move Depends on JimmyPofahl

Bucky Believes New Positions to Be in Capable Hands; No Sour Notes Crop Up

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 12.—Every phase of his tri-cornered experiment with the regular line-up is working out to the high satisfaction of Bucky Harris, the Nats' manager indicated strongly today. Not a single sour note has cropped up to disturb him despite the broad scope of his new plan for a stronger Washington club.

Third base, shortstop and right-field—the three positions Harris is attempting to bolster by a startling shift of talent—appear to be in capable hands. Harrris told interviewers.

"The key man in the new steup is, of course, Jimmy Pofahl," said Harris. "If he can't give us a good performance at shortstop I'll have to scrap the whole strategy of moving Cecil Travis to third base and Buddy Lewis to the outfield. But I'm not worried over Pofahl."

Travis a "Great"

According to Harris, the expensive rookie from Minneapolis is justifying the glowing reports turned in by the men who scouted him for the Washington club. "He scrambles after a ball and comes up with it like the kind of a shortstop a manager is always grateful for. He ought to be Washington's best shortstop since Joe Cronin. I'll wager Pofahl will hit timely if he doesn't bat .100. And his throwing arm is good enough."

Harris approached raptures when he discussed Cecil Travis at third base, the position Travis has reinherited after four years at shortstop for the Nats.

"He's certain to be a great third baseman, and I mean great. He doesn't have to come up with a ground ball cleanly. He can knock 'em down and whip 'em out at first base with plenty to spare with that powerful arm. He looks like a more solid third baseman than Buddy Lewis ever was, and he won't have the worries he had when he was playing shortstop. Travis' batting won't hurt us any, either."

Gamble on Lewis

Harris admitted that probably his biggest gamble was the shift of Buddy Lewis from third base to rightfield, but he is not sorry that he is taking it.

"We don't have anything to lose," said Harris, "and if Lewis can play the outfield like I think he can, it will be a real windfall."

"Notice the way he goes back for a ball. That's what I like. Most anybody can go either side or charge in for a fly ball, but only the good outfielder can go back a long way. Lewis does that."

"If Lewis resented the shift to the outfield I would be worried. But he's happy about it, and with youth on his side he has a tremendous asset. There never has been any doubt about his throwing arm so far as I am concerned. He can throw. And any move that can keep Lewis' bat in our line-up certainly figures to be a tremendous help to the Washington club."

Bruins Take First Place On Freak Goal

Boston, March 12.—The Boston Bruins, battling for the Prince of Wales Trophy, tonight moved into first place in the National Hockey League race on a freak third-period goal by Eddie Wiseman. The Bruins defeated the New York Rangers, 2 to 1.

With less than two minutes to play, before a sell-out crowd of 16,304 at Boston Garden, Wiseman took a pass from Art Jackson and his soft shot at the Ranger goal. Ranger Goalie Dave Kerr made the save but the puck hit his stick, bounced over and rolled in for the deciding goal.

Expecting a preview of the Stanley Cup playoffs between Bruins and Rangers, who have alternated in the lead during the late part of the season, another 10,000 persons staged a rush on the gates of Garden, but were unable to gain admission.

A brilliant skate save by Goalie Frank Brimsek in the closing seconds of the game, prevented a Rangers' goal by Neil Colville, who broke through the Boston defense and slammed a fast shot at the Bruins' nets.

Practice Reveals G. W. Grid Prospects Bright

By Jack Munhall.

The George Washington football squad, now romping through spring practice sessions on the Polo Field, may never develop into a national champion but at least it has three distinctions.

First of all the 50-odd huskies trampling the gray-green grass into misshapen clods comprise the largest squad the Colonials ever whipped together. Secondly, they are the biggest physically, and thirdly, they have enough coaches for about three tables of bridge.

Actually the "brain trust" is not large, consisting of Head Coach Bill Reinhart, Line Coach Gene Shields and Freshman Coach Ray Hanken. But hovering about for various reasons are such former G. W. gridiron stars as Tuffy Leemans, Zu-zu Stewart, Bruce Keahey, Sunny Jones and Bob Nowaskey.

Neemans, the New York Gianis' backfield star and one of the greatest of professional players, has a dual purpose in lending assistance to Reinhart. He is conditioning himself for the next professional season and at the same time acquiring experience that will prove invaluable should he later decide to have a fling at a coaching career himself. For that same reason Jones and Keahey, the Colonials'

Denny Shute's Golf Future In Balance

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 12.—Denny Shute, former holder of the British open and American Professional Golfers Association championships, underwent a wrist operation today and will not know for six months whether he ever can compete again.

SHUTE

A cyst was removed from the bone of his right forearm at the wrist joint and the defect was filled with bone grafted from his shin.

His surgeon said Shute's condition was good, that he was pleased with the operation and that the golfer could "hope for a normal wrist." Shute will be unable to play for at least six months, the surgeon said, and will not know until then whether he has regained full use of the wrist.

Sleeping Baby Aids as Typos Win Thriller

Petworth's Four-Man Stand Futile, 37-33; Bolling, J. C. C. Win

By Walter Haight

Perspiring men are fighting for a leather ball. There's the thud of body against body and the shriek of the referee's whistle. Spectators shout and stomp. That's one scene.

A little baby is sleeping under a pink blanket. There's the mellow strains of a radio orchestra coming through the door, opened just a crack. In the next room a man sits reading a book. That's another scene.

Ordinarily there would be nothing in common between two such scenes. Last night there was a connection. It decided a championship basketball game in the District A. A. U. tournament.

Typos Win, 37-33

The United Typewriters, 1939 unlimited class champions, defeated the Petworth A. C., 37-33.

While visions of sugar plums danced through this little tot's head she was an accessory before and after the fact that Petworth's colors were forced to go down flying.

For 34 minutes of the battle, Petworth outplayed its hgihly-touted rival, holding the lead from the start until Guard Schwaner, who had been playing enough basketball for two men, fouled an opponent. The timer's whistle blew. This was Schwaner's fourth personal foul. Reluctantly he walked toward the Petworth bench.

But as far as Petworth's substitutes were concerned, the cupboard was bare. Coach Jack Haas looked at the ceiling, scratched his head and wandered toward Referee Dave Keppel.

Player Shy

That's the place where Little Miss Sleeping Beauty comes in. The man in the next room, her daddy, was the player who might have saved the night for Petworth. But mother had an engagement of long standing and daddy was unable to obtain someone to mind her.

And so Coach Haas, who probably wished he had kept the baby, took his choice between forfeiting the game, for Petworth held a 30-29 lead, or playing the final six minutes with four men against five. Hoping for a miracle, Haas chose the latter course. But beating the star-studded Typewriters with five men is a task, with four men it was practically an impossibility. The Wal-

Clips Fifth Of a Second Off Old Mark

Dashes 4 Furlongs In 46 Seconds at Tropical; Feature Race Won by Calexico

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 12.—Double Call, 2-year-old colt owned by C. Leroy King's King Farm, set a new world record for a half-mile today in winning the Pine Tree Purse for juveniles at Tropical Park.

The son of Double Heard—Duncally galloped over the 4 furlongs in 46 seconds, even. This sliced one-fifth of a second off the mark set by the 2-year-old Donau at Santa Anita on March 13, 1909, and equaled two years later by Amon also a juvenile, at Juarez, Mexico.

Double Call had been out seven times before today's start, all at furlongs, winning one and placing second five times. He broke on top today and made every pole a winning one and finished in hand by a length and a half over General Jack. W. L. Johnson had the leg up with 116 pounds. The King winner was the favorite, returning $3.80 for $2 at the mutuel windows.

Calexico, a brown son of Circle, representing Klayman & Lynch, turned on his blistering speed and easily outran five other sprinters in the featured Tallahasse Purse of 6 furlongs. The colt, recently a galloping winner, went postward at $3.40 for $2 choice. Merrill Packer guided the 4-year-old flyer past the wire with a length and a half to spare in 1:10 2-5.

Shady Brook Farm's Visigoth was second, another length and a half better than Philip Schwartz's Napper Tandy.

Comendador II, an 8-year-old South American horse making his United States debut, showed promise while finishing fourth. The veteran is reported to have won stakes in his own country. He had his usual rider, the Chilean, F. Belmonte, in the saddle. The boy sat considerably higher than his five rivals and, in comparison, appeared much less effective.

Calexico, first out of the gate, had a brief tussle with Float Away before drawing into the clear. Float Away raced head and head with the favorite for nearly 3 furlongs before discovering he might as well have been trying to keep pace with a streamlined locomotive.

Eagles Beat Rovers, 6-4, Before 2,500

By Jack Munhall.

Once again last night the Washington Eagles demonstrated they're the toughest club in the Eastern Amateur League to lick on their home ice by defeating the New York Rovers, 6-4, before 2,500 fans at Riverside Stadium to tie the visitors for second place.

The Rovers, battling furiously down to the final whistle to salvage a victory precious to their fading chances of overhauling the pace-setting Baltimore Orioles, counted twice within eight seconds of the last three minutes. But all to no avail.

Just as they threw a scare into the home fans with their second rapid point which made the score 5-4, little Kenny Partis clinched the match for the Eagles by stealing the puck and sending in Washington's sixth goal.

The loss all but eliminated the defending champion Rovers from the race for they are now 6 points behind the Orioles and have only six matches remaining to play while the Orioles have seven.

Hal Dewey was the scoring star for the Eagles, tallying single points

Clearwater, Fla., March 12.—Bert Haas, who may play first base for the Brooklyn Dodgers this season if Dolf Camilli continues to hold out, belted two home runs and a single to drive in four runs today as the Dodgers whipped the Detroit Tigers, 9 to 5. Blimp Phelps also contributed a homer, helping to bring about Buck Newsom's downfall with a five-run rally in the third inning.

Three former American League hurlers, Luke Hamlin, Wes Ferrell and Whit Wyatt limited the Tigers to seven hits. Ferrel's two wild pitches and two walks contributed to Detroit's four-run scoring burst in the sixth.

REDS BEAT CARDS

St. Peterburg, Fla.—Helped along by 11 bases on balls, the Cincinnati Reds broke a four-game losing streak in the Grapefruit League today by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, 8 to 2. Harry Craft hit a home run for the Reds.

Three left-handers, Tom Sunkel, Harry Brecheen and Preacher Roe, pitched for the Cardinals, and each was wild. Johnny Hutchings went four innings for the Reds and Joe Beggs attempted to go the rest of the way but he needed help from Pete Sivess in the ninth.

The Reds scored three times off Sunkel in the second without a hit, getting their tallies on three walks and two errors.

ATHLETICS WIN

Anaheim, Calif. — Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics scored their eighth exhibition victory in nine starts today with a 6-to-4 decision over the Hollywood Stars.

Herman Besse, Ed Heusser and George Caster held the Stars to three hits for eight innings. Then Caster loosened up, allowing a double, four singles and a base on balls to give the Californians their tallies.

Hal Wagner, rookie catcher, led the A's attack with two triples and a single in three trips to the plate.

FELLER TO START

Fort Myers, Fla.—Bob Feller will go to the mound tomorrow for the first time this spring.

Manager Oscar Vitt, of the Cleveland Indians, announced today the young speedball star would pitch three innings in a regular-yannigan game, and then would rest up for the Finnish Relief Fund all-star game at Tampa Sunday.

Tomorrow's game will be the last intrasquad tilt for the Tribe, who open an exhibition schedule with other teams Thursday.

YANKEES

St. Petersburg, Fla.—The New York Yankees' squad was complete for the first time this season as Charley Ruffing, ace righthander, came out for his initial practice. He reported in fine condition, predicting he would win at least 20 games.

Joe DiMaggio also took a full-time workout, then remained on the field after the rest of the athletes had left to hold a bunting game with a couple of volunteer assistants. Red Rolfe, third of the delinquent regulars who are about a week behind in training, worked out at third base.

PHILLIES

Miami Beach, Fla., March 12 (AP).—Manager Doc Protho said today that aside from his veteran pitchers, Third Baseman Merrill May and Outfielder Morrie Arnovich, no one has cinched a place on the Philadelphia National's roster.

2 League Records Set in Pin League

A pair of season league records fell at Lucky Strike last night. In the Liquor Distributors League, B'nai Brith established a team set mark of 1,695 as Morris Robbins led the attack with 360. B'nai's best singe team game was 576. Joe Gottlieb, of Friendship, had high game, 149, and tied teammate Myer Weinberg for high set, 375.

The other record was broken when St. Anthony's rolled a team set of 1,542 in the Ladies' Catholic League while taking three games from St. Peter's. Jane Egan, of St. Anthony's, rolled high game and high set, 146, 350.

Davis Suspended; Filed Wrong Age

New York, March 12 (INS).—The pugilistic career of Welterweight Al Davis was abruptly interrupted today when the New York Boxing Commission suspended him indefinitely for allegedly filing his age incorrectly.

The ban came as the outgrowth of Davis' being bound over to the grand jury last week in $1,500 bail on a charge of felonious assault. In the hearing Davis gave his age as 20, whereas his age is 22, as recorded by the commission.

Goalie Colvin, of Eagles, Staves Off Rovers' Rush

Goalie Les Colvin, of the Washington Eagles, dived to ice in first period of match with New York Rovers at Riverside Stadium last night to stave off shot by Hollinger (14). Behind Hollinger is Ross Knipfel, of Eagles. No. 3 is Bill Davies, of Eagles. Washington won the match, 6-4 in the second and third periods. Partis, Big Bill Davies and Kuntz also played exceptionally well for the winners.

Pechet, of the Rovers, turned in a sensational exhibition, counting three goals, two of which he slapped in within eight seconds in that hectic third period. On each of these sudden thrusts he was assisted by Frankie Boucher, jr. Boucher also had a hand in the fashioning of Pechet's first goal which was the opening scoring play of the game.

It was all smoke and no fire in the first period. Both teams saw several promising attacks stopped just in time. The Rovers, however, took a 1-0 lead when a wild stab of a shot by Pechet filtered through Goalie Colvin. The shot was screened by several players and their sticks.

New York's goal came at 12:08 when Pechet bottled between two Washington defensemen, Davies and Burrage, suddenly lashed out with his stick and sent in a sizzler. He was assisted on the play by Collings and Boucher.

The Eagles played brilliantly in the second period, held the Rovers scoreless and tallied three times themselves to take a comfortable 3-1 lead.

The first of the Washington points fell to Foster at 6:59 after Knipfel had carried the puck the length of the ice in a great rush. The score remained tied at 1-1 then until midway of the period when, after Eagles' Coach Redver Mackenzie had worked a nice bit of strategy, Courteau and Dewey counted within three minutes to send Washington ahead.

Mackenzie's strategy came about when Defenseman McTeer drew a two-minute banishment, the first of the match. Instead of allowing the Eagles to function shy one defense, Mackenzie withdrew Kuntz, a wing, and inserted Davies at defense, and the move worked to perfection for the Rovers were able to make little headway. Then when once again at full strength Washington quickly crashed through the panting Rovers who were spent from their futile scoring rusnes of the preceding two-minutes.

Eight Veterans Answer Eagle Baseball Call

American University Squad Starts Drills; Newcomers Promising

Eight veterans headed the squad of candidates that turned out yesterday for the first baseball practice at American University. Baseball was revived at the uptown school last year and this season it has been established as a permanent major sport under the coaching of Staff Cassell.

Returning veterans who will form the nucleus for the Eagle nine are pitchers, George Brown and Ed Nickleson; infielders, Hugo Schulze, Clay Price, I. T. Quinn and Levi McCrady, and outfielders, Harry Newby and Jim Flaherty.

Principal losses by graduation are Bob Hall, catcher, and Charles Stewart, Harry Benjamin and Sonny Workman, infielders. In addition, Outfielder Burke Hertz will not play baseball this season for an undisclosed reason.

Some of the likely looking newcomers who are expected to press veterans for regular positions are Phil Fellows, Carter Edmonds, Dave Thatcher, Charles Richmond, Keene Roadman, Carl Byham and H. C. Morrison.

Terror Cooks Up A New One for Lou Plummer Bout

Promoter Joe Turner drew up his supporting card for tomorrow night's wrestling exhibition between the Golden Terror and Lou Plummer yesterday, with Tommy O'Toole and Don Evans getting the semifinal role.

The Terror went through an hour's workout yesterday at the Fourteenth and W streets arena, and unveiled what he calls the "Terror deathlock."

Both O'Toole and Evans hurled a challenge at the Terror yesterday after seeing him work, each snarling they will be delighted to tear him to pieces, golden hood and all.

Jim Coffield and Jack Lutz, Hymie Olson and Joe Maynard, Rudy Dusek and Ralph Garibaldi will pair off in the other preliminaries.

Orlando, Fla., March 12.—Clark Griffith today was presented with a uniform bill of nearly $2,000 by the company that is outfitting his ball players for the 1940 season . . . Ninety-six uniforms at $23 each were ordered by the Nats . . . the $23 does not include cap, shoes or belt . . . Each regular will own two road uniforms and two white home uniforms . . . Manager Harris will wield the pruning knife on March 20 when approximately 25 players will be lopped off the Washington squad and assigned to Charlotte, Springfield, and various other Washington farms . . . Al Evans and Tony Giuliani are battling for the No. 3 catching job with Giuliani the likely winner . . . English is spoken only in the morning at Tinker Field . . . The afternoon workout is populated chiefly by the Spanish-speaking Cubans . . . None of whom will be retained by the Nats . . . Clark Griffith is still waiting for Judge Landis to dispose of his protest of Landis' order that four players released to Springfield must be retained by the Nats for a longer tryout . . . One reason the Giants can make no deal for Zeke Bonura is the fact that he is still signed and no club will deal for him on that basis . . . The Phillies, who were once in the market for Bonura are cold to a deal since signing big Ed Levy, the former Newark first baseman . . . Griffith has ordered Harris not to pitch any of his regulars against any American League Clubs they meet in exhibition games on the theory that the less familiar American League Clubs are with pitching deliveries the better chance the pitchers will have when the season opens . . . Joe Engel, who scouted Jimmy Pofahl for Griffith and gave his approval to the $35,000 sale price, heartened Manager Harris today by declaring: "Pofahl showed me a fine throwing arm during the week I scouted him" . . . When Business Manager Edward Eynon, of the Nats shushed Clark Griffith for calling the proposed electric-lighting bill for night baseball at Griffith Stadium a "hold-up" Griffith was adamant." . . . "I say it's a hold-up, and you can quote me," he told newspapermen.

Colonials Launch Grid Drills

crack tackle combination of last year, are helping out. Each has hopes of some day giving gridiron orders instead of taking them.

It is a very promsing looking squad that Monday embarked on a five-weeks' spring training grind, although half a dozen stars are not yet out. Quite possibly it may be one of the finest of all George Washington elevens. June graduation will take from the school only a comparatively few football reliables and surging up to fill their places will be an unusually strong lot of freshmen.

Finding tackles to replace Keahey and Jones looms as the hardest problem for Reinhart and his new assistant, the big, baldish Shields, who molded many a powerful forward wall for the University of Oregon. Leading candidates for the vacated tackle slots are Tony Barauskas, senior No. 3 tackle of last year, and Elinor Wahl, a junior. Right behind this pair are Dan Snyder and Bill Slovinac, from the freshmen team. Slovinac, at 250 pounds, is the biggest man on the squad.

There will be no dearth of good backfield at G. W., for nine experienced ball carriers are returning. They are Walt Fedora, Tom Grady, Murphy Booth, Walter Welc, Ken Baston, Fred Cartore, Sam Babich, Lud Urick and Ed Wilamoski. In addition from the freshman squad will come the Colonials' greatest triple-threat prospect since Tuffy Lemans. He is Don Pinnow, a 185-pounder who should be vividly remembered for his gallant but futile performance against a superior Georgetown eleven last season.

Out at College Park the University of Maryland gridmen are also taking advantage of the fall-like weather to get in some good licks. A large squad of 60 is scampering about under the watchful eyes of the coaching triumvirate of Jack Faber, Al Heagy and Al Woods.

A noticeable thing about practice is the fine fellowship between players and coaches and as a consequence a high spirit is maintained.

Gene Ochsenreiter, Maryland's fleet halfback, has given up football, temporarily at least, to concentrate on track, in which a brilliant future is predicted for him. A member of the Terrapin 1-mile relay team which zipped to a new Class B American record in the Penn Relay Carnival last spring, Ochsenreiter is expected to beat 49 seconds for the quarter-mile this spring.

The Maryland baseball and lacrosse teams, both of which are scheduled for early season openers on March 23, are finding it difficult to round into condition, what with football weather prevailing.

The Terp diamonders start off with North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the lacrossemen's first test will be against Mount Washington at College Park. Both are topnotch opponents rather than "breathers," so Maryland has plenty of real work ahead to get into top shape.

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

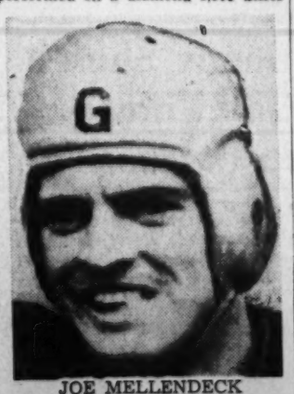
—At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies seeking jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

JOE MELLENDECK, OUTFIELDER.

Orlando, Fla., March 12.—Under the very noses of the Washington ball club, Joe Mellendeck was playing college baseball at Georgetown and his vacation days were spent at his Baltimore home, but the Nats first expressed interest in him when he performed on a diamond 1,500 miles distant.

That was at Wichita, Kans., where Mellendeck was playing in the National semi-pro tournament with the Glen Burnie team, of Baltimore. There he came to the notice of Scout Joe Cambria and was tabbed for future reference.



JOE MELLENDECK

While all Washington was hailing Mellendeck as a football hero during his backfield exploits for Georgetown in 1937-38, Clark Griffith was quietly awaiting the day when he would be free to sign a baseball contract. Griffith expected to wait until June, but Mellendeck developed spring training camp fever a week ago and suddenly reported to the Nats.

Somewhere back among the Mellendeck ancestry a German gentleman gave his name to the family, but Mellendeck says he is thoroughly Irish, and he looks it. He's a flashing-eyed, trim-built kid of 21 and Clark Griffith visions him as a big league outfielder in the not too distant future.

"He's my type of outfielder," says Griffith of the Georgetown boy. "Not too big and bulky, but big enough, with plenty of speed that gives him a good range, and a nice stroke with the bat."

"But what appealed to Griffith particularly in the tryout he gave Mellendeck last summer, aside from the boy's apparent recovery from a football knee injury, was Melendeck's throwing arm. The strikes that Mellendeck has been throwing deep from the outfield across the plate, have been one of the marvels of the training camp.

Born in New Jersey, and spending his formative years in Louisiana where his dad was affiliated with a petroleum concern, Mellendeck never lacked for playmates. He is one of eight boys of the Mellendeck family. His prep school football career fetched him offers of scholarships from colleges as far distant as Chicago, but he chose Georgetown chiefly because he could return home week-ends to visit a girl he liked very much, and will marry very soon, now.

Girls to Play Tomorrow in Post Tourney

Action in the District A. A. U. championship tournament, being staged at Heurich's gymnasium, will be resumed tomorrow night, following a lull tonight. The Thursday program will mark the first appearance of the girls' teams, involving a clash of the Treasury Department and Veterans' Administration. These rivals are scheduled to take over the floor at 8:30 o'clock. An hour later a promising unlimited class battle will hold attention.

Delaware & Hudson, runner-up in the Heurich League this winter, will tackle the Y. M. C. A. five, which showed to advantage in its first tournament game. Presenting a well-balanced attack, the "Y" hung a 43-30 defeat on the Hyattsville Business Men. Madden, O'Connell and Harrison were the big point getters.

The D. & H. club packs the punch it has exhibited for several years. This team was second to United Typewriters in the 1939 tournament and has virtually the same line-up, including Burns, Folliard and the others who are veterans of the court wars.

Typewriters Win In Post Tourney

They managed to hold the score down to 34-32 with four minutes to go. Then Coach Clinton Price, of the Typewriter, got an idea. He signaled the team to freeze the ball outside of Petworth's four-man zone defense which was working in surprisingly good fashion. This strategy scunded the death knell to Petworth's chances. The ball was tossed back and forth always with an unguarded man to gather it in. The precious seconds ticked away. Unpopular with the crowd was this "one, two, three, O'Leary" style, but it kept the Typewriters in the tournament.

If the United Typewriters go on to win the championship, it will be fitting if they tie one of the A. A. U. medals around Little Miss America's neck, and it might be fair to let her make goo-goo eyes at the shiny Washington Post Trophy.

Just how clearly Petworth outplayed the Typewriters, Heurich League champions, is revealed by the fact that United did not make a field goal for the first ten minutes, and trailed, 16-12, at the half. Leonard Mills, former Eastern High star, led the Typewriters with 18 points. Joe Walters, Petworth's ace forward, contributed eight points, as did Fillah. However, picking heroes out for the Petworth line-up is unfair. There were five of them.

In the preceding game, the crowd believed it had seen all the night would produce in hard-fought basketball. Bolling Field and Mount Vernon M. E. fought a point-for-point battle that was a sight to behold. The Aviators finally forged ahead to win, 54-50.

Jewish Community Center, beaten in the unlimited class, came back with a vengeance in the 145-pound division. Coach Russell Everett sent out a well-balanced club that run rings around I. D. R. A.'s lightweights. The score was 40-18.

Cochran Defeated In Second Match

Chicago, March 12 (AP).—Welker Cochran, defending champion in the World's Three Cushion Billiard Tournament, was off form in his second match tonight and was defeated, 52 to 32, by Arthur Rubin, of New York City.

Cochran, San Francisco veteran, won is first match when the tournament opened yesterday but against Rubin was never able to get into the lead. Their match went 52 innings with both having high runs of five.

In earlier matches today, Allen Hall, Chicago, defeated Tiff Denton, Kansas City, 50 to 31, in 46 innings, and Jay Bozeman, of Vallejo, Calif., defeated Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia, 50 to 34, in 40 innings.

Rizzi Picked To Captain '41 Hoya Cagers

Irving Rizzi, a junior guard from West New York, N. J., yesterday was the selection of ten letter men to captain Georgetown University's varsity basketball team next season. Charles Schwartz, of Jamaica States, N. Y., was named senior manager of basketball.

Rizzi was second high scorer to George Pajak, forward and guard of the Hoyas, this past season. Pajak missed his team's last several games due to a fractured arm.

Rizzi played exceptional ball throughout the season and was at his best when the Hoyas upset George Washington University in the closing game on the schedules of both teams.

Central, '39 Public School Titlist, Starts Baseball Practice

Newly Named Vikings Have Good Outlook

Steiner and Fenlon Stand Out on List Of 7 Vets; Coach Expresses Optimism

Looking for all the world like the "Gas House Gang" which "scrapped" its way to the public school title last year, a banner crowd of veterans turned out yesterday when Central High sounded the first call for spring baseball practice.

It's the "Gas House Gang" no more. By a formal vote of the student body several weeks ago, Central is now the "Vikings," whether it plays gas-house ball or not.

No less than seven stars of last year, including All-High Benny Steiner and Pat Fenlon, shortstop and second base, respectively, were on hand. And the usual melancholy expression on Coach Jack Ray's face was missing after five minutes of drill.

Sees Good Season

"We'll have a good team," Ray said with rare enthusiasm. "Understand, it isn't because we've got all this seasoned material back. It's one of our newcomers. Whether it looked good or not, we didn't have a good team last year."

All Central did in 1939, it may be recalled, was romp through interhigh ranks with perfect ease after its first string had been depleted by scholastic difficulties. It romped over Eastern in the final and crucial game.

Tentative Line-up

Thouh none of the positions are certain, the first-day line-up of veterans looks something like this: Steiner, short; Fenlon, second; Sam D. Blasi, third; Harold Evans, centerfield; Martin, catcher; Charley Kligman, pitcher, and Zello Lagos, first.

Lagos, a catcher last year when Martin was out of action, will be shifted to first in Ray's plans, and might even go to the outfield to replace either "Zip" Zimmerman, Kenny Bransdorf or Lenny Sokol, all graduated. Bill Whelan might land the initial sack assignment if his wildness lessens.

Of the youngsters, besides Fisher, a little, red-headed catcher looks as good as any. He's Bill Carrier, who's hustling appearance pleases Ray and fits into Central's scheme of play perfectly.

Interhigh Schedule

Tourney Sunday At Heurich Gym

Trophies will be awarded both the winner and runner-up Sunday and a consolation prize also may be donated Sunday afternoon and night when a minature Midatlantic basketball tournament involving four clubs, two local and as many out of town, will be held at Heurich gym.

In Sunday afternoon's 3:30 o'clock nightcap United Typewriters, newly crowned Heurich Amateur Basketball League champion, will meet New Kensington, Pa., defending Midatlantic titlist, while Delaware and Hudson engages the Philadelphia Spha Juniors at 2:30.

On Sunday night the afternoon's losers will play a consolation game at 8 o'clock and the two winners will face for the title at 9 o'clock.

Old Point Comfort May Bid For Middle Atlantic P. G. A.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

With more golfless days this winter than any in the weather bureau's history, the District's golf pros have resumed their weekly bull sessions in a local sporting goods store and at least a dozen drop in around noon and usually wind up in a spaghetti luncheon, followed by an hour's fumbling for the check.

Yesterday was no exception and the pros dribbled in from 10 to 1 at the Fifteenth street address, with Al Houghton, the idea-a-day-man, stealing the show.

The conversation centered around the activities for the coming season and Houghton came through with an announcement that Sidney Banks would undoubtedly post a $1,000 prize money for the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. if the pros would make the trip to Old Point Comfort on a week-end in May, preceding the season at the Chamberlin Hotel.

Old Point was the scene of the tourney two years running but the main objection was that the pros didn't want to leave their clubs at the height of the season. Houghton continued to hold the spotlight when he told the boys they were going to change Beaver Dam's tenth hole to the first and make it a par six. He was voted down on that matter.

Tony Sylvester, of Capital, was all enthused over his Georgetown golf team, and hinted that Ralph Bogart had been looking around and may enter the Hilltop. Cornell was added to the Hoya schedule for this season.

Al Jamison, Mel Shorey and Houghton, who figured in pro changes during the past two weeks, reported favorably on their new positions, while Jocko Miller, who starts as match-maker and good will man at Congressional on Friday, was giving the boys a line on his new duties.

George Diffenbaugh invited the crowd out to Kenwood but they didn't like the wind and after lunch set out for their respective clubs. Lewis Worsham and Al Treder dropped in but didn't stay for the "party."

St. Mary's Denies 'Feud' Was Cause Of Madigan Ouster

San Francisco, March 12 (AP).—Sudden ouster of Edward P. (Slip) Madigan, veteran football coach at St. Mary's College, embroiled him tonight in a dispute with the board of athletic control.

Madigan said his removal was caused by enmity between him and Andrew Burke, San Francisco attorney, and board member. The board promptly issued a statement denying its action yesterday was prompted by any "feud" between Madigan and a member.

Instead, the board declared, its decision was reached more than a week ago; Madigan was informed at the time, and it was suggested that he take a leave of absence for the duration of his contract, which expires in March, 1941.

3 Teams in Running For D.C. Swim Meet

Three teams—Y. M. C. A., Wilson High and Washington Boys Club—are expected to furnish the most action Friday and Saturday night at the Shoreham pool when the senior D. C. Championships are staged.

Events listed include 50, 100 and 220 yard free style races, 100-yard breast stroke, 100-yard backstroke, high board diving, 100-yard free style relay and 500-yard medley relay for men. Women will compete in almost the same list of events. Two novice events will also be held.

'Philly Four' Features D. C. Ice Carnival

Other Stellar Acts On Program Benefiting Society for Blind

The "Philadelphia Four," one of the foremost precision skating acts in the country, will feature the Washington Ice Carnival which will be presented March 23, 24 and 25 in Riverside Stadium by the Washington Figure Skating Club for the benefit of the local Society for the Blind. Mrs. Roosevelt is honorary chairman of the carnival.

With the signed contract from the Quaker City quartet Dr. Christopher Meyer, president of the club and producer of the carnival, announced yesterday that the program is now complete.

The "Philadelphia Four," representing the Philadelphia Figure Skating Club and Humane Society, which primarily was organized for emergency ice rescues, includes in its routine many stunt maneuvers on skates that would be difficult for an individual, yet the "four" performs its specialty in perfect unison.

Included in the completed program, are 15-year-old Hazel Franklin, Bournemouth, England, girl whose coach, Howard Nicholson, former tutor of Sonja Henie, frankly admits is already superior to the little Norwegian star; McGowan and Mack, former Ice Follies standouts; "Slick" and "Slam," comedy team of Frick and Frack tendencies; Ollie Haupt, of St. Louis, and Washington's own Dorothy Snell; Polly Blodgett, of Boston, and national fame; Eric Wait, comedian par excellence, who was one of the outstanding performers of the Sun Valley show which played to capacity crowds at the New York World Fair, and Maddy Horn, the fastest woman in the world on skates, who was the only female chosen to represent the United States in the new postponed Olympics that were to be held this year in Finland.

'Dream Team' Favored Tonight

Union University's "dream team," of Richmond, winner of the C. I. A. A. Conference crown, will be favored tonight at Heurich gym when an All-Star five picked from all other C. I. A. A. teams is met at 9 o'clock.

Coaches of most of the conference teams were responsible for the selection of the All-Star aggregation. Players will not be announced ahead of time. They will meet this morning for a short practice under Coaches Jefferson and Burr, of Virginia State and Howard, respectively.

Washington's A. C. Plans for Future

The Washington Athletic Association, newly formed club for former college athletes and tired business men, elected officers and got down to serious planning for the future last night.

Meeting at Force School, the body elected Robert Acorn, president; Dorsey Griffith, first vice president; Harry Woodfield, second vice president, and Joe Deckman, secretary.

Marion Miley Is Beaten in Belleair Golf

Toledo Girl Trips Medalist, 2 and 1; Betty Jameson Wins

By the Associated Press

Belleair, Fla., March 12.—Naomi Copic, of Toledo, upset highly favored Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., the medalist, 2 and 1 today in the first match play round of the annual Belleair women's golf tournament.

Miss Copic, who qualified with an 84 yesterday to Miss Miley's 77, led one up at the turn and pushed her margin to three up at one point, but lost the sixteenth with a disastrous seven. She halved the seventeenth to close out the dark-haired Kentuckian.

Glenna Collett Vare, of Merion, Pa., defending titlist and Miss Copic's opponent tomorrow, eliminated Mrs. Vilas Norton, of Glenville, Ill., 4 and 3.

Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta stylist, closed out Janet Younker, of White Plains, N. Y., 6 and 4, and tomorrow plays Mrs. Tom Williams, of Lajolla, Calif. Mrs. Williams defeated Bernice Wall Barbour, of Paterson, N. J., one up in a 19-hole match.

National Champion Betty Jameson turned on the heat to oust Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., 6 and 4, to move into the second round opposite Laddie Irwin, of Montclair, N. J., who triumphed over Mrs. Tom Nolan, of New Castle, Pa., 3 and 2.

Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., and Mrs. Philip Barney, of Farmington, Conn., completed the quarter-final bracket. Miss Cothran won by 4 and 3 over Frances Hadfield, of Clearwater, and Mrs. Barney trounced Elizabeth Wing, of Evanston, Ill., one up on the eighteenth hole.

Boston Returns To Harvard as Frosh Grid Coach

By International News Service

Cambridge, Mass., March 12.—Clarence E. (Chief) Boston is returning to Harvard University football as head freshman coach, and J. Neil (Skip) Stahley is moving up from mentor of the yearlings to varsity backfield coach.

The announcement was made tonight by William J. (Bill) Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, approval having been given by the committee on the regulation of athletic sports.

The committee also approved the appointment of John J. Witherspoon to succeed Stahley as head coach of lacrosse, and of Richard W. Sibe to succeed Witherspoon as freshman lacrosse coach.

Stahley, native of Lebanon, Pa., a former Penn State gridiron star, came to Harvard with Head Football Coach Dick Harlow from Western Maryland.

Brewers Battle At Troy Tonight

The Washington Heurich Brewers today are to depart for Troy, N. Y., where they are to meet the Troy-Celtics in an American Basketball League play-off game tonight.

The Troy-Celtics recently won a protested game from the Brewers here, but have lost their last two starts to the Heurichmen on the home court.

Immediately after tonight's game the Brewers are to start a barnstorming tour that will be culminated in Chicago Sunday night when they meet the Globe Trotters, of Wichita, Kan., in their first start in world professional tournament competition.

En route to Chicago they will play exhibitions in Binghamton, tomorrow night; Utica, Friday night, and Syracuse, Saturday night.

Bill Ackerman

—On Fishing

ACKERMAN

Maryland trout streams are running full and clear. The fish are in fine shape—active, and rising to flies, hatches of which are coming out in the early afternoon sun. All of which is as it should be, for isn't it almost spring and less than three weeks until the open season.

Another season, that, like those of past years, finds promises of better fishing unkept; the usual bickering between Federal and State authorities at the last minute in regard to regulations, and the perennial crabbing of individual anglers.

If the United States Service believes a later opening date is advisable on waters they are improving, why antagonize a helping hand? Rather, wait until the area is turned over to the State, and then, make the opening date earlier if it is thought advisable. If there must be incompatibility why wait until the last minute, with 12 whole months to get together, to start the argument.

Late last summer, one of our tribe from Baltimore wrote at length of the hindsight being shown by the Fish and Game Commission in allowing individuals to have their own stream. The story brought more than a few promises—one in particular as to just how much Big Owens Creek in Frederick County was to be improved to supply additional trouting water.

If there was any work done toward this accomplishment we don't know where it was, nor of improvements on any other state waters.

On the other hand, consider what was accomplished by one of the three individuals mentioned by our Baltimore friend.

Paul Townsend bought, just three weeks before the opening of last season, two miles of a stream between Thurmont and the Pennsylvania line. He built an attractive lodge; 60 odd dams, and stocked nearly 5,000 trout, and fished such a crowd of Maryland anglers on opening day one could easily imagine he was on a public stream.

It would be hard to keep track of those who fished these waters through the three months of the season, or of the stockings required to keep it to the level of excellence he had set for it. One thing he didn't do—rest on what he had done in three short weeks with thousands of hours of labor distributed among those of the immediate vicinity.

He continued throughout the summer, and winter too, to work a small crew taking temperatures, measuring waterflow, and studying, to the end that this water might produce to its full capacity.

Just this week we went over it, from one end to the other. Each and every one of the 12 pools was just about perfect, with diversions here and there to cutout bank cover and speed the water. Pyramids in some pools, but "hides" everywhere, and springs cleaned along the banks to supply the necessary quantities of natural food. To the same end some of the pools are planted to those grasses that make the best shelter for minnows.

Another time we are going to tell further of stream improvement by individuals; in fact, there is much still to be said of Townsend's stream, in the hope that more will seek the same means to better their angling. In the meantime, we would like to see State authorities look this stream over, for if they could do likewise with State streams we would have "More and Better Fishing."

Stars to Bowl For Blood Bank April 7

Stars of four local fraternal orders will bowl so children may live.

With all proceeds going to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund, all-star teams representing the Elks, Masons, Shriners and Odd Fellows leagues will compete Sunday night, April 7.

That the occasion will be 100 per cent for the cause of supplying precious fluid that has saved and will save many young lives, the Convention Hall has donated its alleys.

The plan for the four-way battle that will carry with it the championship among the four fraternal orders, originated among bowlers in the Elks League and swept like wild fire as soon as it was suggested to rival circuits.

Although limited to the four leagues, the competition will offer a number of local pin stars including Norman Schroth, Ed Mulvey, Louis Bombrest, Eddie Espey, Pete Brockdorf, Hugh Waldrop, Ed Blakeney, Tony Santini, Abe Povich, Otey Brown, Paul Schlosser, Whip Lichfield, Irwin Billheimer and many others.

Strang Boxes For Catholic U. In Nationals

Gerry Strang, Canada's contribution to Catholic University athletics, will be the Cardinals' lone representative in the National Collegiate Athletic Association boxing tournament, April 4-6, in Sacramento, Calif., Coach Eddie LaFond announced yesterday.

The dark-completed junior of the Hollywood profile will be out for C. U.'s third national title. Davie Bernstein set the style in 1937 by winning the 120-pound crown in Charlottesville, Va. Last year Fred Stant won the 165-pound crown in Madison, Mis.

Stant, Jay Turner and Joe Bunsa, who went to the semifinals last year in the 155-pound class, were declared ineligible for this year's tourney because they had participated in more than three years of varsity competition.

Ralph (Buddy) Lazear, of Columbus University, will go to the Coast along with LaFond and Strang, to fight in the 145-pound class. Under N. C. A. A. rules, a coach must take at least two men to a tournament.

Padlo Fights McDowell on Arena Card

Popular Welters Brought Back for Headline Battle

Three eight-round fights which will bring back two of the welterweights who made such big hits with Washington fight fans in their first appearance here—Myron Padlo and Wild Bill McDowell—will headline Promoter Joe Turner's show Monday night in Turner's arena.

Padlo, a product of Philadelphia, will fight El Brookman, who scored an upset victory Monday night over Toby Tobias, and McDowell will meet an opponent yet to be selected.

Furr is assured of a spot among the National Boxing Association's first 10 welterweights as a result of his surprise victory over LaSalle, who had held the No. 5 spot.

THE THOROUGHBRED OF CIGARETTES for Twenty Grand Smokes

Strange Photo of a Pair of Young Skaters

Derby Stars Hard at Work at Downs

Louisville's 3-Year-Old Group Grows

Black Brummel Goes Five Furlongs at 1:06 Clip; Residue, Predicate at Oval

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., March 12.—Eligibles for the 1940 Kentucky Derby, despite the continuance of winter, are going through their paces in increasing numbers at Black Brummel, a strapping son of Churchill Downs and Douglas Park. Trainer Charley Ferguson of St. James, grandsire of Johnstown, the 1939 Derby winner, sent the big fellow stepping only 5 furlongs at 1:06 clip under restraint from the exercise boy. He took the first quarter in 0:26, three-eighths in 0:39 and the half in 0:52 1-5.

Other eligibles at the Downs are W. D. Covington's residue, A. C. Ernst's Alhalon, Friedberg and Axton's predicate, Mrs. Fred M. Graham's St. Croix and Blue Flyer. L. W. Ulmer's good conduct is working out at Douglas Park.

The Louisville nominee colonies are increasing daily with arrivals from winter tracks. Latest and most important of the units checking in from New Orleans is that of Frank P. Letellier, who marshaled in 14 head to add to 13 which had been here since early February.

Track Supt. Tom Young at the Downs predicted the number of horses to be available for the spring meeting will far outstrip that of 1939, when 1,385 were registered.

Late advice from Roy Waldron is that he is shipping the fashionable Milky Way Stable, headed by the Derby nominees Gallahadion, Tough Hombre, Chatted, Gold Teddy and Valtite, here from Santa Anita on April 1. The Public Stable, trained by Robert McGarvey, is expected this week-end.

POST LUCK, a forward contender, opened up a commanding lead entering the stretch while bearing out, but weakened and was under extreme pressure to maintain her lead. COME HOME dropped back rounding the turn, but slipped through on the inside entering the stretch, closed gamely and dead heated DELIUS for the place. The latter, in the thick of contention all the way, held on well in the final drive. WHITE TOPPER was going strong at the finish. KNIGHT GALLANT broke down approaching the quarter mile pole while leading the field. PERSUASIVE, in tight quarters leaving the backstretch, stumbled and fell.

RANGE DUST, prominent and on the outside all the way, responded with determination to pressure in the final furlong and outlasted his opposition in the final drive. DINNER JACKET, stealing through on the inside the last 3 furlongs, came with a belated rush through the stretch. FOXY MAUDE, hustled to the front, set a fast pace, but faltered when the real test came. The others had no mishaps.

MAETRAN, quickest to begin, went in nearest pursuit of the leader throughout while under intermittent punishment, but could never get up. DOG HOUSE finished strong through the stretch and was wearing the leaders down.

VISIGOTH, outrun the first half mile, gained steadily thereafter on the outside, but could not overtake the winner. NAPPER TANDY, a forward factor throughout, held on well in the final drive. COMENDADOR II received a weird ride.

MUCHO GUSTO, rated in front in the early stages, was given a breather rounding the lower turn while saving ground and, responding with determination to punishment, outlasted PICCOLO. The latter, taken back the first half mile, moved up menacingly on the outside leaving the backstretch and took a half length lead, but faltered when the real test came. SASSY LADY eased off the early pace, moved up with determination on the outside of the leader midway around the lower turn and drew out into a winning lead. BALMY SPRING set a fast pace from the start, but was no match for the winner. SUN INPLAY, raced in the opening 3 furlongs, refused to extend himself when placed to pressure, yet outlasted RIFTED CLOUDS. The latter saved much ground and had no mishaps.

Dear Al: Bimelech is the shortest priced future book favorite in the history of the Kentucky Derby, writes James J. Carroll, who opened the horse at 3 to 1 and 1 to 2. Equipoise, 4 to 1 favorite in 1931, failed to start and Twenty Grand bagged the race. Reigh Count was opened at 4 to 1 for the Derby in 1928 and won the race, paying $6.12 in the mutuels. Damask was opened at 4 to 1 in 1920 and finished fourth. Eternal, 4 to 1 future book favorite in 1919, landed in tenth place. Gallant Fox, winner in 1930, opened at 10 to 1 and paid $4.38 in the mutuels. Morvich, future book favorite at 5 to 1 won in 1922 and paid 4.40 in the mutuels. Ten of the last 21 post favorites have scored in the Derby. Cavalcade, winner of the 1934 Derby, opened at 20 to 1 in the futures and paid $5.00 in the mutuels. The future bookies made Marta Hari, a filly, the favorite that year. The filly finished fourth. Chance Sun, non-starter, was the future book favorite over Omaha in 1935. Omaha opened at 8 to 1 and paid $10 the day of the race. War Admiral, winner in 1937, opened at 12 to 1 and paid $5.20. Pompoon, 8 to 1 book favorite, landed second to War Admiral. El Chico, 6 to 1 future book favorite last year, didn't get anything the day of the race. Johnstown, the winner of the 1939 classic, was listed at 12 to 1 in the future books, but Johnstown was the post favorite the afternoon of the race. It is amazing how loyal Art Brown's listeners are to him. For instance here's two entries from O. C. F., of Northeast: "This is Ma Brown's boy, Art, who has sunshine in his heart; Rain or shine he's standing by. To chase the clouds out of your sky." On the same sheet of paper he writes: "Once upon a time they sued, Art Brown slept in a cactus bed; some of the needles entered his head; Perhaps that's why his face is red." One Benningite writes: Art Brown is leading a community singing at the Capitol Theater. That's the first time he ever got a call in front in his life."

BILL.

First race—Fantasama appears the best suited of the juveniles gathered for the day's opener. Needs only the right handling. Jimson Belle is reported to have speed and could be dangerous. Philomel probably will be in the money circle.

Second race—Rhett, the "Gone With The Wind" hunch, may take down the main money in this group. Berwyn and Fight On are fit and ready. This pair will battle it out if Rhett gets caught in a blockade.

Third race—Woodsia likes this track. Conditions otherwise seem ideal and I see no reason for mistakes. Boy Plunger belongs with this kind and will have a say in the purse distribution. She's Right for third money.

Fourth race—Night Tide gets the call in this rather open affair. I'm going to string along. Billie Bee has a good race at the other track to recommend him. Censor cannot be placed too far out of it.

Fifth race — Ploughshare has demonstrated his ability and fits snuggly in the company gathered for this event. Sundodger should go well and may be the one to give the fellow keen contention. Ship Biscuit isn't exactly Seabiscuit but is due respect.

Six race—Strident and Felsun are a tight fit in this event. Either can take the main money. I prefer them in the order named. Pumpgun has plenty of punch and should be right in the serious running at the close.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Chainwick, Lady Sara and Exhort.

Old Pal to Miss Grand National

London, March 12 (AP). — New favorites for the April 5 running of the Grand National Steeplechase to the fore today as Lady Lindsay's 7-year-old jumper, Old Pal, was scratched.

Bracketed at the head of the list is a callover of odds at the Victoria Club were Dorothy Paget's Kilstar and Sir Alexander Maguire's Sterling Duke, at 100 to 7. While the previous favorite, Mrs. I. Strang's the Professor II, dropped out of the betting, Tom Westhead's Symaethis held second place at 100 to 6, with Lieut. Col. H. E. Joisey's Venturesome Knight third at 1 8to 1.

Flinchum Is Signed For Year by Woolford

Kansas City, March 12 (AP).—Herbert M. Woold's Woolford Farm has signed Jack Flinchum, the Nation's leading jockey of 1940, to a one-year contract, effective April 24.

The 19-year-old Hialeach riding champion, who has averaged a winner a day at Miami's Tropical Park, probably will ride Woolf's leading nominee in the Kentucky Derby.

Bimelech Is Missing From Derby Preview Slated at Jamaica

By the Associated Press

New York, March 12.—Forty-four 3-year olds, including just about all the top candidates for the year's stake honors except Bimelech, have been nominated for the $20,000 Wood Memorial at Jamaica, which annually is regarded as the leading test for the Kentucky Derby. Date for the race has not been set yet.

Run a week before the Derby, this mile-and-70-yard fixture tops the Jamaica Spring meeting, which also includes the Paumonk, Jamaica and Excelsior handicaps.

Andy K. Millsdale stable's Jack High colt, heads the list of eligibles. Also entered are C. V. Whitney's Carrier Pigeon, undefeated in his only two starts as a 2-year-old; Arnold Hanger's well-regarded Roman Flag and Dit, and John Hay Whitney's Calory, which chased E. R. Badley's Bimelech home in the Belmont Futurity last fall.

Bank Loans Here Exceed U. S. Average

18 Local Banks Made Loans of $37,666,754 In First Half of 1939

By Thomas M. Cahill

Generous and sound lending by local banks, loans of which compared most favorably with those of banks of the States, is shown by a report of the American Bankers Association covering this activity throughout the Nation during the first half of 1939. Eighteen local banks reported 36,132 new loans in that period, amounting to $37,666,754. Average size of these loans was $1,042 and average number per bank, 2,007.

These institutions granted 44,433 renewals for a total of $41,605,490, their average size being for $923 and average number per bank, 2,469. New mortgage loans numbered 933 and amounted to $4,770,605. Average amount of the latter was $5,153 and average number by bank, 52.

The survey reveals that the average size of local new loans was far ahead of that for a majority of the States, the same applying to renewals. Average number of new mortgage loans, including Federal Housing Administration mortgages, also compares more than favorably with that of other sections of the country.

C. L. U. Dinner

J. Alan Maphis, chairman of the fourth annual banquet of District of Columbia Chapter, Chartered Life Underwriters, announced yesterday that Earle W. Brailey, president of the National Chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters, would be guest of honor at the dinner next Friday evening, at the Carlton Hotel.

Mr. Brailey is general agent of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Cleveland, Ohio. He is well known as an insurance man and prominent in civic affairs in Cleveland. He will speak on "Aims and Activities of the Chartered Life Underwriter Movement."

American Institute of Banking.

Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will hold its annual public speaking contest in the chapter rooms, April 11, beginning at 8 p. m., prizes being the Bank Presidents' Cup and the right to represent the chapter in the A. P. Giannini national public speaking contest, at the institute's national convention.

All chapter members are eligible to compete for the bank presidents' trophy, which was presented to the chapter by presidents of Washington banks. The name of the winner will be engraved on the cup and he will receive possession of it for one year. The Giannini contest is limited to chapter members who to meet eligibility requirements, must be employed by an institution eligible to membership in the American Bankers Association; have three years' banking experience, and must be a holder of an institute standard certificate, or have completed at least four courses leading to an institute certificate prior to March 1, 1939. In addition, certain persons who have held high institute positions in the national organization are ineligible.

A single contest will be held by the chapter. In case the winner of the bank presidents' trophy is not eligible for the Giannini contest, the eligible contestant finishing highest will be Washington's representative. He will be entered in the district number 2 semi-final contest to be held in Scranton, Pa., between April 23 and May 15. Here the winners of contests from chapters in this geographical area will compete for the right to enter the final contest. The winner will be sent to the national convention of the institute in Boston, Mass., June 3-7, where he will compete against winners in seven other geographical areas for a total of $1,000 in prizes. All expenses of those who compete in the national final contest will be paid.

Each contestant will deliver a 6-minute prepared talk on the subject: "Chartered Banking—Its Right to Exist." In addition to this contestants will deliver, after 30 minutes preparation, a 3-minute extemporaneous talk on a subject to be assigned on the night of the contest.

Ahalt, the City Bank (East Capitol street branch); George M Rowzee, Lincoln National Bank, (Seventeenth and H street branch); A. Stanley Wolfe, Riggs National Bank (Dupont Circle branch).

Keystone Automobile Club

A contra-seasonal upward trend in volume of touring and travel information given as well as in the number of membership applications received, is reported by the KeystoneAutomobile Club for the first two months of the current year. The Keystone Club management attributes this showing to generally improved business conditions and to the concentration of travel in this hemisphere, and states that the outlook is for a continuation of this trend, barring any sudden and drastic changes in the national and international situation. That the present year should set a new record for the travel industry is the opinion expressed by the club's experts.

D. C. Building Dance

Cottonseed Oil

With speculative interest in cottonseed oil futures hamstrung by uncertainties created by war, the market dropped 6 to 15 points today.

Liquidation was encouraged by the reaction in lard and grains but total turnover summed up to only 27 contracts.

March closed 6.90, bid; May, 7.05; July, 7.08, bid; September, 7.13, bid; October, 7.12, bid.

Crude oil was quoted nominally at 6 cents a pound in the southeast and valley. Texas was 5¾ [illegible]

Wheat Prices Decline With Peace Outlook

Chicago, March 12 (AP).—Unsettled by persistent efforts of an armistice in Russian-Finnish hostilities, the wheat market turned definitely downward today and closed more than a cent a bushel lower.

The market lacked strength from the start, when reports of rain and snow in Kansas and Oklahoma, where moisture has been lacking, brought easier trading. There was no presure behind the initial selling, however, and prices steadied and trade was at a standstill while the pit buzzed with rumors of peace or Allied intervention in the Russian-Finnish war.

Peace Rumors Stem Spirited Rally; Sterling Loses 8¾ Cents; Scandinavian Bonds Strong

New York, March 12.—The more insistent chirping of peace doves rose above the clamor of European conflict long enough to affect stocks, bonds and commodities in various ways today. Shares were in the midst of a spirited rally when news came that Finland and Russia were close to an agreement to cease firing and while this may have gladdened humanity it gave speculative longs a case of jitters. Selling, largely concentrated in aircrafts, steels and some other descriptions which are beneficiaries of battle, sent the list back along the same road it had traveled earlier. Morning gains of 1 to 3 points in pivotals were quickly erased and the 100-stock indicator was barely on the plus side at the finish.

Sterling tumbled to new lows, ending with a loss of 8¾ cent and Canadian dollars descended to an 18 per cent discount against United States funds. Presumably the selling was based on the belief that composure of the Russo-Finnish conflict would strengthen the Soviet-German alliance and place new difficulties in the way of Allied objectives. French francs also broke sharply.

Air Stocks Slump After Jump

Aeronautical stocks were making new altitude records when the anti-aircraft peace barrage started and they came back to earth abruptly, the group as a whole ending with substantial losses. Several of the manufacturers had been figuring on some heavy sales to the Finns and their friends. Douglas which sold at 84 dropped back to close at 81⅞, off 1⅝. The group was well represented in the 66 new highs recorded during the session, including American Air Lines, West Air, United Air Lines, Eastern Air Lines and several others.

Motors attracted a good following in the morning as a result of estimates from unofficial sources on first quarter earnings. General Motors, for example, was represented as profiting to about the same extent as in the initial three months of 1937, a record period. Chrysler was ahead several points at 88¾, but closed at 88¾ up 1⅛. General Motors made a fractional net gain and Packard, the most active stock on the board for the session, lost an eighth. International Telephone, Commercial Solvents and Loft were other active stocks which turned in small gains.

American Telephone made a new high in the morning above 175, but its last price of 174¾ was ⅛ off. International Harvester was a strong feature with a rise of 1½ and Westinghouse, North American and Allied Chemical were others to finish on the plus side.

Oils were steady and a trifle higher on no better than ordinary dealings. The production and inventory statistics of the industry, announced this morning, show refinery gasoline stocks just under the 100,000,000-barrel level, an all-time peak and about 13,500,000 barrels more than a year ago.

Business News Favorable

Business news was featured by another batch of favorable corporation reports. On the whole, 1939 profits for most companies have exceeded estimates and the rate of earnings for the fourth quarter is being well maintained in the current period, according to most observers.

Wheat took a tumble with stocks on the peace rumors and closed 1 to 1⅜ cents lower. Cotton ended 10 points down to 4 up due to a complex and confusing market picture.

Rail Bonds in Demand

Strength and greater activity in many sections of the foreign list, particularly Scandinavian issues, and more interest in rail bonds at higher prices were among the features of bond dealings here today. Total turnover on the Stock Exchange increased from $6,212,000 on Monday to $7,522,000, a major part of the rise being in foreign and carrier obligations.

Finnish 6s of 1945 were the outstanding performer with an advance of 15 points to a new high at 79 as the market sought to evaluate political news filtering in from Europe. The same influences appeared to be at work in other issues, such as Norwegian and Danish bonds, where new 1940 highs also were recorded in several instances.

Business Is Favorable, But—Says Sloan

Overseas Sales, He Says, To Be Offset by Drop in Normal Foreign Trade

New York, March 12 (AP).—Alfred P. Sloane, jr., chairman of General Motors Corp., today described business as "satisfactory"—with definite restrictions.

"It is generally believed," he said in a letter to stockholders, "that business from war orders from abroad has not yet played an important part in the situation. Such business of this character as has been placed has been confined to a narrow area of industrial enterprise—automotive parts, airplanes and aviation engines being the most favored.

"Naturally, what the future will bring forward m this connection is anybody's guess. It will be largely influenced by the character that the war assumes as time passes.

U. S. Exports Reach Ten-Year Record

New York, March 12.—The value of merchandise exported from the United States in January rose to the highest monthly figure since early in 1930, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. Exports amounted to $360,000,000, as against $213,000,000 in January last year, an increase of 73.2 per cent.

Despite this gain in exports, shipments of merchandise, gold and silver to the United States by foreign countries, totaling 0484,000,000, were more than sufficient to pay for foreign purchases of American goods. Consequently, the large supply of foreign funds in the United States showed a further increase in January. This indicates that foreign countries are in a position to expand their purchases of American goods, and exports from the United States should continue to increase.

AlliedChemical Profit $9.50 For Past Year

By the Associated Press

New York, March 12.—The Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation today reported 1939 net income of $21,042,211, equal to $9.50 a share on the common stock. This compared with net income of $13,111,024, or $5.92 a share in 1938.

H. F. Atherton, president of the big chemical concern, reported that "the company's subsidiaries shared in the general business improvement" which began in the middle of the year and reached its peak in October.

Atherton also reported that an additional unit for

Louisville's 3-Year-Old Group Grows

Black Brummel Goes Five Furlongs at 1:06 Clip; Residue, Predicate at Oval

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., March 12.—Eligibles for the 1940 Kentucky Derby, despite the continuance of winter, are going through their paces in increasing numbers at Black Brummel, a strapping son of Churchill Downs and Douglas Park. Trainer Charley Ferguson of St. James, grandsire of Johnstown, the 1939 Derby winner, sent the big fellow stepping only 5 furlongs at 1:06 clip under restraint from the exercise boy. He took the first quarter in 0:26, three-eighths in 0:39 and the half in 0:52 1-5.

Other eligibles at the Downs are W. D. Covington's residue, A. C. Ernst's Alhalon, Friedberg and Axton's predicate, Mrs. Fred M. Graebner's St. Croix and Blue Flyer, L. W. Ulmer's good conduct is working but at Douglas Park.

The Louisville nominee colonies are increasing daily with arrivals from winter tracks. Latest and most important of the units checking in from New Orleans is that of Frank P. Letellier, who marshaled in 14 head to add to 13 which had been here since early February.

Track Supt. Tom Young at the Downs predicted the number of horses to be available for the spring meeting will far outstrip that of 1939, when 1,385 were registered.

Late advice from Roy Waldron is that he is shipping the fashionable Milky Way Stable, headed by the Derby nominees Gallahadion, Tough Hombre, Chatted, Gold Teddy and Valtite, here from Santa Anita on April 1. The Public Stable, trained by Robert McGarvey, is expected this week-end.

POST LUCK, a forward contender, opened up a commanding lead entering the stretch while bearing out, but weakened and was under extreme pressure to maintain her lead. COME HOME dropped back rounding the turn, but slipped through on the inside entering the stretch, closed gamely and dead heated DELIUS for the place. The latter, in the thick of contention all the way, held on well in the final drive. WHITE TOPPER was going strong at the finish. KNIGHT GALLANT broke down approaching the quarter mile pole while leading the field. PERSUASIVE, in tight quarters leaving the backstretch, stumbled and fell.

RANGE DUST, prominent and on the outside all the way, responded with determination to pressure in the final furlong and outlasted his opposition in the final drive. DINNER JACKET, stealing through on the inside the last 3 furlongs, came with a belated rush through the stretch. FOXY MAUDE, hustled to the front, set a fast pace, but faltered when the real test came. The others had no mishaps.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOUBLE CALL, $3.80, $3.00, $2.70; GENERAL JACK (entry) $5.10, $3.50; ZACATINE, $4.40.

DOUBLE CALL began fast, opened up a good lead in the first quarter mile, but was briskly ridden the remainder of the trip to maintain his advantage. GENERAL JACK, nearest in pursuit of the leader throughout, continued gamely to outlast ZACATINE in the final drive. ZACATINE, on the inside all the way, had no mishaps. EASY BLEND was eased up the last 70 yards.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:33½. Off 3:34. Winner, W. J. McCune's ch. f. (4), by Flying Heels—Lady Mital. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:43⅗.

Two dollar mutuels paid—BLARE, $14.20, $4.20, $3.00; MAETRAN, $3.30, $2.60; DOG HOUSE, $3.40.

BLARE, showing unusual speed, opened up a big lead roundins the first turn under steadying restraint, had something in reserve when placed to a drive and held his opposition safe at the end. MAETRAN, quickest to begin, went in nearest pursuit of the leader throughout while under intermittent punishment, but could never get up. DOG HOUSE finished strong through the stretch and was wearing the leaders down.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Tallahassee. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:00. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CALEXICO, $3.40, $2.50, $2.30; VISIGOTH, $3.00, $2.60; NAPPER TANDY, $3.30.

CALEXICO, displaying high speed, raced FLOAT AWAY into submission in the early stages, and drew out entering the stretch, but was ridden out briskly to the finish. VISIGOTH, outrun the first half mile, gained steadily thereafter on the outside, but could not overtake the winner. NAPPER TANDY, a forward factor throughout, held on well in the final drive. COMENDADOR II received a weird ride.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:25. Off 4:25½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MUCHO GUSTO, $4.30, $3.50, $2.90; PICCOLO, $6.00, $4.30; OFF GUARD, $4.30.

MUCHO GUSTO, rated in front in the early stages, was given a breather rounding the lower turn while saving ground and, responding with determination to punishment, outlasted PICCOLO. The latter, taken back the first half mile, moved up menacingly on the outside leaving the backstretch and took a half length lead, but faltered when the real test came. OFF GUARD, well up and saving ground the entire trip, just lasted long enough to withstand HIGH FIDELITY'S bid. The latter came from far back in the last quarter mile.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Delray. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:54. Off 4:54½. Winner, W. J. Two dollar mutuels paid—SASSY LADY, $5.00, $4.00, $2.90; BALMY SPRING, $11.10, $3.20; SUN INPLAY, $3.40.

SASSY LADY raced off the early pace, moved up with determination on the outside of the leader midway around the lower turn and drew out into a winning lead. BALMY SPRING set a fast pace from the start, but was no match for the winner. SUN INPLAY, rated in the opening 3 furlongs, refused to extend himself when placed to pressure, yet outlasted RIFTED CLOUDS. The latter saved much ground and had no mishaps.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:23. Off 5:23. Winner, E. R. Morris' br. g. BEAU INSCO in close attendance of the pace and saving ground all the way, drew out entering the stretch, but faltered and just lasted. CONRAD MANN, a trailer in the early running came with a belated rush in the last quarter mile and would have won in a few more strides. THE QUEEN held on tenaciously through the stretch to outlast BAILIWICK. The latter saved much ground turning into the stretch, but faltered right at the end.

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al: Bimelech is the shortest priced future book favorite in the history of the Kentucky Derby, writes James J. Carroll, who opened the horse at 3 to 1 and 1 to 2. Equipoise, 4 to 1 favorite in 1931, failed to start and Twenty Grand bagged the race. Reigh Count was opened at 4 to 1 for the Derby in 1928 and won the race, paying $6.12 in the mutuels. Damask was opened at 4 to 1 in 1920 and finished fourth. Eternal, 4 to 1 future book favorite in 1919, landed in tenth place. Gallant Fox, winner in 1930, opened at 10 to 1 and paid $4.38 in the mutuels. Morvich, future book favorite at 5 to 1 won in 1922 and paid 4.40 in the mutuels. Ten of the last 21 post favorites have scored in the Derby. Cavalcade, winner of the 1934 Derby, opened at 20 to 1 in the futures and paid $5.00 in the mutuels. The future bookies made Marta Hari, a filly, the favorite that year. The filly finished fourth. Chance Sun, non-starter, was the future book favorite over Omaha in 1935. Omaha opened at 8 to 1 and paid $10 the day of the race. War Admiral, winner in 1937, opened at 12 to 1 and paid $5.20. Pompoon, 8 to 1 book favorite, landed second to War Admiral. El Chico, 6 to 1 future book favorite last year, didn't get anything the day of the race. Johnstown, the winner of the 1939 classic, was listed at 12 to 1 in the future books, but Johnstown was the post favorite the afternoon of the race. It is amazing how loyal Art Brown's listeners are to him. For instance here's two entries from O. C. F., of Northeast: "This is Ma Brown's boy, Art, who has sunshine in his heart; Rain or shine he's standing by, To chase the clouds out of your sky." On the same sheet of paper he writes: "Once upon a time they said, Art Brown slept in a cactus bed; some of the needles entered his head; Perhaps that's why his face is red." One Benningite writes: Art Brown is leading a community singing at the Capitol Theater. That's the first time he ever got a call in front in his life."

BILL.

First race—Fantasama appears the best suited of the juveniles gathered for the day's opener. Needs only the right handling. Jimson Belle is reported to have speed and could be dangerous. Philomel probably will be in the money circle.

Second race—Rhett, the "Gone With The Wind"-hunch, may take down the main money in this group. Berwyn and Fight On are fit and ready. This pair will battle it out if Rhett gets caught in a blockade.

Third race—Woodsia likes this track. Conditions otherwise seem ideal and I see no reason for mistakes. Boy Plunger belongs with this kind and will have a say in the purse distribution. She's Right for third money.

Fourth race—Night Tide gets the call in this rather open affair. I'm going to string along. Billie Bee has a good race at the other track to recommend him. Censor cannot be placed too far out of it.

Fifth race — Ploughshare has demonstrated his ability and fits snuggly in the company gathered for this event. Sundodger should go well and may be the one to give the fellow keen contention. Ship Biscuit isn't exactly Seabiscuit but is due respect.

Six race—Strident and Felsun are a tight fit in this event. Either can take the main money. I prefer them in the order named. Pumpgun has plenty of punch and should be right in the serious running at the close.

Seventh race—Blue Leona is right up to tops, I'm told, and ready to turn back this brand of opposition. Star of Dondra and Ten O' Hearts for the place and show awards.

Eighth race—Filandro has all the carmarks of a winning favorite. Looks like the best spot of the program. Scrappy Miss and Deduce should be along in time to make money appearances.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Chainwick, Lady Sara and Exhort.

Old Pal to Miss Grand National

London, March 12 (AP). — New favorites for the April 5 running of the Grand National Steeplechase to the fore today as Lady Lindsay's 7-year-old jumper, Old Pal, was scratched.

Bracketed at the head of the list in a callover of odds at the Victoria Club were Dorothy Paget's Kilstar and Sir Alexander Maguire's Sterling Duke, at 100 to 7. While the previous favorite, Mrs. I. Strang's the Professor II, dropped out of the betting, Tom Westhead's Symaethis held second place at 100 to 6, with Lieut. Col. H. E. Joisey's Venturesome Knight third at 1 8to 1.

Flinchum Is Signed For Year by Woolford

Kansas City, March 12 (AP).—Herbert M. Woold's Woolford Farm has signed Jack Flinchum, the Nation's leading jockey of 1940, to a one-year contract, effective April 24.

The 19-year-old Hialeach riding champion, who has averaged a winner a day at Miami's Tropical Park, probably will ride Woolf's leading nominee in the Kentucky Derby.

Bimelech Is Missing From Derby Preview Slated at Jamaica

By the Associated Press

New York, March 12.—Forty-four 3-year olds, including just about all the top candidates for the year's stake honors except Bimelech, have been nominated for the $20,000 Wood Memorial at Jamaica, which annually is regarded as the leading test for the Kentucky Derby. Date for the race has not been set yet.

Run a week before the Derby, this mile-and-70-yard fixture tops the Jamaica Spring meeting, which also includes the Paumonk, Jamaica and Excelsior handicaps.

Andy K. Millsdale stable's Jack High colt, heads the list of eligibles. Also entered are C. V. Whitney's Carrier Pigeon, undefeated in his only two starts as a 2-year-old; Arnold Hanger's well-regarded Roman Flag and Dit, and John Hay Whitney's Calory, which chased E. R. Badley's Bimelech home in the Belmont Futurity last fall.

Bank Loans Here Exceed U. S. Average

18 Local Banks Made Loans of $37,666,754 In First Half of 1939

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Generous and sound lending by local banks, loans of which compared most favorably with those of banks of the States, is shown by a report of the American Bankers Association covering this activity throughout the Nation during the first half of 1939. Eighteen local banks reported 36,132 new loans in that period, amounting to $37,666,754. Average size of these loans was $1,042 and average number per bank, 2,007.

These institutions granted 44,433 renewals for a total of $41,605,490, their average size being for $923 and average number per bank, 2,469. New mortgage loans numbered 933 and amounted to $4,770,605. Average amount of the latter was $5,153 and average number by bank, 52.

The survey reveals that the average size of local new loans was far ahead of that for a majority of the States, the same applying to renewals. Average number of new mortgage loans, including Federal Housing Administration mortgages, also compares more than favorably with that of other sections of the country.

All chapter members are eligible to compete for the bank presidents' trophy, which was presented to the chapter by presidents of Washington banks. The name of the winner will be engraved on the cup and he will receive possession of it for one year. In addition, certain persons who have held high institute positions in the national organization are ineligible.

Keystone Automobile Club

A contra-seasonal upward trend in volume of touring and travel information given as well as in the number of membership applications received, is reported by the KeystoneAutomobile Club for the first two months of the current year. The Keystone Club management attributes this showing to generally improved business conditions and to the concentration of travel in this hemisphere, and states that the outlook is for a continuation of this trend, barring any sudden and drastic changes in the national and international situation. That the present year should set a new record for the travel industry is the opinion expressed by the club's experts.

D. C. Building Dance

Cottonseed Oil

With speculative interest in cottonseed oil futures hamstrung by uncertainties created by war, the market dropped 6 to 15 points today.

Liquidation was encouraged by the recession in lard and grains but total turnover summed up to only 27 contracts.

March closed 6.90, bid; May, 7.03; July, 7.08, bid; September, 7.13, bid; October, 7.12, bid.

Wheat Prices Decline With Peace Outlook

Chicago, March 12 (AP).—Unsettled by persistent efforts of an armistice in Russian-Finnish hostilities, the wheat market turned definitely downward today and closed more than a cent a bushel lower.

The market lacked strength from the start, when reports of rain and snow in Kansas and Oklahoma, where moisture has been lacking, brought easier trading. There was no presure behind the initial selling, however, and prices steadied and trade was at a standstill while the pit buzzed with rumors of peace or Allied intervention in the Russian-Finnish war.

Peace Rumors Stem Spirited Rally; Sterling Loses 8¾ Cents; Scandinavian Bonds Strong

New York, March 12.—The more insistent chirping of peace doves rose above the clamor of European conflict long enough to affect stocks, bonds and commodities in various ways today. Shares were in the midst of a spirited rally when news came that Finland and Russia were close to an agreement to cease firing and while this may have gladdened humanity it gave speculative longs a case of jitters. Selling, largely concentrated in aircrafts, steels and some other descriptions which are beneficiaries of battle, sent the list back along the same road it had traveled earlier. Morning gains of 1 to 3 points in pivotals were quickly erased and the 100-stock indicator was barely on the plus side at the finish.

An encouraging aspect was the substantial volume, not only on the decline but during the advance.

Sterling tumbled to new lows, ending with a loss of 8¾ cent and Canadian dollars descended to an 18 per cent discount against United States funds. Presumably the selling was based on the belief that composure of the Russo-Finnish conflict would strengthen the Soviet-German alliance and place new difficulties in the way of Allied objectives. French francs also broke sharply.

Air Stocks Slump After Jump

Aeronautical stocks were making new altitude records when the anti-aircraft peace barrage started and they came back to earth abruptly, the group as a whole ending with substantial losses. Several of the manufacturers had been figuring on some heavy sales to the Finns and their friends. Douglas which sold at 84 dropped back to close at 81⅞, off 1⅛. The group was well represented in the 66 new highs recorded during the session, including American Air Lines, West Air, United Air Lines, Eastern Air Lines and several others.

Motors attracted a good following in the morning as a result of estimates from unofficial sources on first quarter earnings. General Motors, for example, was represented as profiting to about the same extent as in the initial three months of 1937, a record period. Chrysler was ahead several points at 88¾, but closed at 86¾ up 1⅛. General Motors made a fractional net gain and Packard, the most active stock on the board for the session, lost an eighth. International Telephone, Commercial Solvents and Loft were other active stocks which turned in small gains.

American Telephone made a new high in the morning above 175, but its last price of 174¾ was ⅛ off. International Harvester was a strong feature with a rise of 1½ and Westinghouse, North American and Allied Chemical were others to finish on the plus side.

Oils were steady and a trifle higher on no better than ordinary dealings. The production and inventory statistics of the industry, announced this morning, show refinery gasoline stocks just under the 100,000,000-barrel level, an all-time peak and about 13,500,000 barrels more than a year ago.

Business News Favorable

Business news was featured by another batch of favorable corporation reports. On the whole, 1939 profits for most companies have exceeded estimates and the rate of earnings for the fourth quarter is being well maintained in the current period, according to most observers.

Wheat took a tumble with stocks on the peace rumors and closed 1 to 1⅜ cents lower. Cotton ended 10 points down to 4 up due to a complex and confusing market picture.

Rail Bonds in Demand

Strength and greater activity in many sections of the foreign list, particularly Scandinavian issues, and more interest in rail bonds at higher prices were among the features of bond dealings here today. Total turnover on the Stock Exchange increased from $6,212,000 on Monday to $7,522,000, a major part of the rise being in foreign and carrier obligations.

Finnish 6s of 1945 were the outstanding performer with an advance of 15 points to a new high at 70 as the market sought to evaluate political news filtering in from Europe. The same influences appeared to be at work in other issues, such as Norwegian and Danish bonds, where new 1940 highs also were recorded in several instances.

Business Is Favorable, But-Says Sloan

Overseas Sales, He Says, To Be Offset by Drop in Normal Foreign Trade

New York, March 12 (AP).—Alfred P. Sloane, jr., chairman of General Motors Corp., today described business as "satisfactory"—with definite restrictions.

"It is generally believed," he said in a letter to stockholders, "that business from war orders from abroad has not yet played an important part in the situation. Such business of this character as has been placed has been confined to a narrow area of industrial enterprise—automotive parts, airplanes and aviation engines being the most favored.

"Naturally, what the future will bring forward in this connection is anybody's guess. It will be largely influenced by the character that the war assumes as time passes.

Washington Business 1% Above Normal

New York, March 11.—Business conditions in Washington as of March 1 stood at 1 per cent above normal, representing a decrease of 3 per cent from the standing of February 1, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the business survey department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorance, Inc., New York and Detroit national advertising concern. On March 1, 1939, the city's business index stood at 3 per cent below normal.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Mrs. H. E. S., of Warrenton, Va., needs help desperately, she says.

"I have been reading your bridge column for some time, so when I desperately need help I naturally turn to you," her letter begins.

"We were playing Culbertson. I was South and dealt this hand. I will give the bidding, which I am sure is wrong, for it looks to me as if the hand should have been played at seven no trump. Please tell me where I was wrong.

"The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	2 ♠	2 NT.	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 NT.	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

"My five no-trump bid," writes Mrs. H. E. S., "was an attempt to throw three aces. The six hearts was a rebid, trying to find out about the king."

Our friend from Warrenton might have used the Blackwood slam convention to good advantage with this hand. Over her partner's raise to four clubs, she could say four no trump, asking for the number of aces held. North would reply with five diamonds, indicating one ace. South could then bid five no trump asking for kings, and North would respond with six diamonds, showing one king. South could proceed to seven clubs as the safest grand slam, for there is no definite assurance whether the king is the king of hearts or spades. With four clubs indicated in the North hand, declarer can hope to trump out the heart suit if the king is missing—an alternative that would not be possible at no trump.

North should probably double West's two spades instead of bidding no trump; if the vulnerability were right, the penalty might be more profitable than the grand slam. South, with a two-suiter, probably would not leave the double in, in which case the partners could continue bidding along the lines suggested to the grand slam.

Today's Radio Highlights

Helpful Harry, and that's his name when he's not called Danny Dee, starts a novel program of Household Hints. A five-minute post-breakfast show, hitting the air twice a week over 62 stations, this one promises to be a disposition setter-upper—WRC, 9:55 a. m.

Presidential candidate of the Surprise Party, Gracie Allen will undoubtedly report on her week-end Washington visit—WJSV, 7:30 p. m.

Sheep and Goats Club: A new program. An all-Negro broadcast before an all-Negro studio audience. The "Sheep" are the psalm-singers and spirituals chanters; the "Goats" are the boogie-woogie hep-cats. Richard Huey is master-of-ceremonies and Geraldine Garrick, of "John Henry" radio note, is director—WOL, 8 p. m.

Edith Wharton's short story, "Confession" affords Charles Boyer an unusual radio drama—WRC, 8 p. m.

Brian Aherne and Erin O'Brien-Moore play Franz Werfel's "Juarez and Maximillian," produced on the stage by the Theater Guild in 1926 with a notable cast. The casting brings to mind Mr. Aherne's success as the puppet emperor in "Juarez" on the screen with Paul Muni—WJSV, 9 p. m.

North of the Border they think Percy Faith's music is pretty elegant and South of the Great Lakes it's thought of, by some, as highly as Andre Kostelanetz'—WOL, 9:30 p. m.

Edwin Arthur Hall is the newest member of the House of Representatives. Bill McCune and his boys play the Congressman's favorite tune—WOL, 10 p. m.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Amos and Andy will be 12 years old on March 19. The team was born on that date in 1928 and in a young industry that makes them the gray-beards of all acts.

The story of Amos 'n' Andy goes back beyond this March 19th anniversary for the association of Gosden (Amos) and Correll (Andy) began in Durham, N. C. (the home of our own Lee Vickers) in August, 1919, when they were producing amateur minstrel productions for a Chicago agency. . .who was the lady, Mr. Bones?

But since they've been Amos 'n' Andy they've sat in a radio studio twice a day, five days a week, for 12 years and have created an illusion of a Harlem as gay and whimsical as any place on earth.

After they met up in Durham they first went on the air as a radio team in New Orleans in 1920 where an amateur operator asked them to help in a "broadcast" experiment.

They first sang as a team of regular artists via WEBH, Chicago, in March, 1925. They received their first salaries as a sustaining feature via WGN, Chicago, in 1925. In 1926, they were Sam 'N' Henry. Then in 1928 on WMAQ they became Amos 'n' Andy.

The twice a day business in a studio is because they've always done one broadcast for listeners in the East at 7 p. m. and a rebroadcast for listeners in the West at 11 p. m.

We know several eminent gentlemen around town who still refuse to answer their telephone between 7 and 7:15 because they're engrossed in Amos 'n' Andy and the Kingfish.

Well, buzz me, Miss Blue and remind me to send the gentlemen in question a bouquet on March 19. Twelve years in radio is a long, long time.

NUTS AND JOLTS

Another Nero Wolfe Story
BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

It was a large room, full of noise, cookery smells and activity. Without coming to a stop I inquired above the noise, "Did a cat come in here?"

And so there was a murder. Percy Ludlow, a pupil, was killed in Miltan's fencing studio. Miltan's wife was in the building, as were the two Balkan girls, Carla Lovchen and Neya Tormic. Others included Nat Driscoll, who had accused Neya of stealing his diamonds, only to find that his secrtary had taken them to the jewler. And, of all people, Archie Giidwin, Nero Wolfe's confidential secretary was there, too. After Carla had asked Wolfe's help for Neya, he had sent Archie to help on the diamond situation and also to find out something about a mysterious paper hidden in one of Wolfe's books by Carla. A scream brought everyone in Miltan's studio to the spot where Ludlow's body showed he had been killed with a fencing epee with a col de mort fastened on its tip to insure its deadliness. Mrs. Miltan called the police while Archie guarded the front door.

CHAPTER 8

THE RADIO FLATFOOT was there, holding his tongue between his teeth while he wrote down names in a notebook. The precinct dick spoke with him a moment and then started in on Mrs. Miltan. I sidled off and made myself unobtrusive alongside the coat rack, resisting a temptation to edge around and get in a few words of advice to the Montenegrin females before the homicide squad arrived, which was when the real fun would start. I decided not to take a chance on starting a mental process even in a precinct man. The clients and employes were scattered all around the office, some sitting, some standing, with no sound coming from them except an occasional muttering. While I was making the round of their faces, without any real expectation of seeing anything interesting or significant, I suddenly saw something right in front of my eyes that struck me as being both interesting and significant. My coat was there on the rack where I had left it, so close my elbow was touching it, and what I saw was that the flap of the left-hand pocket had been pushed inside and the pocket was gaping on account of something in it. That was wrong. I didn't patronize the kind of tailors Percy Ludlow had, but I was born neat and I don't go around with my pocket flaps pushed in; and besides, that pocket had been empty.

My hand had started for it instinctively, to reach in for a feel, but I caught the impulse in time and stopped it. I looked around, but as far as I could see no one had me under special observation, either furtive or open. There was no time for a prolonged test of that nature, for the homicide squad would be busting in any minute, maybe less than a minute, and once they arrived the right of self-determination wouldn't stand a chance.

I reached up and took the hat and coat from the rack and started for the hall door, and had taken three steps when I was halted by a loud growl from behind:

"Hey, you, where you going?"

I turned and spoke loudly but not offensively to the suspicious glare from the precinct dick. "The management is not responsible for hats and coats, and these are mine. Therell' be a lot of company coming and I'd prefer to put them in a locker."

I MOVED as I spoke, and sailed on through the door. There was one chance in three that he would actually abandon Mrs. Miltan and take after me, but he didn't. In the hall I didn't even glance toward the left, where the watchdog stood at the entrance, knowing that it was out of the question to bluff a passage to freedom. Instead I turned right, and it was only five steps to a narrow door I had noticed there. I opened it and saw an uncarpeted wooden stair going down. There was a light switch just inside, but without flipping it on I shut the door behind me and it was pitch-dark, black. With my pencil flashlight for a guide, I descended to the bottom of the stair, quietly but without wasting any time. Playing the light around, I saw that I was in a large low-ceilinged room lined with shelves and with stacks of cartons and shipping cases occupying the middle floor space. I stepped around them and headed for the rear, where I could see the dim rectangles of two windows a few feet apart. I must have been a little on edge, because I stood stiff and motionless and stopped breathing when the beam of my light, directed toward the floor, showed me something sticking out from behind a pile of cartons that I wasn't expecting to see. It was the toe of a man's shoe, and it was obvious from its position and appearance that there was a foot in it and the foot's owner was standing on it. I kept the light on it, steady, and in a few seconds I breathed, moved the light upwards, and put my right hand inside my coat and out again. Then I said out loud but not too loud:

"Don't move. I'm aiming a gun at where you are and I'm nervous. If your hands are empty stick them out beyond the edge. If they're not empty——"

A sound came from behind the cartons that was something between a moan and a squeal. I let my right hand fall and stepped forward with a grunt of disgust and put the light on him, where he was flattened against the pile of cartons.

He moaned, "I seen him." His eyes were still rolling. "I tell you I done seen him."

"So did I seen him. Look here, Arthur, I have no time to waste arguing with you about primitive superstitions. What are you going to do, stay here and moan?"

"I ain't going back up there—don't you try it—don't you touch me, I'm telling you—"

"Okay." I laid the light on a carton, returned the pistol to my holster and put on my coat and hat. Then I retrieved the light. "I'm going out the back way to see that no one escapes. The best thing you can do is stay right where you are."

"I mean don't I know it," he groaned.

"Fine. Have you got the key for that door?"

"Yes, sir."

"Any door in the fence?"

"No, sir."

OVERHEAD, namely on the floor of the office directly above, I heard the tread of dozens of heavy shoes on heavy feet. The company had come. I even thought I detected the sound of Inspector Cramer's No. 12's. As I moved, I had a piece of luck; the beam of my light passed over a boy's-size stepladder standing by the shelves. I went for it, arranged for a diversion by warning Arthur to yell for help if he heard anyone else coming down, found the rear door and unbolted it, and skipped through with the stepladder.

The court was fairly large, maybe 30x40, and paved with concrete, and the solid board fence was 2 feet over my head. There was plenty of light from the windows of the buildings. I trotted across to the rear, leaned the ladder against the fence, mounted and looked over into the adjoining court. It was the same size as the one I was in, with a miscellaneous clutter of vague objects scattered around and one object not so vague: a bulky person dressed in white, including an apron and a chef's cap, apparently doing breathing exercises from the way he stood there and puffed. Ten feet back of him a blaze of light came from a door standing open.

I grabbed the top of the fence and pulled myself up and perched there, teetering. At the noise he looked up, startled, but before he could start screeching I demanded:

"Did you see that cat?"

"What cat?"

"My wife's cat. A yellow, long-haired fiend. It got loose and jumped out a window and climbed this fence. If you—" I lost my balance and toppled over and landed flat on the concrete on his side. As I picked myself up I cussed appropriately. "If I find the little darling I'll strangle the damn thing. If you've been standing here you must have seen it."

"You must have. Okay, then you didn't, but it came here. It must have smelled the grub in the restaurant——"

I was on my way and kept going. He started after me, but with slow acceleration, so I went through the open door unimpeded. It was a large room, full of noise, cookery smells and activity. Without coming to a stop I inquired above the noise, "Did a cat come in here?" They stared at me and a couple shook their heads. There was one with a loaded tray, in waiter's uniform, headed for a swinging door, and I got on his heels and followed him through. At the other end of a pantry corridor another swinging door let us into the restaurant proper—purple and yellow leather, gleaming chromium, gleaming white table—with waiters fussing around waiting for the evening's customers. One of them blocked me and I snapped at him, "Catching a cat," and went on around. In the foyer the sucker usher gave me an astonished look and the hat-check girl started for me instinctively, but I merely repeated, "Catching a cat," and kept going, on through two more doors and then up to the sidewalk.
